48 Counted Dead in Big Snowstorm

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Brisk, cold winds blew snow along the shores of the Great Lakes Saturday, complicating the tremendous task of clearing drifted streets and roads.

The winds churned up snow that had fallen since Thursday in the northeastern quarter of the nation. The big fall was ended but flurries and squalls persisted near Lakes Erie and Ontario and higher elevations in the Appalachians.

The count of dead in the storm rose to 48, including 17 in Michigan, 19 in Ohio, 5 in Pennsylvania, 3 in New York and 4 in West Virginia.

Plows chugged and charged into drifts, freeing thousands of motorists who had been marooned by snowfall that measured up to three feet in depth.

A plane landed at Cleveland's Hopkins Airport, the fist to touch down there in more than 32 hours. That signalled the resumption of operations there.

The Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. labored to restore power to thousands of homes that had been blacked out by fallen lines.

A fire broke out in the New Ohio Hotel in Fostiria, Ohio, early Saturday. It drove 100 persons—25 or more of them stranded travelers—out into freezing weather. Only one injury was reported.

106 Dead, 1,000 Ill Left in Wake Of London Fog

By RAYMOND E. PALMER

LONDON (AP) —For the first time in five days Londoners awoke Saturday to clear skies and air free of fog and smog.

The smog left 106 persons dead and more than 1,000 hospitalized with chest and heart ailments. The cost of the four-day pall of dirt and darkness was expected to reach 12 million pounds ($33.6 million) and possibly as high as 20 million pounds ($56 million).

British European Airways lost more than 160,000 pounds ($448,000). The airline canceled more than 300 flights. Other airlines were also affected by the closing of London Airport for three days, 13 hours.

A hundred ships were waiting to get into London Docks, many of them since Tuesday. Another 22 vessels have been waiting just as long to get out. Lloyds, the big shipping insurers, estimated the waiting would produce a massive bill.

Scotland Yard has still to work out the cost of the spate of robberies which made London a bandits' delight. With practically everyone wearing masks and thick fog to cover their tracks, the crooks staged a series of smash-and-grab raids, bank thefts and similar crimes.

Even if fog returns to London, the experts said, it will not bring back the abnormally high proportions of sulphur oxides that made the smog so unhealthy.

The new clothing embodies the "Thermalibrium" concept, which thermostatically controls the temperature and humidity of the uniform by mechanical air conditioning and dehumidifying equipment, using a power source integral with the clothing. Mother Strangles Her Three Children; Attempts Suicide

By DICK MOORE

A 32-year old attractive brunet strangled her three young children in their beds Saturday afternoon at 122 Cornell St., Widefield, and then attempted to take her own life by slashing her wrists with a butcher knife, the sheriff's office reported.

Opal Beistle was rushed to St. Francis Hospital by E and E Ambulance where her condition was reported as fairly good late Saturday night.

Deputy Sheriff Frank P. Ripley said the three children, Jill Elizabeth, 1, Joy Michell, 6 and Donald Michael, 7 , were all dead in their beds when officers arrived.

Both girls were in the same room in the three-bedroom brick-and-wood house and the boy was in another room. The bodies of the girls were cold but that of the boy was warm, Ripley said.

Doctor Raoul Urich, deputy county coroner, reported that the girls had probably died at 12:30 p.m. and the boy several hours later.

Capt. Donald V. Beistle, 34, told authorities he walked into his house at 5:30 after returning from a three - day trip to Amarillo, Tex. and saw his wife standing at the kitchen sink cutting her wrist with a butcher knife.

"I jerked the knife from her hand and tried to stop the bleeding, and then a sudden thought occurred to me. 'Where are the children?' I shouted.

"She made no reply but gestured with her arm toward the bedroom. I rushed into the room and found the baby dead in its crib and my other daughter dead in her bed nearby. I ran to my son's room and also found him dead in his bed.

"They appeared as if they were strangled," he said.

Urich said that the slim, small

CEA Wants 'Professional Negotiations' for Teachers

"Professional negotiation" was endorsed by the 600 delegates of the Colorado Education Association (CEA) in a final meeting Saturday morning at the Broadmoor International Center.

The issue was at the top of the list of resolutions passed by the delegates assembly. It drew a sharp distinction, however, between the teacher's situation and that of an industrial employe.

"Under no circumstances should the resolution of differences between professional associations and boards of education be sought through channels set up for handling industrial disputes.

"Industrial disputes conciliation machinery, which assumes a conflict of interest and a diversity of purpose between persons and groups, is not appropriate to professional negotiations in public education," the resolution stated.

The resolution, adopted by the National Education Association (NEA) this year, insists on the right for teachers to participate with school boards in determination of policies which include salary and other conditions of professional service."

The CEA is giving consideration to securing legislation in the Colorado General Assembly to provide specifically for professional negotiations procedures for teachers, and opposes all legislation dealing with collective bargaining per se for teachers.

"The teacher's situation is completely unlike that of an industrial employee. A board of education is not a private employer, and a teacher is not a private employee.

"Both are public servants. Both are committed to serve the common, indivisible interest of all persons and groups in the community in the best possible education for their children.

"Teachers and boards of education can perform their indispensable functions only if they act in terms of their identity of purpose in carrying out this commitment," the resolution stated.

While the professional negotiations issue was primarily a matter of record for the CEA delegates assembly, 35 resolutions

CEA Proposes Doubling of School Funds

The Colorado Education Association Saturday urged the legislature to double its appropriation for public schools.

The CEA's policy-making Delegate Assembly endorsed resolutions asking an increase in school aid from $60 million to more than $120 million a year.

One of the major resolutions called for increasing state aid for classroom units (25 pupils or more) from $5,200 to $10,000, with the state picking up the entire cost of the increase. State and school districts now share the cost.

The delegates also asked for additional support money for counseling programs, state therapists, psychologists and librarians.

The group acted despite a warning by Rep. Wayne Knox, D-Denver, that the proposal would triple state income taxes.

Quick Action By Officers Saves Baby

Quick action by two state patrolman was credited by a local doctor with saving the life of a 8-month-old baby suffering from pneumonia, which had stopped breathing, Saturday morning.

Patrolman Cyprian Rodden reported that he and Sgt. William Stoker were conversing at Fontanero Street and Cooper Avenue at 9:45 a.m. when Mr. and Mrs. Franklin J. Foote, 2020½ N. Cooper Ave., rushed to their patrol car.

"My Baby is dead, he has stopped breathing," Mrs. Franklin cried.

Rodden said he rushed to the Foote car where the father had started mouth - to - mouth respiration.

"I turned the baby on his back and started mouth-to-mouth respiration while Sgt. Stoker assisted by applying chest pressure," Rodden said.

"When the baby showed signs of returning life, I placed him in the patrol car and rushed him to Penrose Hospital while the father continued mouth - to - mouth respiration.

"When we arrived at the hospital the baby started to breath and opened his eyes," Rodden said.

The infant was taken to the emergency room of the hospital where oxygen was administered.

Mrs. Laura Battin Overcome by Blaze In Apartment

Mrs. Laura Battin, 34, a records clerk and dispatcher for the El Paso County Sheriff's Office, died early Saturday in a fire at her basement apartment, 503 N. Wahsatch Ave.

Dr. Raoul Urich, El Paso County coroner, said Mrs. Battin was asphyxiated by smoke.

Fire department officials said Mrs. Battin, who was alone in her apartment at the time of the blaze, was apparently struggling to reach a window. Her body was found slumped a few feet from the window.

Firemen said the fire apparently started in a couch, possibly by a cigaret.

Neighbors Are Stunned About Slaying of Children

By SHIRLEY COCHRAN

Altho apparently no one in the area knew the Beistle family of five, their reaction to the tragedy, which occurred in the brick house midway in the block, was evident.

Several hours after the bodies of the three small children had been removed to Swan Mortuary, neighbors still huddled together in living rooms trying to weave their individual knowlege of the mother into a pattern which might account for the brutal slaying.

It was as tho the stunned neighbors perhaps believed such verbal exchange and recall would somehow explain how a mother could snuff out the lives of her three children.

But the neighbors had small knowledge about the mother and children who had lived in their very midst.

The Beistle family had moved into the neighborhood only recently.

"If only we had known that she was so unhappy and desperate, maybe we could have helped", said one neighbor. "She just stayed to herself and we just let it go that way."

Another said, "We really know nothing about the family. They just didn't mingle."

"We sometimes noticed the mother taking the two children to school but that was about all we saw of them," said another.

Chaplain Daryl C. Vanderburgh, of Ft. Carson, told the Gazette Telegraph he spent most of the evening with Capt. Donald V. Beistle, father of the three slain children.

Vanderburgh said he was asked to come to the Beistel home just

Crack Red Troops Still In Cuba, Report Discloses

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — (Special) — The latest Defense Department estimate of Russia's military capability in Cuba shows clearly how close the U.S. came to another Pearl Harbor.

This suppressed report reveals that the Soviets, in addition to the highly-publicized missiles and IL-28 bombers, were able to land in Cuba virtually undetected between 28,000 and 33,000 troops, including an entire motorized Russian division with supporting units.

This "elite" guard division, consisting of 16,000 to 18,000 troops, is still in Cuba. Its removal, together with other Soviet military personnel, is the main unpublicized issue still unresolved in the U.S.-Russian negotiations.

The crack Soviet division, located in strategic areas on the island, was poised with Castro's 75,000 regular troops and 125,000 militia to meet a U.S. invasion of Cuba.

Its main striking power centers around four tank and four missile battalions. Each of the tank battalions is comprised of 150 light, medium and heavy tanks, manned and supported by between 1,200 and 2,000 troops.

The mechanized missile battalions are equipped with 60 nuclear-tipped FROG rockets, carried and launched from tank-type vehicles. These rockets have ranges of 25 to 300 miles. The division has its own artillery, including 40 self-propelled SU-100 millimeter rifles.

CALLING THE ROLL — According to the Defense estimate of the Russian table of organization and equipment in Cuba, the next largest group of troops consists of 6,000 specialists in the rocket units, manning the ground-to-air missile emplacements that ring the island.

These units, with more than 650 SA-2 missiles, are supported by 2,000 additional Soviet troops handling the early-warning radar network and the missile-jamming equipment.

Another 5,000 to 6,000 troops are assigned to Cuban port facilities; and 2,000 Soviet pilots and airforce technicians are scattered throughout the island at newly-built airfields. Also, between 2,000 and 2,300 Russian sailors and officers are training Cubans in operating Soviet patrol craft and missile-firing PT boats.

President Kennedy is privately pressing Premier Khruschev to remove the "elite" division, the missile specialists, and the Soviet pilots, but so far he hasn't gotten very far with his demands.

After the Soviet IL-28 jet bombers are removed from Cuba, the President is expected to change his tactics and begin exerting public pressure on the Soviet leader to remove these military units.

Until now, the President has played down this part of the Rus-

Cost of Soviet Equipment In Cuba Reported $1 Billion

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The ballistic missiles and other weapons which Russia shipped into Cuba in its clandestine effort to gain a Western Hemisphere foothold were authoritatively estimated Saturday to have cost not less than $1 billion.

Washington computed the cost as one attempt to measure the enormity of the Kremlin enterprise that resulted in the brink-of-war crisis last October.

In the face of U. S. demands, the "offensive" ballistic missiles and obsolescent IL28 bombers have pulled out and presumably shipped home to Russia. But a huge share of Moscow's investment in arms-for-Cuba remains in the form of what Washington elects to describe as "defensive" weapons.

With them are Russian troops and technicians estimated in the capital to number anywhere from 5,000 to 20,000 men. There is no sure estimate, but an insistent administration goal is to bring about their departure.

Weapons still in Cuba include a highly developed anti-aircraft missile system, Komar patrol boats able to fire short-range missiles, FROG (free rocket over ground) missiles with 20 to 25 miles range, complex military communications systems, and MIG jet fighters that could lug bombs as well as conduct air defense.

Capital sources regard some of the weapons as the most advanced Russia has—the equal or possibly the superior of American types.

This assessment notably covers the SA-2 anti-aircraft missile, one of which presumably shot down the U2 reconnaissance plane at the height of the Cuban crisis Oct. 27. It is a missile at least as good as the U. S. Nike Hercules, possibly better, and still has to be fully deployed in the Soviet Union itself.

Washington was astonished, moreover, by the swiftness with which Russia was able to mount the gigantic effort in Cuba, starting from the marshalling and shipment of weapons in the Soviet Union to the deployment throughout the island.

It is reported that the Soviets did not deliver into Cuba any of the intermediate range ballistic missiles (IRBM) for which it was preparing launching sites at the time President Kennedy told the nation of the crisis on Oct. 22.

The 42 missiles that were shipped out of Cuba were the me-

Strike Closes Nine New York Newspapers

NEW YORK (UPI) — A strike by craft unions Saturday closed nine New York City newspapers in a dispute which could have staggering economic effects on the nation's largest city.

Members of the International Typographical Union (ITU) walked off the job at four of the newspapers. The Publishers Association of New York City then suspended publication of five others, completing the suspension of one-tenth of the country's total daily newspaper circulation.

The papers involved have a daily readership of about 5.7 million.

No negotiations were scheduled immediately, but talks between the publishers and representatives of the ITU's local 6 could resume at any time.

Kennedy Charged With 'Hands Off Cuba' Policy

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The Miami News said Saturday night the Kennedy administration has adopted a "hands-off Cuba" policy in exercising a tight censorship on radio broadcasts to that country.

Commentators broadcasting to Cuba from the United States have been ordered to make no disparaging remarks about Fidel Castro, the News reported, and a ban has been placed on any material designed to raise the hope of freedom inside Cuba.

The News said heavy restrictions had been placed on broadcasters through the Voice of America during the Cuban crisis and this policy had been relaxed only slightly since the easing of the crisis.

In Washington, a spokesman for the Voice of America said, "The

Manned Mars Flight Possible, President Says

ATOMIC TEST SITE, Nev. (AP) —President Kennedy toured the nation's historic nuclear testing grounds Saturday, manipulated a radioactive fragment with a mechanical hand and heard that a manned flight to Mars will be possible after the first moon trip by nuclear rocket.

He appeared interested and impressed when told that nuclear rockets will make it practical, once man reaches the moon, to fly to Mars and return.

The trip would take a year, including 42 days on the planet Mars, the President was told by briefers who included Dr. Glenn Seaborg, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

GOP Demands U.S. Action For Overthrow of Castro

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans called on President Kennedy Saturday for action toward the "complete elimination" of Communist military power in Cuba and the overthrow of Prime Minister Fidel Castro.

In one of a series of resolutions adopted unanimously at a windup session of a two day conference, the Republican National Committee accused the Democratic administration of deceiving the American people about the presence of missiles in Cuba at a time it said GOP spokesmen had exposed their presence there.

The Republicans lashed out at what they called "suppression and distortion of truth" by the administration in its informational policies.

They condemned what they said was Kennedy's grab for excessive power in the presidency.

They criticized what they termed a staggering increase in federal spending, pledging their party to support tax reduction only if it is coupled with cuts in spending.

All of this added up to a preview of the issues Republicans seem likely to pound away at during 1963's tuning-up process for the 1964 presidential and congressional campaigns.

Regrouping for these battles, the GOP members lifted the flap of their party tent to admit the Republican National Citizens Committee—a brainchild of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower—into associate membership.

They gave National Chairman William E. Miller a rousing endorsement to continue managing party affairs until the 1964 national convention.

They set up an ambitious budget for next year's expenditure of about $3 million to cover expenses of the national and Senate and House campaign committees.

Aroused by the claim of Rep. Bob Wilson, R-Calif., that the timing of Kennedy's quarantine action against Cuba's import of offensive weapons had cost them 20 House seats in the November election, the Republicans made it clear they will pump this issue.

They said in a resolution that the Eisenhower administration had "inaugurated a policy that would have led to the elimination

Kirsten Flagstad, Famous Singer, Dies in Norway

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Kirsten Flagstad, the famed Norwegian Wagnerian soprano and former star of the Metropolitan Opera in New York, died here Friday night. She was 67.

Director John Caspersen of the Oslo government-run hospital, Rikshospitalet, said that she died there at 8 p.m.

"She had been here for several months," he said.

He refused to give the cause of death.

Born to a musical family July 12, 1895, near Oslo, Miss Flagstad started her singing career as a child with a part in Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado." She began her operatic career when she was 18.

A few years later, New York banker Otto Kahn heard her sing "Tosca" in Oslo's National Theater and passed the word to the Metropolitan that this was a singer worth watching.

She made her debut at the Metropolitan in 1935 as Sieglinde and followed it up four days later as Isolde. New York critics described her performance with such phrases as "transcendentally beautiful."

Until 1941, Miss Flagstad was the Met's leading Wagnerian soprano. She returned home to German-occupied Norway during the war to join her husband, Henry Johansen, a wealthy lumberman. He died in 1945 of a lung ailment before being brought to trial on charges of economic collaboration with the Nazis. He had pleaded innocent to the charges.

Britishers Battle Native Revolt in Tropical Brunei

BRUNEI, (AP) — The British army airlifted hard-fighting Gurkha troops to this tropical sultanate on Borneo Saturday night to help crush a revolt for independence from Britain. Striking before dawn, rebels hit at Brunei's rich oil installations but the local government appeared to have the rebellion under control by nightfall.

Seven persons were reported killed in the opening skirmishes of the revolt, sparked by an Indonesian-educated lawyer who—in Manila—proclaimed himself prime minister of Brunei and its British-administered neighbors, North Borneo and Sarawak.

Opening their attacks at 2 a.m., the rebels hit at British-operated oil installations in this capital but no damage or casualties were reported.

They also were reported to have struck at Brunei's major oil fields around Seria, about 45 miles southwest of here. These fields

Body of Miner Recovered; 36 Still Missing

CARMICHAELS, Pa. (AP) — Rescue workers recovered the body of one coal miner Saturday, then pushed relentlessly ahead toward 36 others trapped in a mammoth explosion more than two days ago.

Discovery of the body, however, gave no indication of the fate of the other miners caught 650 feet underground by the blast in a mine near this southwestern Pennsylvania town, about 50 miles southwest of Pittsburgh.

The body of Hurley C. Stalmaker 50, of Adah was recovered near a coal train 3,900 feet from the face of the mine, which is the point of the mining operations.

Stalmaker, a 19-year mine veteran, was motorman of the train which was headed toward the face when the explosion ripped U.S. Steel Corp.'s Robena No. 3 mine Thursday afternoon.

Northern Lights Play Hob With U.S. Missile Detector

By RALPH DIGHTON

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP)—Nature's northern lights are playing hob with the nation's giant new missile detector radar at nearby Clear, Alaska.

And the situation is likely to get worse, not better.

Dr. Victor Hessler, professor of geophysics at the University of Alaska, told newsmen touring Air Force facilities in Alaska: "The disturbances in the earth's magnetic field which caused the auroras also cause blips on the Ballistic Missile Early Warning System—BMEWS—screen at Clear.

"This is quite confusing at times and the problem is only partly solved. From our studies of the auroras we can tell the Air Force when these disturbances are likely to occur, but we can't tell them how to distinguish between the magnetic disturbances and missile attacks."

The spectacular northern lights apparently result from bursts of energy from the sun known as solar flares. These flares, which can be severe enough to interrupt radio communications, come in cycles with a peak of intensity every 11 years.

The last peak was in 1958. Since then the activity has been falling slowly toward a low expected in 1963-64. After that, the intensity should increase again, hitting another peak in 1969.

This means that the 40x165-foot radar antenna recently built at Clear and the sister BMEWS screen at Thule, Greenland, are likely to become increasingly confused during the next seven years. If a massive missile attack were launched during the period of intense solar activity U.S. technicians could lose several precious minutes trying to decide whether to send the alarm for a retaliatory blow.

Dr. Hessler said electrons from solar flares are trapped in the earth's magnetic field, helping to form the so-called Van Allen belt of radiation.

During intense solar activity these electrons form in layers dense enough to reflect radar, sent out by the BMEWS antenna. The result is a blip, so far indistinguishable from radar reflection from missiles.

Week Marks Anniversary Of Retreat From Moscow

By LYNN POOLE
THE JOHN'S HOPKINS UNIVERSITY

One hundred fifty years ago this week, a ragged band of 350 soldiers scrambled across the ice-covered Niemen River, and out of Russia. These were the remnants of Napoleon's "Grande Armee" fighting a delaying rear-guard action against the pursuing Russians – a pitiful ending to one man's dream of conquest.

Six months earlier, in the summer of 1812, Napoleon Bonaparte, Emperor of France, had ridden at head of his mighty legion, over 400,000 strong, as they bridged that same Niemen River and invaded Russian soil.

They met little opposition, as the considerably smaller Russian army fell back, scorching the earth over which they retreated, finally held a position at the village of Borodino. Here the armies fought a violent pitched battle – with Napoleon's army the victor only because they held the field that night. Some 85,000 men lay dead or dying on the field – with ambulance facilities so poor that thousands of wounded died on the field, and thousands of dead men lay unburied.

The armies moved on. As fast as Napoleon advanced, the Russian Army retreated, always distroying all possible food supplies in its path. On the evening of Sept. 14, the French army moved into the deserted streets of Moscow, already evacuated by the Russians.

Napoleon took up headquarters in the Kremlin. That night he was awakened by the cry, "fire" as the half-wooden city went up in flames. For four days, the wind-whipped fire raged, destroying a large portion of Moscow, along with most of its food supplies. Whether the fires were set by the Russians or caused by the careless bivouacking of the soldiers has never been fully determined.

The occupation of Moscow was a hollow victory for Napoleon. Food was in short supply, and the Russians adamantly refused to sue for peace while the city was in French hands.

On Oct. 13, a little snow fell in Moscow. Napoleon, realizing his perilous position with winter approaching, issued orders for a withdrawal.

On Oct. 19, the retreat began. Some 100,000 men began the long trek to friendly territory. After several costly enlagements with the persistent Russian army, the half-starved French army reached Smolensk, where they halted for a few days. Finding the conditions there worse than Moscow, they began the march again.

The Russian army caught them as they were crossing the Beresina River, which was not yet frozen. Only 60,000 made it across before Napoleon ordered the bridges burned to prevent being followed. Thousands of men were killed or captured.

The weather then worsened. Temperatures dropped to 30 below, and a razor-keen wind slashed into the retreating band of men – it could no longer truly be called an army. Men, unable to march on feet numbed with cold, fell by the wayside and froze — others lay down around the campfires at night and were found frozen by their comrades. The remainder were subject to constant harrassment from both the Cossack horsemen and bands of Russian peasants organized to defend their homeland.

On Dec. 5, Napoleon took leave of his army and hastened home to Paris in an attempt to save his empire. There was nothing left of his army to save. The 350 men who crossed the Niemen under Marshall Ney on Dec. 14 after fighting a heroic rear-guard action were the only effectives remaining from the vast, proud army of June.

Napoleon's influence and power over the entire European Continent was shattered by this humiliation. Although the final defeat at Waterloo was still two and a half years away, one of the great empires of modern history actually began its fall on the snowy Russian plains 150 years ago.

Walker Discovers Some Opponents In Legislature

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) —Former Maj. Gen. Edwin Walker unexpectedly showed up at the Mississippi House of Representatives last week and touched off a controversy over whether he should be permitted to address the body.

Walker visited the Capitol after conferring with one of his attorneys regarding a libel suit against a newsman. Walker himself faces several federal charges stemming from rioting at the University of Mississippi Sept. 30 over the admission of Negro James H. Meredith.

House Speaker Walter Sillers invited Walker to speak to the legislators and in a glowing, three-minute introduction, called the former officer a "distinguished American" subjected to "arbitrary and unlawful treatment" because of his efforts to "be helpful to the people of Mississippi."

Rep. Horace L. Meredeth rose to request a vote on whether Walker should be heard "so some of us can express our views."

He said Walker's appearance before the house would indicate that members condone his actions at "Ole Miss," where he was accused of leading rioters.

Siller put the matter to a vote and Walker's appearance was sanctioned, 101 to 10.

Among those opposing the speech was Rep. Phillip Bryant of Oxford, the home of "Ole Miss," who said later his constituents "did not appreciate General Walker's presence at the university."

Several representatives, including former Gov. J. P. Coleman, did not vote and a few walked out of the chamber.

Walker spoke briefly, charging that a planned reorganization of the National Guard and reserves is part of a "State Department plan to put our armed forces under control of the United Nations." He also repeated criticism of American policies during the Korean War.

Meridith said later he "felt it was improper to have him (Walker) appear before the legislature until such time as there had been a public hearing on his actions the tragic night of Sept. 30.

"He was not invited by an act of the legislature but at the personal request of the speaker. I am deeply sorry that I did embarrass our respected speaker but my allegiance to the United States and my conscience compelled me to speak out."

Brother Daniel Still to Seek Israel Citizenship

JERUSALEM, Israel (UPI) — Brother Daniel, Jewish convert to Catholicism whose bid for citizenship under Israel's law of return was rejected by the Supreme Court here, says he will accept the ruling and seek to become a naturalized citizen.

The law of return guarantees every Jew the right to settle in Israel as a citizen. But the court ruled by a four to one majority that the Carmelite monk forfeited his right to be called a Jew under the law when he joined the Roman Catholic Church during World War II.

"Well, what can I do?" Brother Daniel said after the decision. "All my life I wanted to reside in Israel. I never felt at any time I belonged to a community other than my Jewish nationality. I'm a Catholic by faith, but I never felt a traitor to Judaism because of my feeling to it.

"I have nothing more to say," he added. "I submit to the court ruling."

He said he would apply to become a naturalized citizen through normal channels open to non-Jews. Brother Daniel, who was born Oswald Rufeisen in Poland 40 years ago, converted to Catholicism while hiding from the Nazis in a convent.

The newspaper Jerusalem Post called the decision a "guiding principle for the future." It said it shows "a Jew who has been accepted into another faith has cut himself off from the rest of the nation and cannot claim its special privileges."

Some observers forecast trouble because of the decision. They said it puts the state of Israel on a religious, not a political basis.

'Trade' in Atom Test Ban Deal Sought by Reds

GENEVA (UPI) — The Soviet Union may have put forward the idea of trading concessions with the west to achieve a nuclear test ban agreement, Communist diplomatic sources say here.

Sources close to the Communist delegations at the 17-nation disarmament conference said the Soviets may have offered such a trade Friday in an attempt to learn whether the West was interested.

But Western diplomats said if this was the Soviet aim, it failed, because U.S. negotiator Arthur H. Dean flatly rejected the idea of any trade.

Soviet spokesman Alexei Roschin told a news conference Friday that Russian negotiator Semyon K. Tsarapkin wanted to let inspectors of the proposed international disarmament commission on Soviet territory to inspect and control the "black boxes" which the Russians would like to use to police a test ban.

In exchange, Roschin quoted Tsarapkin as saying, the West must give up its demand that compulsory on-site inspection of suspected underground nuclear blasts be included in a test-ban treaty.

Roschin withdrew his statement less than two hours after he had made it, saying Tsarapkin had intended to propose such a trade during Friday's plenary session but did not in fact do so.

However, by that time, Dean already was on his feet at the afternoon session of the conference, rejecting any such idea.

Dean said the west is always willing to discuss any proposal, including "black boxes," or automatic detection instruments. But he said the idea of a trade such as Roschin claimed Tsarapkin had proposed was "absolutely unacceptble," and he added that the Soviets were trying to get the West to "buy a pig in a poke" in proposing the idea of unmanned seismic stations.

Western sources said the West will never abandon its insistence on on-site inspection unless the Russians can prove scientifically that their own research has made such inspection unnecessary.

Togliatti Blasts Red China for Untruthfulness

ROME (UPI)—Italian Palmiro Togliatti, Moscow - trained leader of the free world's biggest Communist Party outside the Soviet Union, said here at the close of a hectic party congress here that Red China has not been telling the truth to its fraternal brothers.

Togliatti said a charge made earlier this week by Chinese Delegate Cabo Yi-ming that Yugoslav President Josip Broz Tito had "restored capitalism" in his country was enough to doubt all Peking's theories.

"Everyone knows that this is not true," said Togliatti, and "leads to the conclusion that the rest of one's statements is not true."

He said "we have esteem, respect and understanding for the Chinese Communist Party and love for its leaders—but I reject with great firmness the criticism involving problems of an international character and even our own (Italian) policy."

Throughout the week, the congress has been the scene of some of the bitterest ideological attacks against China recorded to date in the Sino-Soviet rift. The congress last night passed a political document critical of Peking and today returned Togliatti to the Italian party's central committee by a vote of 832 to six—the dissenters were pro-Chinese.

Togliatti told delegates—the Chinese representatives remained impassive—that China by exaggerating some theories destroyed "the consistency of all other arguments."

Georgia Fire Turns Out to Be Accident

COBB, Ga. (UPI)—A fire which Trim Porter (Negro), thought had been purposely set because of his voter registration activities, turned out to be an accident caused by his 5-year-old granddaughter.

James E. McMahon, Atlanta FBI chief, said Friday investigation showed Emma Jean Holmes accidentally started the fire by stuffing newspaper into a stove.

The blaze destroyed Porter's home in Sumter County. Porter, 57, an elder deacon in the Mount Pleasant Baptist Church here, said earlier he thought the fire was connected with his being active in efforts to get Negroes in the area registered to vote.

Colorado Springs Chorale To Present Noel Pageant

The Colorado Springs Chorale, under the direction of Walter Illian, will open its 1962-63 season next Sunday, at 3:15 p.m. at the Fines Arts Center with a performance of "The Incarnate Word," a Christmas pageant by Robert Elmore and Robert B. Reed.

Directing the pageant will be David Porter, instructor of vocal music at Cheyenne Mountain High School and assistant director of the chorale.

Porter has appeared as soloist with the chorale on several occasions, and has also performed lead roles in the Colorado Springs Opera Assn.'s presentations of such operas as "The Mikado," "The Bartered Bride," and "Trouble in Tahaiti."

While serving in the armed forces in Germany, Porter directed "Haydn's Creation," performed by the Chorus of international Troops. At that time, he also participated in a performance of "Camina Burana," directed by Carl Orff, composer of the work.

In addition to being assistant director of the Colorado Springs Chorale, Porter serves as vice-president of the Colorado Springs opera Association.

Narrator for "The Incarnate Word" will be Paul Nesselroad, director of music at Skyway Baptist Church. During his 16 years in radio and television, Nesselroad has served as actor, narrator and producer. He has, for the past four years, written and announced the Easter Sunrise Service at the Garden of the Gods.

Special lighting effects will be provided by Marceine Sweetser, who has contributed her talents to many of the Colorado Springs Civic Players' productions, including "The Miracle Worker." Lighting for Air Academy High School's production of "The King and I" was planned and directed by Miss Sweetser. Her most recent works for the chorale were the stage performance of last year's "Camelot" and Haydn's Imperial Mass."

Shepherds: Larry Graham, Cynthia Palmer, Cheryl Renfro, Jane Hughs and Linda Jones.

Wise Men: John Patterson, Kenn Gardner, Steve Blake.

Eernal Manager.: Adrienne Abbott, Kate Johnson, Barbara Burnor, Frank Tyler, Karen Wieselmann, Cathy Ciofalo, Glenda Mathers, Donna Prentice.

A limited number of season tickets at $4 each may be obtained by calling Mary Ann McRae at 634-5954.

Father of Two Killed In Lakewood Quarrel

LAKEWOOD (UPI)—A 27-year-old father of two children was shot to death Saturday as the climax to a bitter argument with another man following a minor traffic accident.

The Jefferson County Sheriff's office identified the victim as James L. Elliott of Jefferson County, whose wife was expecting the couple's third child. Elliott was dead on arrival at St. Anthony's Hospital in Denver.

Officers said they were holding Charles Edward Lavoie, 33, of Denver, for questioning.

Detectives said Elliott and three other men were passengers in a car which was involved in a minor auto accident on West Colfax Street wtih a vehicle operated by Lavoie.

Although damage to both vehicles was slight, Elliott and Lavoie reportedly got into a heated argument following the accident. Officers quoted Lavoie as saying he pulled out a pistol when he thought Elliott was about to jump him.

WILL SPONSOR BILLS

BOULDER (UPI)— State Sen. Paul E. Wenke, R-Fort Collins, said Thursday he would sponsor bills to tighten bail bond regulations and to establish a public defender system. Wenke, addressing the Colorado District Court Clerks Association convention, said both bills are needed. He said the public defender proposal would provide better representation for indigent defendants at less cost to the state.

Oilmen Prepare Annual Defense Of Allowance

By TRAVIS HUGHS

TULSA, Okla. (UPI)—U.S. oil producers are preparing their annual defense against an attack on the depletion allowance — and the battle looks like it will be a hot one.

The depletion allowance, while a vital tax concession to the oilman, means little to the average citizen — even those in states where the oil industry is a big economic force.

Because of this indifference, oil producers are starting a campaign to get Joe Citizen on the side of the petroleum industry. Oil's drive for public support is well-timed, mainly because critics of the depletion allowance are also campaigning.

Only last week, a petroleum industry analyst told Tulsa oilmen he expected an attack on the allowance to be part of the upcoming tax legislation.

The analyst, Leonard G. Reichhard Jr. of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, said most of the opposition would come from the U.S. House of Representatives while the Senate would back the oil industry.

"If there is a change in depletion," Reichhard said, "it would come right off the top and be extremely difficult to pass on. But the immediate effect might be more psychological than actual."

Critics of the allowance, usually campaigning in areas where oil and gas production are minor or nonexistent, say it is a "government subsidy" to the oil industry.

Oilmen are lining up support from other industries that may be affected by a cut of the allowance, which provides tax relief for the steady depletion of resources.

Richard J. Gonzalez, a director of Humble Oil and Refining Co., told a meeting of the Northwest Mining Association in Spokane, Wash., last month that a cut in the oil depletion allowance would be followed by attacks on allowances for other minerals.

But most of the oil campaign is aimed at the man or woman who puts two dollars worth of gas in the family car at the corner service station.

A booklet, "Some Facts All Motorists Ought to Think About," is being mailed out by oil firms to credit card holders. The Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA) is distributing the folder.

The IPAA reports that to date, some 800,000 gasoline buyers have been asked, "How would you like to pay another four cents in indirect taxes" for gas after already shelling out an average of 11 cents per gallon?

The booklet appeals to the customer's pocketbook in explaining the oil industry's position on the depletion allowance. It says elimination of the allowance would cost the industry 42 cents per barrel of crude oil.

Corregidor Island Monument Is Proposed

MANILA (UPI)— Two Western Democratic senators have urged the restoration of Corregidor Island as a memorial to American and Philippine war dead.

Sens. Frank Church of Idaho and Gale McGee of Wyoming paid a visit to the historic island on the 21st anniversary of Pearl Harbor.

The island was Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters in the early days of World War II. It is now largely deserted.

Britishers Battle Native Revolt in Tropical Brunei

have been turning out about 33 million barrels of oil a year. Oil is Brunei's chief resource. The rebel leader threatened to blow up the oil fields unless the British gave in to his demand for independence.

Two companies of Gurkhas—numbering 280 men—left Singapor in eight planes on a 700-mile flight to Brunei. More were scheduled to fly Sunday.

(Brunei cable offices closed down at their usual hour Saturday night but the government of Sarawak announced in Kuching the situation in Brunei was under government control and that order had been restored with 100 persons under arrest. It said, however, the situation in the oil field areas of Seria and the Kuala Belait district was still serious.

A. M. Azahari, the self-proclaimed revolt leader, set up headquarters in the Philippines.

He established the sultan of Brunei, Sir Omar Ali Saifuddin, as revolutionary ruler of all three territories. But in a broadcast over Brunei radio the sultan denounced the uprising and indicated those responsible for it would be punished.

Sir Omar addressed the nation in the afternoon. This capital city was quiet by then.

The three territories which the rebellion seeks to weld together have a population of nearly 1.3 million. Brunei, smallest of the three, with a population of about 83,000 in its 2,226 square miles, ahs been a British protectorate since 1888.

The three territories, occupying the north and northwest coasts of this Southeast Asian island, are scheduled to be included next August in a federation with Singapore and Malaya. It is to be called Malaysia—longtime dream of Malaya's Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman.

Azahari and his political party have been opposed to the federation. Instead he wants an independent nation sharing this island with Indonesian Borneo, which takes up the entire southern, central and northeastern portions.

All three territories have been administered or controlled by Britain since the latter part of the last century.

Body of Miner Recovered; 36 Still Missing

coal train usually also is manned by a brakeman, but there was no sign of any other bodies. A funeral director reported earlier three other bodies had been spotted.

Stalmaker's body first was sighted early Saturday morning, but deadly methane gas prevented workers from reaching it until nearly eight hours later.

"Our progress may seem slow, but we are encountering gas which we must move and a few small fires," said James Girod, assistant general superintendent in charge of rescue operations.

Girod said he could not say what the chances are of finding the other men alive.

Girod explained that the operation was progressing about 100 feet per hour and that workers must explore 1,700 feet of headings for every 100 feet they push forward.

The tunnel where the miners are trapped is one of several running off the main entry of Frosty Run Shaft. The shaft goes down 525 feet from the earth surface, and the tunnel slopes to 650 feet.

Crack Red Troops Still In Cuba, Report Discloses

sian military build-up because "hard" intelligence about many of the units was lacking, and he didn't want to inflame public opinion in the U.S.

NOTE: The identification of the Soviet units as part of an "elite" guard was made through insignias copied by Cuban refugees from Russian officers' uniforms found in Cuban supply depots.

HARD TO BELIEVE — One incredible note was struck during President Kennedy's three and one-half hour meeting with Soviet Deputy Premier Mikoyan when he stopped over in Washington enroute from Havana to Moscow.

The tense incident occurred after the President complained that the Russians had built their Cuban missile base in secrecy while at the same time their government was claiming that only defensive missiles were being sent to Cuba.

Mikoyan, replying with a straight face, said:

"Premier Khrushchev was planning to inform you about the missiles after your elections. He didn't want to disturb you before then."

"Do you expect me to believe that?" thundered the President.

"You can't disprove it," said Mikoyan.

When the President did not smile, Mikoyan went into a long harangue, saying that Russia was under no obligation to inform the U.S. where missiles were being sent.

When he finished, the President icily replied. "Your government has no right to deliberately mislead other governments."

VATICAN VISITOR — A top Vatican prelate is coming to the U.S. early next year to push Christian unity in this country.

Augustin Cardinal Bea, president of the Vatican's Secretariat for the Union of Christians, is planning to tour the U.S. beginning in March, at the invitation of Cardinal Cushing of Boston. The two Cardinals will speak on the critical need for Catholic-Protestant-Jewish unity.

The visit has the blessing of Pope John, who has informed U.S. Catholic Church leaders attending the Second Vatican Council that he will not personally be able to accept their invitation to come to this country.

SOCIAL WHEEL — Ballet dancers may look dainty and etheral, but they have perfectly normal appetites — as Mrs. Marjory Post May, wealthy "social queen," learned to her surprise. She gave a party for the ballet corps of the American Ballet Theater, which has taken up residence in Washington, and carefully provided pitchers of cool milk for the slim and trim dancers. But they took one look, and after making sure it was milk, asked, "Where is the bar" We want a real drink." . . . If you're wondering what they ate at that ritzy $100-a-plate dinner to launch Washington's $30 million Cultural Center, following is the menu: Melon, hearts of celery, assorted olives, charcoal broiled heart of filet mignon, rissolee potatoes, string beans a la Provencale, domestic Burgundy, hearts of iceberg lettuce with French dressing, peppermint ice cream with chocolate sauce, cakes and coffee.

Maybe it was the lure of a lavish buffet and several well-stocked bars, but whatever the cause, a standing-room-only throng turned out at Yugoslav Ambassador Micumovic's party on the 17th anniversary of his country's establishment as a republic. Among the notables present were Chief Justice Earl Warren, Postmaster General Day, numerous State Department officials and virtually the entire foreign diplomatic corps.

A 32-year-old university president was the guest of honor at a cocktail party by Ethiopian Ambassador Berhanou Dinke. The youthful university head is Kassa Woldemariam of the Haile Selassie University in Addis Ababa, who is touring the U.S. studying higher schools of education. He is also looking for faculty members for his university, which is only two years old.

Another Kennedy has arrived in the Capital, but as far as she knows is no relation to the President. She is Mrs. Katherine Kennedy McCarthy, new head of the National Council of Catholic Women. Though she was born in Massachusetts and her brother has a summer home near Hyannis Port, Mrs. McCarthy says her family has no ties to that of the President. And she adds, "If we were related, you can be sure we would be the poor relations."

Bids Advertised For East Lake Elementary School

Dr. Roy J. Wasson, superintendent of School District 11, announced that bids on the East Lake Eelmentary school will be opened Jan. 16.

This will be the first step in the building program to be financed by the $11.7 million bond issu , voted in Dec 4.

The bond issue was approved to finance four elementary schools, four secondary schools, and to make additions to some existing schools.

The East Lake school will be located on a site south of Manitoba Drive and Tahoe Boulevard. Completion is set for Aug. 24, 1963. The new school is expected to relieve overcrowded conditions at Will Rogers school where some grades are on split sessions.

Wasson said plans for East Lake School will be available Dec. 20 from the architect, Walter H Weber, and bids will be opened Jan. 16 at 4 p. m. in the District 11 administration building.

The new school will have 14 conventional classrooms, a special classroom, kindergarden, and an multi-purpose room.

Bertram A. Powers, president of Local 6. The printers were being supported by members of other craft unions.

The walkout came almost four years to the day of New York's last city-wide strike, which closed the same newspapers for 19 days at the peak of the holiday season. The Dec. 9, 1958, strike had severe effects on retail trade in the metropolitan area, resulting in an economic loss estimated at $50 million.

Saturday's walkout came at 2 a.m. EST, when a strike deadline passed without a contract agreement. Printers then struck the New York Daily News, Times, World - Telegram and Sun and Journal-American.

Within a matter of minutes the publishers, charging union "whipsaw tactics," closed the New York Herald Tribune, Mirror, Post, the Long Island Star-Journal and the Long Island Press.

The ITU is seeking a two-year contract calling for a $10 weekly pay raise the first year and $8.45 the second. The union also is asking for a reduction in the work week, increased vacations and sick leaves and other "fringe" benefits.

dium-range (MRBM) types, with a reach of about 1,000 nautical miles. These would have brought an area from Washington, D. C., to the Panama Canal within their striking range, as Kennedy pointed out.

Soviet preparations for the Cuban arms buildup are believed in some capital quarters to have started about a year ago, when the Kremlin's designs on West Berlin had been foiled, in the face of the U. S. Berlin buildup.

A new means of applying pressure was then sought. Cuba promised to be fertile ground, and an accessible bit of real estate on America's doorstep. Finishing touches probably were applied during the summer visit to Moscow of Cuban defense chief Raul Castro and Communist leader Che Guevara.

There still is no firm estimate of what it cost the U. S. Defense Department to put American forces on a world-wide alert and mobilze more than 200,000 men in the Southeast United States and the Caribbean during the crisis.

A rough Budget Bureau estimate is that operating costs were increased about $100 million above normal.

The Nation's Weather

(Report furnished by U.S. Weather Bureau Station at Peterson Field as of 8:30 p.m. yesterday)

Much of the east is under cloudy skies late Saturday and cold, gusty winds, combined with snow flurries over the upper Mississippi, Valley and Great Lakes region, were sharpening the bite of winter air spreading southward toward the Gulf.

A front marking the advance of the cold air stretched westward thru Arkansas and Oklahoma and then northwestward to Montana.

Fog was obscuring late evening skies in portions of the Pacific northwest and a layer of haze clung to the California coastline.

Skies were mostly sunny in the Southwest and over the central Rockies, and clear skies were also found over the Gulf state.

Light rain was moving eastward across the south Atlantic states and dampening coastal sections from North Carolina to northeast Florida.

Temperatures late Saturday were still below freezing in the Great Lakes region, upper Mississippi Valley and across the northern Plains. Except for the Gulf Coast states, temperatures were all on the cold side of 50 east of the Rockies.

In the Southwest along the Arizona-California border, late evening readings were well in the 70s, and Thermal California had reached the 80-degree mark during the afternoon.

of the Communist regime in Cuba."

Miller told a news conference the Eisenhower plan had called for air cover for the ill-fated Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba in April 1961. He said Kennedy called off the air cover.

Reminded that Eisenhower himself had said his administration had no invasion plan, Miller said he couldn't identify the source of the air cover decision.

In their resolution, the Republicans said they believe "Our national security demands on-site inspection in Cuba to verify the removal of all types of offensive weapons." They added that "Our foreign policy must be directed toward the complete elimination of the Communist military base in Cuba and the restoration of freedom to the Cuban people."

In the informational field, the GOP National Committee said the administration has "deceived the public about matters of major importance, including their denials of the presence of offensive weapons in Cuba." It added:

"The Republican National Committee calls on the administration to revise its information policy to eliminate the suppression and distortion of truth."

Mother Strangles Her Three Children; Attempts Suicide

Sheriff officials said the husband was at a loss as to why his wife would slay the children and then attempt to kill herself.

Ripley said that Mrs. Beistle would make no statement. There were no suicide notes found in the house, he added.

Neighbors said the family had recently moved to the Cornell Street address, and that no one in the neighborhood had become intimately acquainted with them as yet.

The shocked group of neighbors that gathered outside the house where tragedy had struck, however, said that Mrs. Beistle had recently made the remark she was tired of having to live the kind of life that she and her family endured.

Urich reported that he was told Mrs. Beistle had been under psychiatric care.

Capt. Beistle, who is stationed at Ft. Carson, was reported to be in severe shock. He was released to the care of the Rev. Daryle Vanderburgh, a military chaplain.

Rev. Vanderburgh told the Gazette - Telegraph that he had taken besides to a friend's house where he will spend the night.

The bodies of the children were taken to the Swan Mortuary.

No charges have been filed in the case as yet and authorities said they will continue the investigation.

Capt. Beistel is stationed at Ft. Carson and is reported assigned to the Fifth Supply and Transport Battalion.

"I know very little about the tragedy or facts leading up to it," he said. "Since Beistel was not interested in talking about it at the time."

Vanderburgh said he took Beistel home with him during the supper hour and later took him to another military man's home to spend the night. Altho he did not identify the man, he said he was a close friend of Beistel.

When asked if Beistel were under sedation, Vanderburgh said "No, he had chosen not to take sedatives."

Kuhlman said he was awakened by the cries of his four children and the house was full of smoke. He rushed his children to his car parked in front of the house and turned on the heater to keep them warm. Heavy smoke was then pouring from the basement apartment.

Fire companies 1 and 2 responded to the call from Kuhlman and found Mrs. Battin beneath a window in her apartment.

Mrs. Battin was born in Lockney, Tex. and moved to Fountain with her family in 1942. She was graduated from Fountain High School in 1946.

Dangerous sharks, beautiful sea shells, eels and other wonders of skin diving were among the many subjects discussed by Mrs. Jean Kauanui at the National School assembly entitled "SCUBA Diving."

Along with her underwater experiences, Mrs. Kauanui of Scripps Institute of Oceanography, LaJolla, Calif., displayed diving equipment, shark jaws, and mounted fish. She pointed out that there are many beautiful wonders beneath the sea and that she hoped everyone could, at some time, see a coral reef, even if it were from a glass bottomed boat.

New students are constantly checking into Fountain - Ft. Carson High School. Most recent are Douglas and George Stanley, Gary Sloan, Marcella Sisneros, and Joyce Bell.

Airline Industry Advertising Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Transport Association says here it is studying the prospect of a $5 million advertising campaign for the airline industry.

ATA President Stuart G. Tipton said, following a meeting of the board of directors, that he will name a committee of top level airline management personnel to study the scope, content and objectives of such a campaign.

Five new directors were elected to the 12-man board, which is made up of airline presidents.

They were Lewis W. Dymond, Frontier, Denver; C. M. Belinn, Los Angeles Airways; L. B. Maytag Jr., National, Miami; Donald W. Nyrop, Northwest, Minneapolis-St. Paul; and Joseph H. Fitzgerald, Ozark, St Louis.

Coexistence Tale Tells Of Romance

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Pushinka and Charlie may have found that peaceful coexistence on the White House lawn can lead to pregnancy.

Pushinka is the 2-year-old mongrel offspring of the Russian space dog Strelka, and a gift to Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy from Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev. It was learned Thursday that "in all probability" Pushinka is pregnant.

The father? All signs point to Charlie, Caroline Kennedy's Welsh terrier. The two dogs share the same quarters in the Bouquet room on the ground floor of the White House.

White House sources said Pushinka has been examined by veterinarians at Walter Reed Army Hospital and all signs point to motherhood. But the final verdict is not expected for about 10 days.

If it is confirmed, Pushinka and Charlie may be the parents of a litter of American canine citizens in about nine weeks.

Christmas Toys Run Gamut From Educational to Way Out

By MARGUERITE MITCHELL

All year long Santa's elves have been conjuring up new toys for Christmas 1962; some interesting, some engaging, some educational and some just way out.

From the offerings in local shops, it would appear that some of these visionary fellows mixed in a few nightmares with their dreams in Toyland.

For instance, Odd Ogg — a squat little creature who enjoys a game of ball. Pitch a ball toward him and if you connect with his gaping mouth, he'll move in close. Miss, and Ole OO retreats with a razz.

Despite all this, Odd Ogg looks like something out of Alice in Wonderland, and is an obvious big seller. So is another of his ilk - Bop the Beetle - and King Zor is making a return this season.

The cheer this year in the sports car set will be 23 - Skidoo, replacing the kiddie - car is a sophisticated red and black Stutz Bearcat which travels under its own power. It's under $50, but not much.

Even the nice old - fashioned rocking - horse has a new look. There's a handsome black and white pony, outfitted with a Western saddle, who will whinny and neigh at the pull of a cord.

There is also Bobo the Clown, who makes a fine playmate. Made of rubber, children can take out their frustrations on this genial punching bag. He bounces back nicely and won't talk back.

Little girls, big girls, middle-sized girls - all sizes, all ages will love the "Kotton Candy Machine" and if their sweet tooth runs to something icy, there's a little snowman who will produce snow cones.

The Barbie Dolls have heaps of new costumes to show off, female like, and the Chatty Dolls are again proving their popularity.

General Electric has come up with eight educational kits for youngsters 7 years and up to Dad's age, including a nifty weather station, to out - guess the Old Farmer's Almanac.

For youngsters, boys or girls, ages 4 to 14 years, appearing again is "Diskit," a game with unlimited building possibilities. The wonderful thing about this is that all parts are identical and if one disk is lost, the game isn't.

The toy clerks report that boys are still buying models, everything from cars, to planes, to the new space - age machines. The girls are gravitating toward the stuffed animals which are offered this year in an infinite variety.

Many of them come in three sizes, daddy, mama and baby. The cutest trio is the ladybug family, in bright orange with black spots. At one shop, these are available in a size about as big as a half - dollar. Slip a thread thru them and they make unusual tree ornaments.

Second in popularity is a feline family, black as night, with bejeweled neckbands. A repeat item this year in the children's department at one store is an engaging frog, regal as a prince, if you believe in fairy tales.

In the games department, "Yahtzee" and "Life" are going good and the all - time favorite "Scrabble" is still high on everyone's list.

And books — they're better and bigger than ever. Dr. Seuss has a new one, "Sleep Book," which is running away, and Phyllis McGinley's "Boys Are Awful" is one

(Gazette Telegraph Photo)

NUCLEAR SUBMARINE MODEL — Dick Boucher, with all the worldliness of an 11-year-old, explains to his brother, Mark, 4, various items about this model of a nuclear submarine. The toy has a plastic top so that various compartments which are outfitted similar to a real submarine can be seen. They are the sons of Sgt. Maj. and Mrs. Raymond Boucher, 142 Ely St., Widefield.
(Gazette Telegraph Photo)

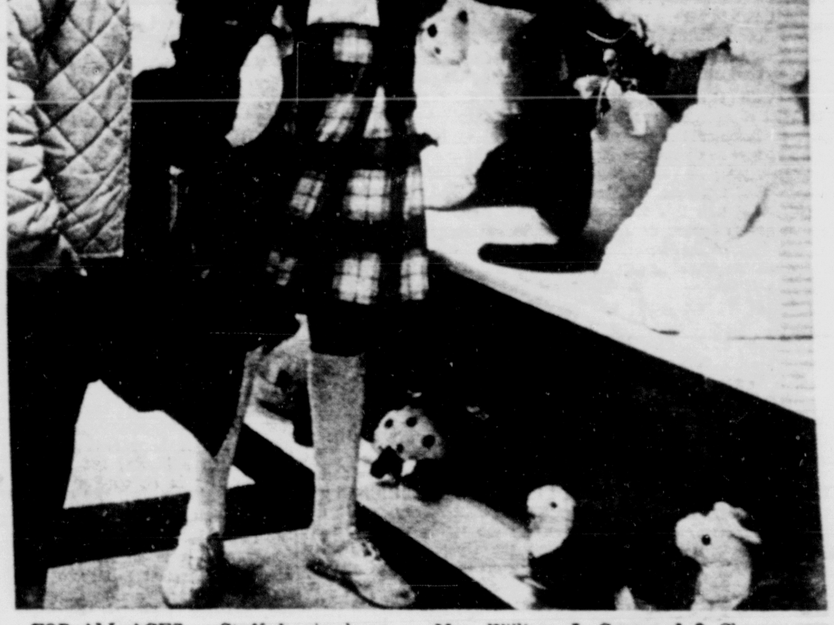
(Gazette Telegraph Photo)



FOR ALL AGES — Stuffed animals apparently are the one universal Christmas item as far as girls of all ages are concerned. Nine-year-old Bonnie and 11-year-old Susan Geary, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Geary of 9 Cheyenne Mountain Blvd., are attracted by the large white poodle. The big black cat shown on the next shelf is one of the most popular shopping items, retailers say.
(Gazette Telegraph Photo)

NATURAL ATTRACTION — Richard C. Karlson, 11, is proof that boys can't resist the temptation of puppies as he tries to reach this pair. Dogs have proved one of the most popular Christmas items, particulary in view of a rather limited supply. The boy's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Karlson of 1522 Navajo Pl.
(Gazette Telegraph Photo)

(Gazette Telegraph Photo)

WOMANLY INTEREST—Eleanor Ryder, 6, looks over dishes and a girl-size sink as she looks over Christmas wares. The sink is fitted in top of a cabinet in which toy kitchen items can be stored. Eleanor is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Ryder, 1926 Wood Ave.

Human Rights Week

We are given to understand that the United Nations has declared the week of December 9 to be "Human Rights Week."

This is a mighty important subject and a modest discussion of human rights appears to be incumbent upon us.

We are not particularly pleased that the sponsor of what is to be called "Human Rights Week" is the United Nations. This is equivalent to having the largest gang of bank-robbers known in a community become the sponsors of "thrift week." Among the uninformed and misinformed it is possible that the sanctity of the disguise will actually create the impression that the bandits favor thrift whereas, in fact, they favor thrift in others so they can more conveniently plunder in large sums. Thrift and theft are hardly compatible.

So with Human Rights. We know of no agency on earth which has so befouled the issue of human rights; so thoroughly ignored human rights; so completely violated the principle of human rights. And now this same agency wishes to appear as a sponsor of the idea of human rights.

We will do what we can to dispel the illusion.

First of all, we would contend that all human rights arise from a condition, as John Locke was to specify, of a "state of nature." That is to say, before there were magistrates or kings, before there were prelates or parliaments, there was man. And man is endowed — we like the phrasing of the Declaration of Independence — "man is endowed by his Creator with certain unalienable rights. . ." There can be no quibble here. By his nature, man comes fully equipped with rights. And they are unalienable. That is to say they cannot be taken away, accumulated in the hands of another or otherwise prejudiced.

In other words, each man has as much claim to rights as any other man. This is true regardless of nationality, creed, color, financial condition or otherwise.

The fiction is often offered, indeed it is a part of the United Nations doctrine, that a majority has more rights than a minority. But neither majorities nor minorities enjoy rights which are exclusive to them.

Rights are individual attributes and cannot be alienated.

There is a school of thought to which many American pay tribute, and to which school the Russian Constitution as well as the U.N. Charter belong. This school specifies that human rights are those "rights provided by the state." This precise wording appears in an official United Nations publication put together by Charles Malik and entitled "Draft Covenant of the Declaration of Human Rights."

The document was not officially adopted by the U.S. Senate but it contains the thinking of certain U.N. personnel and supporters as they struggled with the concept of human rights.

Among the ideas enunciated are these:

1. Everyone has a right to an adequate standard of living.
2. Everyone has a right to adequate housing.
3. Everyone has a right to an education.
4. Everyone has a right to Social Security.
5. Everyone has a right to a "continuous improvement" in living conditions.

There are a score or more of these enunciations in the above-mentioned document.

Now it follows that if everyone has a "right" to some particular standard of living, then no one has a right to withhold that standard from a person who has less than the standard specified.

This could only mean that if a $10,000 per year income were declared "standard," and one man had $20,000 whereas another had $5,000, the second man, by virtue of his LACK OF WORTH, would have a RIGHT to $5,000 to be taken from the first man. The first man would have no "right" to withhold this sum and the second man would have a "right" to take it.

The same principle can be applied in each case.

The American founders saw to it that they equated RIGHTS with PRINCIPLES. They said that among the rights we all shared were the rights to life, liberty, the pursuit of happiness, and the right to alter or abolish our governments. Thus, the American concept, contrary to the U. N. concept, is that rights are PRINCIPLES and relate to natural conditions which no state can provide.

The U.N. position is that rights are whatever the state says they are; that the state in its wisdom can add to or subtract from these rights; and that they exist at a materialist level rather than at a level of principles.

It is a travesty of honor and truth that the United Nations should call upon people to set aside a week in consideration of human rights.

Our own view is that the United Nations ought to close its doors solemnly and that all members of the U.N. should sit for this week with sack cloth and ashes over them and consider the monstrous violation of human rights this agency has wrought thru the years.

'Friends Inside'

When one studies the workings of power in government, it frequently comes as a shock to find that when power is in the hands of government friends, it does not work to your advantage as you thought it would.

Be Nervous

By PAUL HARVEY

If you are supposed to be chairman, man the chair!

If it's a civic club, a union charity luncheon or a convention of farmers, if you are tagged as toastmaster, either say no — or do it right.

The one unforgivable sin for any person on any public platform is to be dull.

I travel to two or three public functions every week. I have witnessed an unbelievable variety in manners of presiding, and almost always the most confident is the one most likely to lay an egg.

"No, I never get nervous," this character says. "I just make it up as I go along."

Further, it is only a monumentally inflated ego which would dare try to command the attention of an audience without preparation.

I've heard chairmen stumble and bumble around, mispronouncing names at the head table, unnecessarily juggling the program sequence at the last minute, figuring this was the "folksy approach."

What these amateur don't understand is that the homespun "nonchalance" of a Herb Shriner is actually very carefully contemplated, prepared — and rehearsed.

Then there is the presiding officer of the meeting who "forties himself" or "relaxes himself" or "gets in the spirit of the occasion" with a few snorts before he takes over the gavel. He is likely to be incoherent or crude, maybe even vulgar or rude. But he is never an improvement over his sober self.

At the other end of the spectrum are the orators, so self-important that they are likely to emulate William Jennings Bryan. Stentorian oratory is rarely called for in a presiding officer.

Like too much shoe polish — it lacks lustre.

Also a 45-minute introduction for a half-hour speech is ludicrous, but it happened to me once — on a blazing hot Fourth of July day in an outdoor stadium.

On the other hand, there were two chairmen most worth remembering. One was an attorney — whose training and courtroom experience produced a simple, flawless, efficient, eleoquent enunciation of the situation.

The other was a woman, totally inexperienced, who was so nervous that I thought she could not possibly hold the notes concealed in her hands.

Yet she had been so determined to do it right that she had worked at it. And she was a credit to herself and her organization.

May I, to a degree, digress?

This generation's recent preoccupation with "tranquilizing ourselves" assumes that we are better off — tranquil. Yet no individual has ever accomplished anything of historical significance, passively.

And no nation.

When we are called upon, individually or collectively, to rise to some extraordinary occasion, let's rise to it. Let's be nervous enough to prepare our ad - libs very carefully.

Bids for a Smile

Real Estate Taxes

When Baron de Montesquieu was writing his classic work, "The Spirit of Laws," he included in his evaluation of various tax systems a comment on the assessment of real property, improved or unimproved. The baron had it that there is no system of taxation so monstrously unjust and unfair as the taxing of real property.

Without knowing that he had actually stumbled upon a principle relating to value, Montesquieu held that any tax or any assessment against houses and land was bound to be unfair to all. His reason was that all taxes levied on these objects of thrift and diligence rest upon the supposed "value" of them. But value, as we now know and as Montesquieu in this instance suspected, is relative. The value of a property is only knowable at the instant it changes hands.

But so perverse is the custom in property taxation procedures, that the changing of ownership of the property in a neighborhood can adversely affect all the other property in the neighborhood, bring down future values and rob all householders of a part of their savings.

One of the very real factors to be considered here is quite obvious and yet is rarely brought to light.

When men purchase business machinery, they are permitted to deduct an allowance for depreciation. Sometimes the allowance is not large enough and sometimes it takes much too long for the depreciation to work out. But the allowance is there and it is generally accepted by tax people.

When men buy factories, hotels, motels, apartment houses or any other kind of income-producing property, a depreciation allowance is approved.

But when men buy homes, the homes also deteriorate in value. Time is a stream which has an irreversible direction.

However, our taxing authorities in the property tax area are so far removed from the facts of the case, that not only is a property depreciation for home ownership not considered, as a property grows older and physically run down, new construction nearby tends to increase the taxes on older buildings.

There are some 34 million home owners in America. These are people who have saved their money, are trying to save their money, are attempting to provide their own living and also that of their families. On the assumption that one can presume a home occupancy of three people (the ordinary figure) it would follow that a little better than half of our population live in homes they own outright or are in process of purchasing.

These are the people who, as a result of their industry and thrift and ability to earn regular incomes, pay the bulk of all the taxes, anyhow. Yet these same people are compelled with the passing of the years to pay an ever larger amount for their homes while their homes grow older, less attractive and more in need of refurbishing and brightening.

If there were any justice in the taxing process, a depreciation allowance for home owners would long since have been made a normal expectancy.

But instead, there are tremendous pressures afoot constantly to INCREASE still further the amount of take from property owners. The bulk of all school taxes are paid by home owners. The bulk of all improvement taxes in urban areas are paid by home owners. The costs of almost all government expenditures at the local level are usually collected in the main from the people who take title to homes and live in them permanently.

In point of fact, a tax against any real estate is destructive of the best interests of all the people. It discourages home ownership, the very thing upon which a strong and self-reliant community rests. Thus it discourages permanency and makes it more desirable for a family to exist in a transient state rather than as a permanent adjunct to a community.

There is no way of determining the true value of any property until the moment it is sold. But, because value is always a matter of personal evaluation, even a sale of property does not provide anything like a fixed valuation altho it may provide a fixed assessment. The new owner will value his property differently than the prior owner and will persist in acting as tho his house has increased in value with age (his assessments will help convince him that this is sound), whereas the real value will probably move in the other direction, all things being equal.

When tax revision is being discussed, a bit of consideration ought to be shown the home owner as well as the income producer.

NEHRU FIDDLED

To the Editor:

Nehru "fiddled" (not while Rome burned but) while he allowed India to lay its head upon the Red executioner's block. All during this, V. K. Krishna Menon played an oom-ta-ta- oom-ta-ta, in the manner of a second fiddler.

After each tune, the "fiddlers" passed the tin cups — mostly among the Western nations — and when the cups were filled to overflowing, the pair hastened back to the Orient to break bread with their "real friends" the Maos, Titos, Sukarnos, etc.

Nehru may be a sincere, head-in-the-clouds idealist, but that doesn't excuse his pompous stupidity. His "It's - best - to - be soft - on - Commies" nonsense will never bring back the lives and comparative freedom already lost and probably to be lost before the Sino-Indian conflict ends.

India's "It's best to be soft on Commies" approach should be a lesson to the U.S. — but will it be?

Take the Cuban crisis, for instance. We could almost feel the cold tip of the Red revolver against our temple. But for once, we saw our "fiddlers" throw down their "bows," make quick-draws, and shout, "Hands up!" And Khrushchev DID put his hands up. And then, what happened?

Wily Nikita, with his back against the wall, made one of those good - as - gold (?) Commie promises to be a good boy, and foolishly, oh, so foolishly, our immature, naive, "politico - musicians" tossed aside their weaponry (all but their word-weaponry), grabbed up their "fiddles," and started in on a soothing lullaby, hoping to lull us into a beautiful, all's-well, false - security dream, again.

So, if you are inclined to cast a scornful glance in the direction of the two fatuous "fiddlers" of New Delhi, please hold it. Just turn your head Washington-way and you'll find a whole violin section of "Fiddling Nehrus" — recruited from among State Department and CIA personnel, roving ambassadors, presidential advisors, etc. — busily throwing (or rather "bowing") away every advantage that we won by our stand-up-to-the-Reds action in the Cuban crisis.

And if you don't want to be "fiddled" into an East Indian-like position one of these days, where even a quick-draw may not save us, you'd better let your congressmen and president know, in a hurry, that we resent this returning to the "Yes, sir, Mr. Khrushchev" soft approach, again.

P.S. This letter is not meant as a criticism of the many fine men in the above-named departments whose sound, pro - American advice seems, for some strange reason, to seldom be acted upon by the powers-that-be.

SHARE BLAME

To the Editor:

We should share the blame for the Cuban crisis. Our eagerness to accept the "line" led Khrushchev to believe he could arm in Cuba to destroy us. We had followed the directive of the Communist Congress, Oct. 17, 1961, to destroy our anti-Communists by accepting the condemnation of patriots. We believed what was published — that communism was "thru" in the U.S. and world wide. We protested little upon learning that the All Russian Council of Trade Unions had ordered members to drive out belief in God in Russia, when this crusade would soon extend to the U.S.

We devoured the theory that the Soviets were going broke at the rate of one million dollars per day in maintaining a satellite Cuba and that a Russian fishing fleet based in Cuba was harmless. We have accepted the idea that we should turn over our nuclear power and arms to the U.N. which would properly police us. Arthur H. Dean is pressing other nations to accept our disarmament offer. How can Kennedy and Khrushchev know what we favor if we will not say?

UNITED FUND

To the Editor:

The board of trustees of the Pikes Peak United Fund and its campaign leaders have asked me to thank you for keeping our campaign before the public during the October fund drive.

We appreciated the many news stories on our drive and our agencies which were used during the campaign. It is always a pleasure to work with you and your staff thruout the year.

It is this sort of cooperation that is making the United Fund an increasingly effective implement for financing the many health, welfare and character-building agencies which serve our community all year long.

To The Point

Fear of Antiquity

By RUSSELL KIRK

Some American visitors to Europe get the jitters amid all the memorials of the great past, and go looking for modern hospitals and factories, by way of relief from palaces and churches and tombs. In Bruges, once, an American girl who was with me in that medieval city of canals positively shivered at the venerable jangle of the bells of the great tower of the market-hall. "They sound old, old, old," said Dorothy. "They make me want to hide."

Yes, the crumbling splendor of the past can terrify. An American sergeant of marines once approached me in the Piazza Minerva of Rome, overshadowed by the immense bulk of the Pantheon. He was lost in the medieval labyrinth of that quarter, at night; and after begging a light from me, he asked directions back to his lodging above Joe's Bar and Grill, on the glittering modern Via Veneto.

"I could try to direct you afoot," I said, "but as you may have noticed, Sergeant, these lanes are crooked."

"Gosh, no," gasped the sergeant — who came from Missouri. "I'm not going to walk thru this part of town." (He had got to the Minerva, opposite the medieval headquarters of the Inquisition, by taxi.) He gazed about uneasily. "Some of these here buildings look awful old," he muttered. "I bet some of them are a hundred years old."

"Quite right," I replied. "Now that building over there, Sergeant" — I pointed to the Pantheon —"how old would you say that was?"

"I dunno," he shrugged. "Is that a hundred years old?"

"Even older, Sergeant. That was built forty-three years before Christ was born."

"My God!" He clutched me by the arm. "I want to know how to get out of here, friend." It was clear that he expected old Rome to tumble upon his head any second. I got him to a taxi, and he fled.

Well, the past is a ghost, to some people. But as Gustave Le Bon wrote, the dead alone give us life. Nearly everything that makes life worth living was nurtured in Rome — faith, law, "the high old Roman virtue." If European culture were to be extinguished, Ortega y Gasset remarked, America could not endure. To dread the past is to flee from our ancestors. And we moderns see so far — a medieval schoolman said — precisely because we stand upon the shoulders of ancestral giants.

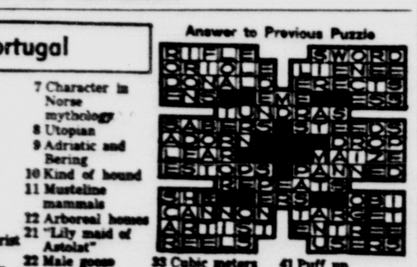
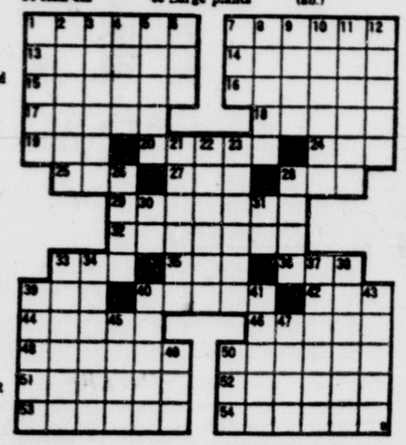
Answer to Previous Puzzle





Economic Views

Question Box

(We invite questions on economics and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.)

Question Box No. 71: Someone recently observed—and wisely, I think — that when unscrupulous men (he was speaking of politicians, I believe) begin using the term "The People" it is time to put your hand on your pocketbook. But, even so, and with only that ticket to the realm of economics, I have a question.

If a government "of, for and by the people" violently puts down a rebellion of the people against tyranny, who then, are the insurgents? ... who the "counterinsurgents?" Who the government? Who the people?

Why should such a question be asked? Well, every government that one can think of claims that it exists for, and with the voluntary support of, the people. Yet, most, if not all, of the world today is in strife and turmoil. Why? There must be a basic and deeply rooted cause.

Answer: The questioner has asked, not one question, but a battery of questions. Under severe analysis, there is no such thing as a "government of, for and by the people." This is a magnificent political phrase which assists in creating a major illusion, to wit: that if the people vote, they ARE the government. The people are never the government, they are those who are governed.

For any government to function at all, it must govern. For it to have anyone to govern there must be some people outside of the government who are going to be governed.

Placed in the context provided, a rebellion of the people against a government "of, by and for the people" would be impossible. Either the government is what the politicians claim, in which case no rebellion can occur. Or it is not what the politicians claim, in which case the rebel forces are as much a government as the forces in power.

History normally does not credit insurgents with sovereignty unless or until they win. When they win, the action is called a revolution and the new regime, whatever its content is hailed with greater or lesser rejoicing and alacrity.

Is there a deeply rooted cause for the present strife and turmoil existing thruout the world and centering around various governmental actions? As our questioner supposes, there must be. Actually, we believe there are a series of causes. Man is a complex creature and is motivated to action by composite reasons not by simple ones, particularly when the action to be taken is complex.

For one thing, many men are taking more time to learn about the nature of government, taxation, regulation and so on. The more they learn the more disgusted they become and the more likely they are to speak up against tyranny. For another, there are several world-wide movements in process, all of which call for an enlargement of governmental power. Intelligent and informed men outside of government will resist these moves in various ways.

For a third cause, one has only to examine the constant growth of government, intervention and taxation. It is this growth that sires what is called tyranny. It is probably true that we are witness, not to an enlargement of socialism or communism, which in truth has always been with us, but with an enlargement of our understanding of these collectivist theories and doctrines. The more we know of them, the worse they seem. The more we know of them, the more readily we can discover socialist or communist policies and practices.

A few years ago very few people in this country would have supposed the Post Office to be socialist in character. Actually, it always was and is. The Post Office is not much worse than it always was. But our understanding of socialism has improved to the point where honest and sincere men are beginning to challenge the idea that the government ought to run a postal service at all.

The same can be said of government schools, government hospitals, government welfare programs, government transportation, government anything. Actually all of these things have been with us for a very long time. True, they are costing more now and we get less for our money. But the objection to these government-provided goods or services is beginning to be based on principle. And this is a meritorious development for it means that one most important thing is happening. Some of the people are beginning to think.

A thoughtful people with access to truth will invariably embarrass government power holders or seekers. Therefore, government will always seek to provide glib phrases such as "of, for and by the people" in an effort to delude "the people" into believing that the government "represents" them.

LIBERTY

If the true spark of religious and civil liberty be kindled, it will burn. Human agency cannot extinguish it. Like the earth's central fire, it may be smothered for a time, but at some time or other, in some place or other, the volcano will break out and flame up to heaven.

I.R.S. New Expense Rules

By LAWRENCE FERTIG

Despite some concessions promised by Commissioner of Internal Revenue Mortimer Caplin, expense account regulations are still harsh and disturbing. No doubt expense account deductions have been abused. No doubt, too, the Internal Revenue Bureau had to introduce special rules to enforce the new law passed by Congress this year. But the new expense account regulations go to extremes. They are bound to create a nightmare of administrative difficulties and to load a stultifying burden on taxpayers. In the long run this could adversely affect taxpayers' enterprise and earnings, and result in less revenue to the Treasury.

Business and professional people are to be turned into meticulous bookkeepers and file clerks during an important part of each day. Some of the precious creative talent of people is to be curbed. Now they will often hesitate to get together, talk and explore ideas during a relaxed mealtime or social session. American business, large and small, will have to incur heavy additional expense for petty record - keeping — which will ultimately have to be paid for by the consumer in the final price tag of goods and services. These are some of the significant results of the harsh regulations which the Internal Revenue Bureau announces it will impose, starting in 1963.

No longer will an estimated travel or expense slip be honored — no matter how reasonable or fair it is. A tax expert's recent report says: "You will have to keep a complete, accurate, to - the - last - penny contemporaneous diary at the time you incur the expense. This includes not only the $50 dinner, but the 25 cent tips as well. You will have to show how, what, when, where and how much. What's more you will have to break it down in detail."

Any expense of $10 (maybe raised to $20) or more must be authenticated not only by a diary but by an itemized receipt, an itemized paid bill or its equivalent. Furthermore, every single element of an expenditure must be proved. Failure to prove any one element of an expenditure will kill the entire deduction. But that's not all. Even when expenses are fully supported by documents they may be questioned by the agent. The Treasury has a right to "cross - examine" the taxpayer, and any persons entertained. Also, the agent may reject sworn statements of supporting witnesses and put these people on the grill for questioning.

So a trip to a nearby city by a salesman, business executive, accountant, lawyer or doctor becomes a heavy burden of record-keeping for every phone call, every tip, every parking charge, every drink, sandwich, etc., ad infinitum. Under these conditions people do not feel free to conduct business in the traditional way. Any businessman will tell you that frequently the solution to one of his problems has come out of a business lunch or dinner or cocktail session where, as he says, he "kicked the ball around." This is part of his creative effort, but it is now severely restricted. "What is the purpose of your visit?" asks the Internal Revenue Bureau. "What did you discuss? For how long?" etc. etc.

It is even questionable whether these regulations — burdensome as they are to the public — are favorable to the U. S. Treasury. Audits required by field agents for this kind of detailed expense accounting would require considerably expanded manpower and larger appropriations for the Internal Revenue Bureau. The Bureau is already years behind in its auditing, and a conscientious administering of these regulations will put it even further behind. To be sure the Bureau may collect many millions in rejected expense account items. But will this compensate for the extra expense incurred and the burden placed upon the community?

One basic principle of taxation recorded in every text book on the subject is that a tax should be easily administered by the government, generally accepted by the community as fair, and not disrupting to the taxpayer. The present regulations meet none of these requirements. Maybe there will be enough objections from taxpayers to force further revision not only of the Treasury regulations but of the badly - drawn law itself.

These Days

State Department Personnel

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The important matter in Earl E. T. Smith's book, "The Fourth Floor" is that the State Department and the CIA require structural as well as personnel purification. The fact that two men, Roy Rubottom and William Wieland, down the - line could determine the policy of the United States concerning Cuba, without consulting or having the consent of the President of the United States or the secretary of state, establishes beyond doubt that similar steps may, day by day, be taken by other secondary officials.

Smith says in his book:

"From my experience in Cuba I have concluded that this need not have happened. That it did happen was, to a surprising degree, due to the policy of many in critical positions in the State Department that a Leftist dictator was better than a Rightist dictator, even tho the Rightist dictator may be friendly to the United States and the Leftist dictator our enemy. The test with them is not what is beneficial to the United States but what fits their doctrinaire views of the future world."

Then he makes this telling point:

"I have shown in this book that it was impossible for Assistant Secretary of State Roy Rubottom, his associate, William Wieland, and the Fourth Floor not to be aware of Fidel Castro's Communist affiliations. It is beyond possibility that the CIA did not know Roy Rubottom was in Bogota when Fidel Castro, at the age of twenty-two, was an active organizer of Communist insurrection.

TOO LATE

"But I am sure that the Secretary of State and the Under-Secretary of State, and the President were not adequately and correctly informed on this subject, until it was too late. It is essential to understand this because while the Cuban situation may have to run its course, it ought not to be possible for the top officials of the United States to be kept in the dark on a matter of policy."

This is something too serious to let pass. Senator Smathers of Florida, who has had a slow burn about these men in the State Department — and the CIA should be included — introduced a bill to bring about a correction. His bill provides that all officers and employees of the State Department whose basic rate of compensation is in excess of $8,000, irrespective of the Veterans Preference Act, Foreign Service Act and the Civil Service Classification Act, should hold office at the pleasure of the secretary of state. In other words, they can be fired.

It is a good start. It would be better if the secretary of state could fire any employee who takes it upon himself to set up a private policy and pursue it without the knowledge of the secretary of state.

Ambassador Smith says:

"To make my point clear, let me say that we helped to overthrow the Batista dictatorship, which was pro - American and anti-Communist, only to install the Castro dictatorship which was Communist and anti - American."

TENURE

What is this Fourth Floor? Smith describes them:

"The Fourth Floor consists of desk-men, as they are called. They are career Foreign Service Officers who frequently look upon political appointees as here today and gone tomorrow. . .

". . . The Secretary of State was preoccupied with Peking, Moscow, and Berlin. Policy decisions on Cuban affairs were determined on the Fourth Floor of the State Department, where influential persons believed in the revolution and hoped for its success. So far as I know, no definite policy governing our attitude to the friendly government of Cuba was set on the fifth floor (the top echelon of the State Department)."

This is the gist of the experience of an ambassador. Four other ambassadors reported regarding Castro and they got nowhere. Who in the State Department was permitted by order or by Executive instruction to keep from higher officials, including the President of the United States, such information? Nevertheless, there is ample evidence that there was knowledge in the State Department that Fidel Castro — not his brother or any of his friends but he, himself — was engaged in Communist activities in Bogota, Colombia, as early as 1948.

Ambassador Smith's book, "The Fourth Floor" is so packed full of direct and first-hand facts that it becomes clear to the reader why the past month of horror occurred in the Caribbean.

Widefield High Windup

By SHARON LOVELESS

A bulletin board for all school announcements has been set up in the lobby of Widefield High School. Each club and organization is allotted a certain part of the board for their news, announcements and a list of their officers. This method should cut down the number of daily announcements over the publice address system.

Widefield will participate in the competition for the Pikes Peak League Sportsmanship Trophy, now in its third year. However, ratings by each school will not begin until the start of league action in January.

College Night was held the evening of Dec. 4 at Widefield High School. Juniors and seniors from WHS as well as those from Fountain and Harrison attended the various meetings presided over by representatives from all the colleges in Colorado as well as a few from out of state. Each session was 25 minutes long, after the opening statement and greeting by Mr. Robert Poole, principal of Widefield. This was the fourth year of this joint project among Fountain, Harrison and Widefield.

The WHS newly formed dance band played for the first time at the dance sponsored by the annual staff after the Fountain basketball game. They are presently rehearsing some twist numbers for the journalism staff's Christmas Party.

The Christmas Party will be from 8:30 to 11:30 Saturday in the high school gym. Dress for this dance will not be as formal as it has been in the past. Suits or party dresses and high heels will be the dress for the girls.

Nominees for the title of "Miss Mistletoe," to reign over the festivities, are Donna Holzinger, Carolyn Byerly, Judy Stephens and Toni Gates. Voting will take place at the door that night.

Nancy Green and Mike King has been selected as Spotlighted Seniors for this issue of the Gladiator. Nancy is editor of the Spartacus, 1963 version. Mike is active in the WHS band and was recently elected to the PPL All - conference football squad.

The girls in the chorus have been looking over some special music to be presented in addition to that Christmas music being sung by the entire group. The first performance of this music will be at the Band Booster Club meeting Tuesday. They will also sing at the annual Christmas program Dec. 21.

The Senior Poll has been completed and the following are the results: Best All - Around: Art Barr and Donna Holzinger; Best Student: Bruce Chiddister and Sharon Loveless; Most Valuable to Class: Johnny Revious and Carolyn Byerly; Prettiest Eyes: Mike King and Kathy Swain; Prettiest Smile: Mickey Reiher and Toni Gates; Most Likely to Succeed: Gary Hawes and Cheri Sallee; Most Popular: Chuck Mangum and Lynda Hanson; Friendliest: Joe Cowman and Sue Wright; Best Looking: Rusty Henninger and Josie Guzman; Class Clown: Rober Weir and Pat Riggs; Best Dressed: Art Barr and Suzy Haynes; Best Athlete: Chuck Mangum and Judy Stephens; Prettiest hair: Craig Lasley and Nena Walters; Best Dancers: Lee Cheaney and Judy Stephens; Cutest Couple: Lynda Hanson and Rusty Henninger; Laziest: Roger Weir and Dawn Pinder; Most Bashful: Frank Martinez and Betty Fowler; Best Excuse Maker: Joe Cowman and Cheryl Hunke; Biggest Flirt: Rusty Wasinger and Jane Smith; Best Personality: Mike Buchanan and Bille Posey.

Divorcee Is Declared Innocent in Attack

BOULDER (AP) — A District Court jury deliberated two hours last week and found an attractive divorcee innocent of charges she attacked an aide to Gov. Steve McNichols with a knife.

Mrs. Patricia Anne Collins, 35, showed no emotion when the jury of six men and five women returned its verdict.

She testified earlier in the day that the knife she drew during a quarrel with John S. Carroll was intended for herself. She said she became hysterical when Carroll, married and a father, told her he could no longer see her.

Mrs. Collins said that, during a struggle at the Carroll home, the knife was deflected into Carroll's chest. The incident took place last July 23.

The 34-year-old governor's aide suffered a punctured lung, but since has recovered and attended the three-day trial. His wife was with him much of the time.

The defendant's attorneys, Charles E. Williams and Edgar Locke Jr., said Mrs. Collins has tried several times in past years to commit suicide. She formerly taught at Adams State College and has been divorced since 1957.

Three judges will select the contest winners from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Dec. 19. In case of inclement weather, judging will be on Dec. 20.

U.S., Britain May Not Be Aligned With Market

By J. M. ROBERTS
Associated Press News Analyst

Since announcement of the forthcoming Kennedy-Macmillan meeting there has been new evidence that the time may come when Britain and the United States will need to start contingency planning for nonalignment with the European Common Market.

Britain has denied that she has set a one-year limit on negotiations for market membership. But she is realizing she may have to return to her original idea of meeting competition instead of cooperating with it.

The British attitude is that while the negotiations are far from complete, no deadline has been set.

That's the way the United States wants to keep it. The United States wants an Atlantic partnership for economic confrontation of the Communist partnership.

That Washington attitude, while recognizing British interests outside the United States and the six committed nations of Europe, nevertheless runs counter at some points to British commitments.

The European Free Trade Association was the first British reaction to the organization of the Common Market. It attempted to group enough strength among the outer seven to maintain a bargaining position. It wasn't enough.

But Britain made her commitments.

Now there is a Common Market hesitation to deal with the Netherlands, Switzerland, Norway, Austria and some of the others until the terms of British entry are settled. That would mean forcing Britain to evade some of her obligations to these counties as well as to the Commonwealth.

If the Conservative government in London adopted that line it might give its opposition a scales-tipping hold in an already shaky political situation.

Britain is now seeking for herself and her trade associates an economic position with Europe which reminds, in some respects, of the political federation offer she made to France 21 years ago in the time of the latter's crumbling before the Germans. The British feel that France is not reciprocating the spirit.

Already it has been suggested in the United States, by Sen. Jacob K. Javits of New York among others, that failure of Europe and Britain to reach an agreement would force Britain and the United States closer together in a competitive position instead of the cooperative position with Europe which is desired.

There is fear that this would diminish if not destroy the American hope for an economic Western front to match the current military front, and eventually affect political relations, through Europeanization as distinct from Westernization.

Britain already is talking about reducing her military presence in Europe. The United States is pressing for greater European military effort as well as in economic aid programs abroad.

ALARMING PUNISHMENT

MASSILLON, Ohio (AP)—False fire alarms are an unpopular prank among the younger set these days.

Juvenile authorities say they haven't had much trouble rounding up youngsters who turn in false alarms. They're put to work on Saturdays, polishing brass or scrubbing floors at the fire station.

As for the effectiveness of this sentence, one juvenile officer says: "I've never had a repeat offender."

NUEROSURGEON DIES

Five CC Profs Get Grants For Research Projects

Five Colorado College professors have been awarded grants, made available thru funds provided by the college, for research projects.

Prof. Glenn Brooks, chairman of the faculty research committee, said the projects would be on vapor pressures, the manuscripts of Ambrose Bierce, non - linear optic phenomena, the James Gillray papers and the Prairie Falcon.

The recipients are Professors Lester A. Michel, chairman of the chemistry department; Lawrence I. Berkove of the English department; Professor Donald L. Herbert Jr., of the physics department, and Professor James H. Enderson of the zoology department.

Michel said he will use the grant for parts and construction costs for adapting pressure apparatus to measure vapor pressures of organic liquids at an extremely low range.

He said "precise measurements of vapor pressures at low range are needed to test the validity of the Antoine Equation in the low pressure region.

"The precise data needed to test this equation, derived from theory, are not now available," he said.

The new project, expected to take a year to complete, is related to other vapor pressure studies he has been conducting for years.

Dr. Berkove will study the mnauscripts of Ambrose Bierce in libraries in San Francisco, which house the largest and most important collections of the famed American humorist's papers.

"My project is twofold," Dr Berkove said. "First, I wish to locate and collect the original versions of the short stories which, in revised form, earned Ambrose Bierce his fame. The original versions differ in some very significant respects from those which were later anthologized, and constitute what I believe to be a major new field in Bierce criticism.

"Most scholars are as yet unaware of these original versions and cannot exploit them until the texts are made available. Second, I wish to study manuscript material, letters, and newspaper files unavailable elsewhere in preparation for a critical re - evaluation of Bierce which will utilize my studies of the original versions."

Herbert will begin his project by designing a set of experiments to observe non - linear optical phenomena. He said the purpose of the project "is the study of optical and infrared response of physical systems as a function of the field strength of the exciting field.

"The observation of these resources is of some importance both fundamentally and practically," the Colorado College scientist noted. "It is important theoretically for the unique information it would yield concerning non - linear phenomena in general. Its practical value lies in the possibility of the use of such resources for low noise amplification of weak signals in the infrared communications band."

Reinitz will be studying microfilm copies of the papers and drawings of James Gillray, an 18th century British cartoonist.

He will study the collaboration between Gillray and the circle behind the "Anti - Jacobin," a British weekly of 1797-8 which was dedicated to attacking the ideals of the French Revolution, the policies of its alleged British admirers, and the practices of the French Directory.

"My principal aim is to determine thru a study of Gillray's papers and his drawings the extent to which the ideas for his cartoons were suggested by the "Anti - Jacobin" coterie, and the precise nature of Gillray's personal and financial relationship to this group," Reinitz said.

Enderson is studying the breeding biology and winter populations of Prairie Falcon in the central Rocky Mountain region.

He reported that "76 Prairie Falcon nest - sites were located during 1960 and 1961 in southeastern Wyoming and north - central Colorado. Breeding adults were banded at 18 of these nest sites. In order to ascertain the shift of adult birds from one site to another, and the arrival of new breeding adults to long-used nest sites, an annual visit to each site will be made for at least the next two breeding periods.

"Also, if the visits to each site are made in mid - June, estimates of the total reproductive capacity of falcons in this region can be made. This is important in view of the apparently declining numbers of this falcon.

"Over 40 Prairie Falcons were banded during the last three winters on the winter study area east of Loveland, Colo." he said. "In order to determine the re - use of this area by these individuals the area will be re - censused during the winters of 1962-63 and 1963-64.

"During the winters of 1960-61 and 1961-62 numbers of Prairie Falcons seen on the winter study area differed greatly, with relatively few falcons entering that area in the latter winter. Future censusing will disclose whether or not this variability is normal or if the lower number of birds is indicative of a gradual decrease in the uncommon bird."

Mr. Shnoo's Zoo By LUCRECE BEALE

THE BLUE-SCALED SCHOLAR

"Where are we going?" asked Mr. Shnoo as he and Santa left Shnoo's Zoo behind and started down the road leading poor Honeybun on a rope.

"There's an elf in Santa Land named Dr. Kernoodle," said Santa. "He has a wonderful way with sick animals. I think he can help Honeybun."

"Oh, I hope so!" said Mr. Shnoo, rubbing his fingers thru the brown bear's fur. "But, oh dear, I don't think she can go that far. Look! She is staggering already."

Honeybun swung her hurt head back and forth. She seemed ready to give up and lie down right there in the road.

Santa said, "Don't worry. We'll go by sea — the way I came. It's a very fast and restful trip."

Mr. Shnoo got behind Honeybun and gently pushed her along. "A voyage should do her good," he said. "She was on a ship once before, when she was a cub."

"Blue-Scaled Scholar! What is that?"

"You'll see soon enough."

And sure enough Mr. Shnoo did see, for they came, by and by, to the end of the road and there was the river. Waiting at the edge of the river was an enormous fish covered with sky-blue scales. He was big as a tug boat and his mouth when he opened it was as large as a small front porch.

"Come in," said Santa and he led Honeybun and the astonished Mr. Shnoo right into the gaping jaws of the Blue-Scaled Scholar.

The mouth snapped shut behind them and Mr. Shnoo didn't know what to do. It was all so dark and scary. He heard Santa calling to him and he could see a light far ahead. He pushed Honeybun down a slippery, slidey passageway until he came into a lighted sitting room. The walls and floor were red and the furniture was quite modern with lots of comfortable sofas covered with puffy pillows.

There were books on shelves along the walls. Santa went straight to one of the shelves and picked up a book. It was called "Three Little Fish and How They Grew."

"He likes to be read aloud to," said Santa. "That is why he is called Scholar, I expect."

He sat down on a sofa, put on his spectacles and opened the book to Page 634. He began to read. The room started to move gently up and down as the Scholar moved out toward sea. Honeybun curled up on some pillows behind the sofa. She did not seem at all alarmed to find herself in such strange surroundings.

But Mr. Shnoo was very puzzled. He sank down on a sofa but he couldn't keep still. He kept jumping up and down and examining things.

Finally Santa put down his book and said, "Why are you so fidgety? What is the matter?"

"I have been thinking," said Mr. Shnoo. "I have never seen so remarkable a creature. I must have a Blue-Scale Scholar for my zoo."

Santa shook his head. "They do not live in captivity. In fact, no moral eye other than yours has ever seen one. If you tell anyone about it you will be told you were dreaming."

"And perhaps I am," said Mr. Shnoo, rubbing his eyes. But a moment later he knew he wasn't because the voyage came to an abrupt end. Mr. Shnoo stood up so suddenly he bumped his head quite hard on the ceiling.

The great mouth of the Scholar opened and Santa and Honeybun and Mr. Shnoo walked out. They were on the beach of a snow-covered land. Mr. Shnoo knew right away it was Santa Land because there was a big red sleigh waiting there and dancing around the sleigh were hundreds of tiny elves come to welcome Santa home.

* * *

Santa greeted all his little workers and fussed with them a little for being away from their work. Then he told them about Honeybun. The elves were sorrowful to see so sad a bear.

Gently they lifted Honeybun onto the sleigh. When Honeybun was settled comfortably, Santa and Mr. Shnoo got in beside her. Then each elk took his place on the ropes and all together they gave a mighty tug until suddenly — Zip! Away they sped over the snow.

Tomorrow: Dr. Kernoodle

Montrose Man Dies In Traffic Accident

GRAND JUNCTION (UPI) — Frank R. Broughton, 83, of Montrose, Colo., died at St. Mary's Hospital Friday of injuries received in a two-car collision near Grand Junction last Sunday.

The State Patrol said Broughton was a passenger in a car operated by Betty M. Broughton, 64, also of Montrose, which was struck broadside one mile south of here by a car driven by James C. Edwards, 23, of Grand Junction. Three other persons were injured in the crackup.

Denverite Convicted On Charge of Fraud

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI)—A Denver man who owns large holdings of range and farm lands in western Kansas was convicted in U.S. District Court here Friday on a fraud charge, according to Asst. U.S. Atty. Elmer Hoge.

Hoge said a federal court jury found Aaron Sell guilty of using false statements to influence the Commodity Credit Corp. and obtain surplus grain in 1957 under the government's emergency feed program.

Judge George Templar deferred sentencing pending a pre-sentence report.

Chuck Wagon Season 'Highly Successful'

The tale of the Jaycee-sponsored 1962 chuck wagon dinners in the Garden of the Gods area is a highly successful one, according to Junior Chamber of Commerce officials, who report the paid attendance of 20,700 persons.

The dinners were held this year on a five-nights-a-week basis during a 13 week season between June 11 and Labor Day.

In 1961, 12,464 persons attended the dinners, which were served on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Jaycee officials contribute the increase in patronage to the fact there were 20 per cent more tourists in town this year compared to the number present in 1961 and to the fact many tourists on their way to and from the World Fair in Seattle visited the Pikes Peak Region.

Price of the dinners this year was $2 for adults and $1.50 for children under 9. The money taken in on the project is returned to the community in the form of support of the 53 other Jaycee-sponsored projects, officials said.

The Jaycees are now considering holding the dinners on a five-nights-a-week basis again next year, and enlarging the Western type entertainment provided at the dinners.

London Paper Blasts Talk by Dean Acheson

LONDON (UPI) — The Daily Express said here former Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson's belittling of Britain is part of an American campaign to drive this country into the European Common Market "to provide soldiers for. . .the defense of Berlin."

Acheson aroused widespread indignation in this country by his remark in a recent speech at West Point that Britain's role as a world power is "about played out."

"What strange and clumsy pressure American politicians are bringing to bear on Britain!" an Express editorial said.

"Mr. Dean Acheson has been guilty of ham-fisted diplomacy, but he is not alone. Mr. Luther Hodges, secretary of commerce, is also guilty of it. Even Mr. Kennedy has been free with his expressions."

The Express said that even though some American leaders may dismiss Britain as a "decadent nation, dull in diplomacy, they know that Britain will fight, that this country can still provide fighting men."

Venezuela Objects To New Hilton Hotel

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP)—Development Minister Godolfredo Gonzalez has voided a $14 million contract under which the Hilton Hotel chain was to build a 22-story hotel in Caracas.

Gonzalez told newsmen Friday that the government tourist agency, Fomtur, under his jurisdiction, had failed to consult him before signing the contract last month with the hotel chain.

Gonzalez called the hotel project uneconomical because, he said, Caracas' lodging needs already were being filled by existing hotels.

BLIND RIVER, Ont. (UPI)—Four miners were killed Friday—leaving 19 children fatherless — when their car collided head-on with a trailer truck carrying 20 tons of steel on a snow covered highway near here.

Police said the car was flattened "like a pancake" when the cab of the transport rolled on top of it, trapping the dead and two other occupants.

Dead are Roland Gosselin, aged 37, a father of 10; Rene Charbonneau, aged 24, father of five, Henry Audette, aged 33, father of four, and Florent Tremblay, 29 of the best on the new listing.

Other popular ones are "The Tooth Fairy" by Anita Feagles; "Tongue Tangles" by C. F. Potter; "Ghostly Galley" by Alfred Hitchcock, and "Young People's Concerts" with records by Leonard Bernstine.

"The Nutshell Library" is a perfect stocking filler and for the purists, there is "The Real Mother Goose."

Of interest to Colorado Springs youngsters is Anne Terry White's "All About Mountains and Mountaineering", and for the student of history, there is the American Heritage Junior Library, some new, some old.

There are new editions of "Secret Garden" by Frances Hodgson Burnell and "Miss Blanca" by Margery Sharp, both nicely done in pink and green dust covers.

Old favorites, such as Grahame's "The Wind in the Willows" and E. B. White's "Stuart Little" are still choice items and the classics, published in inexpensive editions by Grosset and Dunlap, are big sellers, especially the Mark Twain stories.

Parents obviously can't resist most of these, so the clerks report, but they are buying "Happiness is a Warm Puppy" for themselves. The star of this charming little book is "Snoopy", considered by many to be the star of "Peanuts," the adult comic strip by Schutz.

Live puppies are also on the market, just yipping to be let out of their cages into a nice home. The Humane Society will also oblige parents with this gift line.

For the music student, one toy department offers a zither, complete with sheet music to make the listening bearable, and another shop has on hand a player-piano, also complete with music rolls.

And if the dimpled doll of the family needs one more doll for her collection, this can easily be filled. The fabled little trolls who are supposed to inhabit the caves, hills and like places are found in many shops, looking supernatural as all get - out. They're delightful and very lucky to have around.

Christmas comes but once a year, a good thing too, isn't it?

Peak Region Yesterdays

By DORA FOSTER

Once upon a time when the town was small and everybody happy, about the years 1921 or '22, two popular and energetic citizens of the community sought to improve the cultural conditions of the populace by organizing a "public speaking" class among the members of the ambitious men and women here.

Accordingly, E. B. Simmons, who from 1910 to 1929 was the general secretary of the local Young Men's Christian Association, and the Rev. Walter G. Schaefer, pastor of the United Brethren Church on South Nevada Avenue, put their heads together and, as the result of their unselfish thinking, organized a class that had for its members several later prominent business men and women of the town.

The class held its weekly evening meetings in the parlors of the YMCA, and Rev. Mr. Schaefer, who had come to this town in 1916 and was busily transforming a great hole in the ground on South Nevada into becoming a church and a parsonage, took over the class as instructor.

Among the members, Dr. Schaefer recalls, were Russell Law, Curt Goerke, Wheaton Heyse, Miss Winifred Pease, assistant secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. Employed as an assistant to Miss Pease was a high school graduate, Miss Elizabeth Belschner.

Miss Belschner's paper and discourse was found in an old scrapbook that was unearthed the other day from a trunk in the shed and as it was given by an early issue of the Gazette is as follows:

"The public - speaking class, which meets each week in the YMCA under the leadership of Rev. Walter G. Schaefer, has been bringing out some original bits of humor.

"The topics for discussion are assigned each week by the leader, and this week the topic, 'Married Bliss,' was given to Miss Elizabeth Belschner of the office of the Chamber of Commerce. Miss Belschner rose to the occasion, but not quite as was expected, and instead of speaking of all the joys of a married woman, she took another viewpoint and recounted the drudgery of preparing three meals a day for one year and the dish-washing incidental to such a number of meals.

"A portion of her talk follows:

"To an independent business woman (if she's independent she is still enjoying single blessedness) 'Married Bliss' looms up as just one round of planning and cooking meals and washing the dishes accumulating therefrom.

"Yes, I agree that the average person eats only three meals a day, but do you realize that there are 365 days in a year and 3x365 equals 1,095 meals a year? Very well then, 1,095 meals a year. In order to prepare and serve a meal it is necessary to use utensils, dishes and silverware. The following statistics have been compiled on the basis of 365 days in a year, three meals per day and two people for each meal.

"In preparing a meal the following articles are used:

12 P silver 1095 x 12 =	13,140
10 P China 1095 x 20 =	21,900
Total	35,040
Grand Total	42,705

"These figures are very conservative and have been reached only after the most careful observation.

"God made man
Woman makes bread
It takes the bread
That woman makes
To sustain the man
That God made.
But the bread
That some women make
Would not sustain any man
That God ever made
If they have to make the bread
Out of the dough that the man makes."

After about 10 years in the business world Miss Belschner married Murray Graff and without the aid of a dishwasher took over the task she had earlier decried. Her husband passed away in 1958. After living in Denver during all her married life, she has returned to be with her mother, Mrs. Lewis G. Belschner, 1342 N. El Paso St.

The houses are being built by Sproul Homes, with Willis Agency handling the sales.

U.S. Military Aid To India Said to Be on Its Way

By PATRICK J. KILLEN

NEW DELHI (UPI) — U.S. Ambassador John K. Galbraith reports that the first big sea shipments of American military aid to India would arrive within a month.

"Loading has been in progress for some days now," Galbraith told a news conference here.

Galbraith said he was flying to Washington Monday for his first meeting with President Kennedy since the outbreak of the border war between India and Red China. He said he would confer with the President and State Department officials on "military developments of the last few weeks."

(In Karachi, the U.S. Embassy announced that U.S. ambassador to Pakistan Walter McConaughy also has been summoned to Washington for consultations. McConaughy will confer with Pakistani President Mohammad Ayub Khan before flying to Washington early next week.)

Disclosure of the dispatch of large scale U.S. aid shipments came after Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru indicated in Parliament that India was nearing a temporary truct arrangement with Red China. But Nehru cautioned lawmakers not to regard the terms as final.

The prime minister also reported that the Chinese Communists had killed two Indian soldiers and wounded four others in scattered incidents in the two weeks since the Communists proclaimed their cease-fire Nov. 21.

Manitou High School News

By CATHY HENDRICKS

It was decided in the last Manitou High School Student Council meeting to post the minutes of all meetings on the bulletin board in the front hall so as to give the students better communication with the Student Council. The Council is going to try to get film strips of activities of other Student Councils. From this the students in Manitou should be able to have ideas for more activities at school.

The first Dress - up Day sponsored by the Student Council was Wednesday. Forms were filled out in English classes to see how many students participated in this program. Students having overdue books or unpaid fines could not receive report cards, but were asked to dress up anyway.

Cheryl Washburn and Sonny Spielman represented MHS at a League Student Council meeting, Monday. Sportsmanship ballots were discussed. Cheryl was appointed a committee of one to inquire about organizing a league cheer. The motions of this cheer would be known by all cheerleaders in the league and the cheer could be done during the half-time of the games. The next league meeting will be sometime in February.

Pepperettes met Thursday, Nov. 29, to learn several new cheers. The cheerleaders taught the girls some hard motions for these and other cheers.

The Lettermen's Club met Tuesday night and voted to change the style of letter jackets so as to distinguish members of the club from other lettermen.

The annual staff has been working to meet the first deadline on Dec. 17.

Underclassmen pictures were given out Wednesday. Pictures for those students who weren't here the day pictures were taken will be retaken at a later date.

The art classes are making three-dimensional center pieces centered around a Christmas theme. These center pieces will be given to the Colorado Education Association.

La Donna Fabian, exchange editor for the Prospector, has received exchange papers from all over Colorado and from several schools outside of Colorado.

MHS library is kept quite busy. Each week between 30 and 40 books are checked out. Many students are working for their certificate of commendation.

At the second basketball pep assembly the boys going out for either "A" squad or "B" squad were introduced. Larry Olsen coaches "A" squad and Rupert Sullivan, "B" squad.

MHS Prospector staff entered in the National Tuberculosis Association contest to help launch the TB campaign. For this contest some type of original news story, feature, or editorial had to be printed in the school paper. Three copies containing the article had to be sent to the National T. B. Association before December 14, the deadline for the contest.

The school cafeteria menu is as follows:

New Mexico School Signs Peace Corps

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The University of New Mexico has signed a $1.5 million contract to train Peace Cops Volunteers, the largest ever awarded.

The contract award was announced jointly here by the offiers of New Mexico Democrats in Congress.

R. Sargent Shriver, Peace Corps director, said the university was chosen for the year-long program "partly because it offers an exceptional faculty with a Latin American studies department and language training program."

About 980 volunteers will be trained primarily to work in community development programs in Central and South America. The first group of 65 starts a 12-week course Feb. 9.

The first eight weeks will be spent at the university, located at Albuquerque, and the final four weeks in field training — at Harwood Foundation and the D. H. Lawrence ranch at Taos, N.M.

Golf Course Fee Increase Highlights Council Agenda

The proposed increase in charges at city - owned Patty Jewett Golf Course will be considered again by the City Council at its regular meeting Tuesday morning.

The increase is being recommended by the Patty Jewett Advisory Committee. The council on Nov. 27 deferred action on the proposal after Councilman Harry Hoth objected to the operation of the course.

A special meeting was held last Tuesday night and the matter was referred to a committee, which will met in private session with members of the advisory commission.

However, the council agreed to consider Tuesday the proposed price increases.

The commission revised its original recommendation for a 50 cent green fee increase and is now recommending only a 25 cent increase. The new fee, which would go into effect Jan. 1, would be $2.25 in addition to the 25-cent-per-round expansion fee.

The annual permit fees would also be increased, with the unrestricted permit to be raised to $75 and the ladies restricted permit to $45. Other classifications would also be increased.

In other action Tuesday, the council will consider the following items of unfinished business:

Public hearing to consider a request by P. R. S. Associates to change the southeast corner of Cache la Poudre and Institute Streets from R-3 (two-family residential) to the R-4 (eight-family residential) zone.

Annexation of Pikes Peak Park Addition No. 3 by Sproul Homes Inc. This involves a 7.8 acre tract east of South Circle Drive about 1,600 feet south of Airport Road (second reading).

Annexation of the Union Printers Home Addition, a 245.77 acre tract southeast of Pikes Peak Avenue and Union Boulevard (second reading).

Annual tax levy and appropriation ordinance for 1963 (second reading).

Reconsideration of the total cost of the Fontanero Street underpass. James J. Murry, director of public works will have additional figures available at the meeting.

Coming under the head of new business will be the following:

Construction of the Blue River dam. It will be recommended that council approve acceptance of the bid by Northwestern Engineering Company of $1,170,000 to do the work.

Contract with Roy Tinsley for the shuffleboard concession in Acacia Park.

Consideration of the annual request by the Pikes Peak Hill Climb association for permission to run the race July 4 with a 25 cent per person fee to be paid to the Pikes Peak Highway and $150 to assist in removal of debris after the race.

Police Chief Hails Safety Editorial In Student Paper

Colorado Springs Police Chief Cecil J. McKissick has commended an editorial on safety which appeared in a recent issue of "The Gladiator," the Widefield High School newspaper.

The editorial was written by Carolyn Byerly, Gladiator editor. McKissick said the editorial "explained the difficulty in setting up an effective safety program by any law enforcement agency. The chief said Miss Byerly's editorial "sums up the situation very well."

"Everyone must make up his own mind on the subject of safety each time he gets under the wheel of his car," Miss Byerly wrote.

Sgt. Major T. Lee In German Exercise

172 Youngsters to Receive Toys Repaired by Firemen

A total of 172 youngsters in the Pikes Peak region will be a little happier this Christmas because of efforts by Colorado Springs firemen.

That's the number of wheel toys the firemen at No. 5 station fixed up this year in a cooperative effort with Christmas Unlimited.

The Colorado Springs fire department has cooperated and assisted Christmas Unlimited for 20 years in various ways, according to Fire Chief Fred H. Lausch, who organized the present system of toy repair for needy children.

All of the six fire stations in the city are collection points for toys thru the year. The toys are later transferred to No. 5 station at 2830 W. Colorado Ave.

The Lions Club also makes an annual toy drive, with most of the old wheeled toys turned over to No. 5 station for renovation.

In September of each year firemen at No. 5 station set up their work and repair shop and make these toys new for Christmas.

Lausch said the work is done only during spare time. Firemen must do their regular work, study and drill before they repair toys. Many hours of their own time are then devoted to repairing bicycles, scooters, wagons and other wheeled toys. Some firemen work until late in the night on the job.

"When the toys are finally finished and ready for some needy child at Christmas they really look like brand new products," Lausch said.

"We are happy to have the opportunity to work on a project like this," Capt. Gene Lake of No. 5 station said.

He and the other firemen who worked on the project include Capt. Chester L. Woolsey, Driver J. D. Espander, Driver Laurel Zeeschin, Firemen Charles J. Pribble, Gene Shoemaker, Tex Allen, Carl Loos, Gene Inzer, Barry Englert, Robert Warren, Harry Ahlgren and Don Fooshee.

All 172 of the toys were taken from No. 5 station to Christmas Unlimited, 13 W. Colorado Ave., last Sunday.

Included among the toys were a surrey and a bicycle. The surrey was scheduled to go to some large children's group and the bicycle was destined to start a youngster on a newspaper route.

Sfc. Keith W. Place In Missile Exercise

Army Sgt. 1. C. Keith W. Place, son of Mrs. Gladys Breeden, Route 1, recently participated with other members of Battery A of the 56th Artillery's 1st Missile Battalion in a one-week missile firing practice at McGregor Guided Missile Range, N. M.

Place's unit, armed with the Nike-Hercules missile, is regularly assigned to Brea, Calif., and is part of the nationwide Army Air Defense Command (ARADCOM).

Home Owners May Seek Damages From Dallas

DALLAS (UPI) — Judge Clarence A. Guittard has ruled that 42 home owners near Dallas Love Field may seek damages totalling $450,000 from the city of Dallas for taking and using airspace above their homes without their permission.

Guittard said he based his decision on a Supreme Court ruling that landowners near Allegheny County Airport at Pittsburgh, could sue for violation of their air space.

Tom Warren, attorney for the city, asked that the cases be held in abatement until the Civil Aeronautics Board decides whether Love Field or Southwest International Airport, Dallas-Fort Worth Field will become the regional air port for North Texas. The judge said he would rule on that later.

Guittard specifically ruled on the suit by Mrs. Fern Crall who lives north of Love Field. She sued for $11,000. The other 41 suits ask from $10,000 to $11,000.

English Teachers From Nine Lands To Visit Springs

English Teachers from nine foreign countries will be guests of School District 11 and the Air Force Academy Dec. 17 and 18.

The 13 teachers are studying at the University of Michigan and will tour the western United States during their Christmas holiday.

The group includes eight men and five women from Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Finland, Haiti, Japan, Mexico, Peru and Turkey. They are studying under provisions of the International Teacher Development Program administered by the U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare in cooperation with the Department of State.

The teachers, who are primarily interested in methods of teaching English will visit Wasson High School Dec. 17. They will be guests of the faculty for lunch and will visit English classes in the afternoon.

Most of the following day they will be at the Air Force Academy. After a briefing they will tour the Academy facilities, watch the cadet noon meal formation and have lunch in the Officers Club.

The teachers are also interested in visiting community projects, businesses, industries, and historical sites; in attending civic, professional, and service club meetings.

Other points of interest to them are institutions such as courts, jails, and police and fire departments. They are especially eager to visit American homes.

Miss Ruth Mitchell, District 11 supervisor of secondary education, is in charge of arrangements for their visit.

BRIDEGROOM WITHOUT SHOES

KEMMERER, Wyo (AP)—Richard G. Mudd, 21, of Rawlins, Wyo., makes the best use of his time.

Mudd and Mildred King, 16, also of Rawlins, went to Justice of Peace Ken John to get married. They caught John at his shoe repair shop. Mudd noticed the sole of his shoe needed repairing.

So John resoled the shoe, then married the couple while Mudd stood barefoot to wait for the shoe glue to dry.

By ED MORSE
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market this week stretched its post-Cuban crisis rally through the sixth straight week but the upward progress obviously was getting slower.

The week's rise was the smallest of the six. The list was beginning to show the confusing cross-currents typical of December markets when long-term profit taking, tax-loss selling, switching, and other transactions are characteristic of the approaching year end.

Clear-cut gains were posted for the over-all market on only two of the five trading days. One of these was a six-million-share session, the biggest volume day in six weeks, but it represented at least a temporary climax to the rally. Gains were clipped back drastically long before the close of that Wednesday session. The market went nowhere on the two remaining days.

Some Wall Street analysts observed that the economic fundamentals have not changed in proportion to the huge advance in the stock market during the past six weeks and that most of the gains could be attributed to a rebirth of confidence due to the solution of the Cuban crisis. In the week just past, sentiment was further bolstered by the fact that the Russians had begun taking their IL28 bombers out of Cuba.

Other news was somewhat mixed. Price cuts were reported for certain steel industry items and for aluminum. Unemployment rose in November to a 1962 high. The government estimated that spending on new plants and equipment will decline in the first quarter of 1963 from its current record level.

At the same time, Bethlehem Steel approved a $250 million expansion program in the Midwest. General Motors scheduled another Midwest expansion, at $55 million program to raise production of Cadillacs. A big jump in industrywide auto production was reported for November.

The stock market, reckoning with these various elements in the news as well as its own internal condition, produced 765 gainers to 560 losers, among 1,475 issues traded this week.

General Motors, the stock with the biggest capitalization of them all, emerged from the week with a sizable gain of 1¾. American Telephone, whose stockholder family is the most numerous, staged an upside breakout of a seven-month-old resistance barrier, climbing 3⅞ to 118½.

Douglas Aircraft was a casualty losing 1⅜ on news that its Skybolt missile may be discarded. Volatine Polaroid climbed 10¼.

Standard Oil (New Jersey) advanced 1⅝ as it and some other leading oils responded to investment demand.

The five most active issues this week on the New York Stock Exchange were:

Kaman Employes Get Cost-of-Living Pay

Kaman Aircraft Corp. employees received a cost-of-living pay increase of 2 cents per hour or 80 cents per week beginning last Monday.

The increase has been granted in accordance with the company's policy of periodic review of the cost-of-living index as established by the United States Department of Labor, a spokesman said.

This new adjustment brings the total cost-of-living awards to 4 cents an hour ($1.60 per week) within the past six months. Since the company established its cost-of-living review policy in 1952, adjustments totaling 39 cents an hour have been granted. Of that total, 35 cents has been frozen into the company's permanent wage structure.

On the whole, says the Dow Theory Trader, the market will work irregularly higher during December — perhaps faster going into the last few weeks of 1962 and the early months of 1963. The Trader recommends hanging on to a well diversified position for at least another eight months.

SOMETHING OLD, SOMETHING NEW—All decked out for the holidays, the Colonial House Coffee Co., 330 E. Colorado Ave., opened recently for wholesale and retail trade. Owner and operator is James E. Lewis, 3838 Meadow Lane.

J. E. Lewis Opens Coffee Firm at 330 E. Colorado

The display window has a box-shelf arrangement showing some of Lewis' antique coffee and tea pots (which are not for sale) and many new brewing utensils which are mostly imports from England, Italy and Japan.

Antique spice cabinets back of the counter hold bulk spices and herbs; an old copper wash boiler is filled with peanuts in the shell, and an oak teacart displays packaged nuts.

A handsome old coffee grinder, enameled red, is the focal point of Colonial House, which deals mainly in coffee manufacturing, including roasting and grinding. The shop specializes in four blends of coffee and besides its retail trade, offers wholesale coffee service to restaurants, offices and institutions.

Bulk teas are available in choices of English breakfast, jasmine, oolong, Darjeerling, coachman blend and lamplighter blend, as well as tinned types such as the popular Constant Comment.

Other sale items include candy displayed in old - fashioned glass jars, bread baskets, pepper mills, fruitcake, espresso coffee in tins, gingerbread men, tin tea canisters, spice shelves and raw peanuts for making peanut brittle.

Lewis, owner and operator, came to Colorado Springs five years ago from Omaha, Neb., where his family has been in the coffee business for 70 years in that city. He was formerly employed by Dern's Coffee Co.

He attended the University of Nebraska in Lincoln and was a member of Delta Sigma Phi fraternity.

Lewis, his wife, Nancy, and daughters Deborah and Jamie Ellen, live at 3838 Meadow Lane. He is a member of the Colorado Springs Junior Chamber of Commerce and attends the First Lutheran Church.

Article by Griffith In Analysts Journal

B. Barret Griffith, editor of the Griffith Letter and partner of Wood, Walker and Company, members of the New York Stock Exchange sicce 1869 and with offices at the Broadmoor Hotel, has an article published in the November-December 1962 Financial Analysts Journal.

The study written by Griffith has two points of interest to investors and speculators. First, the study shows that General Motors has been a very good stock market bellwether for more than thirty years. General Motors has indicated stock market trend changes more accurately than either many theories or stock market observers.

Second, the published article in the Financial Analysts Journal points out the fact that the ups and downs in stock market prices have been increasingly violent and the signals have been shortening since 1956.

GROCERY SALES UP

CHICAGO (UPI) — Grocery store dollar sales increased 36 per cent between 1955 and 1961 while the population increased 11 per cent, according to a Nielsen Review of Grocery Store Trends.

Simpson Garden Center to Open Monday on S. 8th

Simpson and Co. will open a garden center Monday at 416 S. 8th St. after closing its Uptown Store at 15 E. Colorado Ave.

Merchandise from the Uptown Store has been moved to the Simpson and Co. Garden Center, which will be managed by W. B. Williams, who managed the store on Colorado Avenue. At the new center also will be Arden Fisher, assistant manager.

W.B. WILLIAMS

* * *

The Colorado Avenue address was the site of a seed store for more than 40 years, first being operated by the Seldomridge Grain Co. Simpson purchased the Seldomridge company in 1945 and changed the store name.

Williams said the move to South 8th Street was made because of a need for more space. The downtown store is 17 by 60 feet in size, whereas the new location is 25 by 70 and there is space for a lath house and parking for a hundred automobiles.

The 8th Street building formerly was occupied by Gemco Hotel Supply.

Williams was born near Marietta, O., and came to Colorado Springs in 1916. He was employed by various businesses here, including Teason Brothers, before becoming associated with Simpson and Co.

He is a member of the Colorado Springs Nurserymen's Assn.

Johnson Pontiac Adds Two to Used Car Staff

Bill Pohlenz and Dennis Wilder have been added to the sales staff of Johnson Pontiac Used Cars, 736 E. Pikes Peak Ave.

Dennis Wilder, who is a newcomer to the automobile business, has lived most of his life in Colorado Springs, and attended Colorado Springs schools. He served as patrolman in the Colorado Springs Police Department for 4½ years. Previous to joining the Johnson Pontiac staff he was personnel manager of the National Advertising Company of Albuquerque, N. M. Wilder lives at 125 Cheyenne Rd.

Pohlenz has lived in Colorado Springs since 1957, when he moved here from Anthony, Kan., where he conducted a farm implement and machine shop business. He has had five years experience in the automobile business in Colorado Springs. Pohlenz and his wife, Alice, live at 1940 Roanoke St. They are members of the Christian Science Church and he is a member of the Masonic Lodge.

Mental Health Report to Be Issued by State

DENVER (UPI) — Gov. Steve McNichols said Friday a survey of Colorado's mental health program would be released by the National Institute of Mental Health before the end of the Month.

Dr. Robert Felix, director of the agency which is a branch of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, conducted the survey at McNichols's request after a Pueblo Grand Jury blasted the administration of Colorado State Hospital.

McNichols said he talked to during his trip to Washington this Felix during his trip to Washington this week but did not say if Felix would bring the report along when he addresses the 10th annual meeting of the Colorado Association for Mental Health here next Friday.

At his news conference Friday, McNichols also said he did not know that the 62 Club, an organization formed to raise money for his unsuccessful campaign for re-election, still was trying to collect funds.

UPI learned Wednesday 62 Club members received letters two weeks after the election asking for contributions to meet a "sizeable campaign deficit."

McNichols said he did not know the size of the deficit. The letters were signed by Bill McNichols, the governor's brother and confidential secretary.

McNichols declined comment on Gov.-elect John A. Love's $1,179 declaration of personal campaign expenses, an amount about a tenth of what McNichols reported himself Thursday.

The governor also said he "discussed" the possibility of accepting an appointive federal job during the Washington trip, but that nothing definite was decided.

"I'm not looking for a job," he said. The governor's term expires Jan. 8 when Love takes over.

There has been speculation that such a job would be offered to him. But the governor said only that he conferred with U. S. Atty Gen. Robert Kennedy and Interior Secretary Stewart Udall about the change in administration, and did not see the President.

McNichols also refused to comment about reports he was being urged by friends to run for mayor of Denver next Spring.

"I'm in this job until Jan. 8 and until I leave this job I'm not going to talk to anyone about any job," he said. "I'm thinking more these days about turning this job over to my successor and doing it right than anything else."

Embezzler Is Given Indeterminate Term

DENVER (UPI) — U. S. Dist. Judge William E. Doyle sentenced the former vice president and treasurer of Littleton Savings & Loan Association to an indeterminate term in federal custody here for embezzling $34,000 from the firm.

Doyle also ordered that the defendant, Harry E. Beattie Jr., 44, be given psychiatric treatment and ordered him to make restitution.

Beattie pleaded guilty to two counts Oct. 26. Beattie is a former investigator for the Colorado Savings and Loan Department.

FAA Rejects Lost Truck Idea In Plane Crash

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) Thursday discounted conjecture that a maintenance truck might have contributed to the crash of an Eastern Air Lines plane in New York City last Friday night.

The theory, raised by a source close to the investigation of the accident which killed 25 persons, involved a possibility that a ground vehicle driving through fog might have wandered across the runway in front of the airliner just as it was about to land.

But an FAA spokesman said a thorough check of all ground vehicle movements at the time of the crash showed there was none near the runway where the plane was trying to land.

LONDON (UPI) — When a bus driver got out to see why persons had flagged him down Friday on a hill, he discovered that a small compact car had become locked in his rear bumper and was dragged several blocks during the heavy fog that blanketed London.

Boxes Placed in City Area For Gifts for Mentally Ill

The cold gray loneliness that hangs over mentally ill patients at the State Hospital in Pueblo will be brightened this Christmas by gifts from Colorado Springs residents who drop presents in the big red boxes now in place in five different locations in and about the city.

The red boxes, adorned with the bell that signifies the Mental Health Association are now ready at May D-F, Kaufman's, Penney's and the sheriff's office in the courthouse in down town Colorado Springs. At Sears-Roebuck and Co., at Southgate, and King's Saving Center, 2727 Palmer Park Blvd.

Gifts, wrapped or unwrapped, may be dropped in the boxes, and will be collected by the Mental Health Association and taken to the patients in time for Christmas. If wrapped, the gifts should be marked as to their contents, for it is necessary for the attendants at the hospital to know for whom the gift's are suitable.

High on the list of desirable gifts are cosmetics and toilet articles. These may be as exotic as perfume, or as lowly as a bar of soap, tooth powder and shaving cream.

"You think of it and it is welcome," said Mrs Stuart Hinds, executive directors of the El Paso County Association for Mental Health, from whose office at 509½ N. Tejon St. this project is being directed, under the co-chairmanship of Mrs. Morris Guberman and Mrs. Lindsay Fischer.

Other suggestions for gifts include jewelry and clothing accessories, such as scarfs, hose, socks, or ties. Stationary has high priority to these people who are cut off from the world, said Miss Hinds, and, of course, cigarettes are highly prized. Wallets and small purses always please, she added, as is candy.

Writer Is Released By Korea Authorities

SEOUL, Korea (AP)—The ruling military junta released Hwang San-duk, an editorial writer for the influential daily Donga Ilbo Friday night.

He had been on trial since August on charges of publishing a false report. In an editorial he had opposed the junta's plan to rewrite the constitution and put it to a referendum.

Appointments Made To Colorado Boards

DENVER (AP) — Seven more appointments to state boards were made Friday by Gov. Steve McNichols.

He reappointed John P. Wheeler of Greeley to the State Board of Real Estate Examiners for a term expiring July 16,1965.

Also reappointed was Mrs. Evelyn Johnston of Denver to the State Board of Cosmetology for a term ending Aug. 19, 1965. McNichols named Kenneth Wheeler of Denver to be a new member of the board. His term ends Aug. 19, 1964.

A Pueblo consulting psychologist, Dr. John W. Neff, was reappointed to the State Board of Psychologist Examiners for a term ending June 30, 1965, and Alice Fehrenback, psychologist for the Denver public schools, was named a new member of the board for a term expiring June 30, 1964.

Two appointments were made to the Board of Registration for Professional Sanitarians. McNichols named Robert W. Dalliger of Durango for a new term expiring Dec 31, 1965, and chose Peter G. Stevenson of Denver for a term ending Dec. 31, 1966.

Curfew for Teenagers Proposed in Loveland

LOVELAND (AP) — A new organization in town is talking about a curfew and a code of conduct for teen-agers.

The organization is comprised of teen-agers. It's called the Loveland Youth Council.

Twenty youngsters from the junior and senior high schools voluntarily organized the council recently, with the support of the mayor, police chief, City Council, merchants and school officials.

They're drafting a constitution and began work this week on a code of conduct for teen-agers. There's talk of a code of conduct for adults in the future.

Council leaders say they intend to seek a YMCA program for Loveland.

Two More U.S. Denominations Propose Merger

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Two more denominations have agreed to join the most sweeping merger talks in the history of U.S. Protestantism.

The talks got underway early this year as a four-way negotiation involving the Methodist Church, Episcopal Church, United Presbyterian Church and United Church of Christ.

Responding to invitations from the original participants, the Disciples of Christ (International Convention of Christian Churches) and the Evangelical United Brethren have agreed to send delegates to the next meeting, which will be held at Oberlin, Ohio, March 19-21.

The Disciples have 8,000 congregations with some 2 million members in the United States. The Evangelical United Brethren have 4,300 congregations with 750,000 members. Their addition brings the total number of church members affected by the talks to about 21 million.

The goal of the talks, which sponsors acknowledge to be a long-range hope rather than an immediate possibility, is to form a communion which would preserve the best traditions of all the bodies involved—a church "truly catholic, truly reformed and truly evangelical."

The second Vatican Council recessed Saturday for nine months. More than 2,000 bishops who have been in Rome since Oct. 11 will hurry home to their dioceses to catch up on their work and prepare for the busy Christmas season.

The second session of the council, originally scheduled to begin next May 12, has been postponed until Sept. 9 for the benefit of missionary bishops and others from distant areas who felt they could not afford a spring trip to Rome.

The theological commissions of the council will continue work during the recess, preparing drafts of documents for the bishops to consider when they reconvene.

Today is "Universal Bible Sunday."

The annual occasion will be observed in thousands of Protestant churches with special services emphasizing the centrality of the scriptures to Christian life and faith.

Scientist Says Soviets Work on Small Bomb

STOCKHOLM (UPI)—A Swedish scientist who visited a secret Moscow nuclear research institute disclosed here the Russians are working on a "very small" hydrogen bomb that would have little radio active fallout.

Bjorn Malmgren, a nuclear explosion expert in his own right who helped develop the "black boxes" used for detecting blasts, said the "clean" bombs being developed in the Kurchatov Institute could be used for many peaceful purposes, but "naturally ... also have a military value."

Malmgren was one of the few Westerners ever to visit the establishment, which was named for Igor Kurchatov, father of the Soviet H-bomb, who died in 1960. He said another important project there is an attempt to harness the force of the H-bomb in a power plant.

China's three great religions are Taoism, Confucianism and Buddhists, while others include Christianity, Judaism and Islam.

Denver Quakes May Be Earth's 'Safety Valve'

By JACK BACON

DENVER (UPI) — Residents of the Denver metropolitan area may as well try to get used to a hitherto strange natural phenomenon—the earthquake. If it's any comfort, the wind still is regarded as a bigger threat to the city's new skyscrapers.

Seismologists, who have had a field day clocking the 144 tremors recorded since June 17, believe they have located the source of instability. They say it probably is a fault, or crack, in a rock ledge about 10 miles beneath the earth's surface that runs northeast through Denver to a point northwest of Derby, a suburban area northeast of the city.

The earthquakes, properly termed tremors, began to cause concern this week. Two of them—one shortly before 11 a.m. Tuesday the next shortly before 7 a.m. Wednesday—jolted residents of a wide area. The shocks were felt as far away as Pueblo to the south and Sterling to the northeast.

They caused minor damage, including cracks in the walls of some buildings, and prompted a sudden interest in earthquake insurance among home owners.

Nobody knows whether the area is due for a tremor that would cause major damage. The experts are inclined to doubt it.

The Rev. Joseph V. Downey, director of Regis College's seismological observatory, said he was inclined to consider the large number of minor tremors a good sign that the pressure generated by the rock fault was being dissipated gradually.

He warned that nobody can predict an earthquake, but said the long series of minor disturbances might be viewed as a safety valve for the tremendous energy caused when rock ledges crack in the never ending geological processes of change.

Dr. Jerry Eaton, geophysicist the U.S. Geological Survey at the Denver Federal Center, agreed "history and geological evidence" indicated a major earthquake is unlikely in the area. But he pointed out "this is a possibility one can never rule out for any part of the earth."

Father Downey said reports received after the second severe shock, on Wednesday, indicated a different portion of the fault was involved. All previous tremors, he said, appeared to be centered at the upper or northern end of the fault in the area northeast of Denver.

Wednesday's shock, Father Downey said, apparently was strongest in the area of Denver proper that sits atop the southern or lower end of the fault.

Father Downey said the fault apparently is a vertical one, that is, one of the ledges at the seam is "slipping" below the other. He said the San Francisco earthquake of 1906 involved a huge lateral shift, the ledges sliding against each other horizontally.

The priest said a huge vertical fault occurred in the dim geological past to cause what is known as the Golden fault west of Denver. A vertical slippage of some 3,000 feet occurred there, but seismologists do not know whether it happened all at once or over a vast span of time.

In any case, seismologists say, presence of the fault beneath Denver and the occurrence of tremors in a series dating from last June indicate there will be more of the same.

Jack White, Denver's assistant building inspector, said the city has no requirements in its building code to guard against earthquake damage. The reason, he said, is that the city is not located in a zone where such restrictions are necessary.

White said, however, Denver buildings must be built to withstand great wind stresses and that this precaution is considered sufficient to guard against damage from any earth tremors that might occur.

In addition, White said, Denver's new tall buildings have steel frames that can withstand considerable shock.

A Denver insurance company specializing in dwelling protection said only a few Denverits carry earthquake insurance. This week's jolts caused a flurry of interest in such policies, and some new ones were sold.

A spokesman for the firm said, however, most such policies contain 2 per cent-deductible clauses making it unlikely any loss claims would be filed unless future tremors are much more severe than those already experienced.

Steve Says He Was Not Looking for Job

The governor leaves office Jan. 8.

He reiterated at a news conference that he has not asked for any federal post and has not been offered any.

Asked by a reporter if there were discussions about a job during his trip, he replied off hand. "Oh, some discussions." But he declined to say who participated in them.

He said Dr. Robert Felix, head of the National Institute of Health, advised him that the report made by a survey team on Colorado's mental health program will become available "very shortly."

Massive Assault Planned by GOP On Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman William E. Miller won the Republican National Committee's applauding approval here for a planned massive 1964 GOP assault on Democratic strongholds in the segregationist South.

But among the 126 national committee members and state chairmen assembled here for a two-day post mortem on the November election, there were some who expressed doubts that the party would help its presidential cause if it fields Dixie candidates — as it did this year — who fly the anticivil rights banner.

Miller, who expects to stay on the job for another two years, was applauded when he told committee members not to be "misled or dismayed by those who are trying to give Northern Republicans a guilt complex over our Southern inroads."

He listed as inroads the election of 11 House members from Dixie.

"Our successes in the South need no apology," he said. "They are the product of hard and intelligent efforts on the part of people dedicated to the Republican principle of freedom and sound government."

Rep. Bob Wilson of California, chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, said the Republicans won their House seats in the South without "trying to outsegregate the Democrats."

He attributed the Republicans' victories to what he called economic conservatism, fiscal responsibility, and individual freedom over paternalism.

Some Republicans obviously doubted the feasibility of Miller's announced drive to enter GOP candidates in every congressional district in the South. There were 57 districts this year which the Democrats won by default.

While most of the national committee members agreed this is a laudable goal, some of them said in separate interviews that the party must be careful to preserve its position of strong support for civil rights.

In a mobilization plan for the 1964 campaign, Miller also projected special attention to big cities where the Republicans who carried outstate areas were defeated by Democratic landslides. He mentioned Chicago as an example. He said special effort will be directed at the big cities in Missouri, Michigan and Pennsylvania.

Ellender Did Not Do Homework, Says Reporter

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., had done his homework before traipsing off to Africa, he would have been better prepared for what he encountered.

Ellender was shocked and astonished in Africa. He popped off that he had not seen any part of Africa where Africans were ready for self-government. More, he said the average African is incapable of leadership without white assistance. Uganda, Ethiopia and Tanganyika promptly barred him as an undesirable visitor.

His sharply adverse statement falls in two parts. As for leadership, the average white man isn't much of a leader, either, although the white race can, and does, develop leaders of great ability. These great leaders attract and manipulate the masses of average white persons. So much for leadership and Ellender should have known all about it.

If he had done his homework, the senator also would have known that United States and United Nations policy is that African and other colonial peoples are not required to be ready to govern themselves before they are given the responsibility of self-government.

This contradictory policy has the endorsement of both the United States and a majority of the U. N. Assembly. It is in the record of U. N. proceedings on Nov. 21, 1961. It is, therefore, a policy of the Kennedy administration.

On that date there was introduced before the assembly a resolution to speed-up the effectiveness of a previous U. N. declaration on independence for colonial peoples. This resolution committed its supporters to this proposition:

"That inadequacy or political, economic, social or educational preparedness should never serve as a pretext for delaying independence."

That is what the resolution said. In simpler language, if a nation of colonial tribesmen is utterly unfit in all respects to govern itself, make 'em independent anyway, and let 'em thereafter fight it out among themselves at U.N. expense.

By its vote, the United States protected its world image as the friend and godfather of colonial peoples, especially Africans.

The U. S. vote also must have been calculated to please the great minority group of Negro voters in this country. American Negro leaders increasingly identify with the aspirations of African colonials.

Samoans and other natives of the Pacific islands administered by the United States as U. N. trustee do not have a great minority voting bloc in the United States. When independence was proposed last June for those islanders, the United States had a quick and curt reply, as follows:

Independence for the islanders would be premature. They were not ready for it.

Army's Future Leaders Schooled at NCO 'Campus'

A cluster of buildings just south of Ft. Carson Headquarters is the campus for future Army leaders. Jogging in double time from class to class are students of the Noncommissioned Officers Academy, which celebrated its organization day— Dec. 6, 1957— in ceremonies Thursday.

The academy completed its first five-week course in nearly two years last week.

When the Training Center was established at the mountain post last fall, an intensified two-week course was instituted to provide a staff of qualified cadre. The two-week schedule was continued this year to aid in the buildup of the 5th Infantry Division.

The next five-week course will begin on Feb. 8. In the interim the faculty will travel to Camp Hale near Leadville for two two-week training periods in winter operations.

The academy's emblem— the torch of knowledge superimposed on a sergeant's chevrons—symbolizes its mission: to develop within the noncommissioned officer ability, confidence, leadership and willingness to assume responsibility.

How to conduct himself if taken prisoner.

How to write messages and use field radios and telephones.

How to adjust artillery fire.

What to do when mines are encountered.

A unique element of the Carson academy's course is instruction in the basic elements of military mountaineering, including the mountain walk, rope management and rapelling.

H. G. (Pop) Sorensen of the academy staff is an expert in mountain climbing techniques. He coaches Carson's famed mountain rescue team, which has presented demonstrations on the towering rocks of North Cheyenne Canon near Colorado Springs every summer since 1946.

The successful NCO Academy student must not only maintain an average grade of 70 per cent, but also show enthusiasm and desire to complete the course. His diploma qualifies him to lead men into combat under any conditions.

Bus Rider Objects To Cutting of Tax

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP)—Tax cutting is supposed to be a very popular action, but a bus rider in Worcester takes the opposite view.

The unidentified man insists on paying the 10 per cent federal tax on his bus ticket to Fitchburg although the levy was dropped Nov. 15.

Restaurant Chain Notes Desegregation

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Howard Johnson Co. said it has shown "marked accomplishment" in desegregating its company-owned restaurants in the South.

In a management letter to supervisory personnel made public Friday, the company said that in only "18 of the 297 company-operated restaurants community action still imposes restrictions upon who may enter and be served."

The letter said that of the such restaurants, nearly one-third are located in the deep South.

'In Florida for example, our 66 restaurants are open to all who desire service," the letter said. It also said that 19 more restaurants were integrated this year in North Carolina, Virginia, Oklahoma and Maryland.

Referring to the 339 Howard Johnson eating places operated by local proprietors, it said only that they "function under standard license agreements defining the business procedures and obligations of both parties."

"We are confident that the trend towards moderation and desegregation will continue and we will welcome the day when there is no longer any local issue about it."

It said the policy of desegregation was undertaken with the cooperation of the Congress on Racial Equality and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Widow Is Awarded Damages by SIC

DENVER (AP) — The State Industrial Commission Friday awarded $15,884 in death benefits to the widow of a man who perished with two others in a spectacular fire Sept. 22.

The sum will be paid over a six-year period at $220.62 a month to Mrs. Edna Espinoza, mother of three.

The husband and father, Alex Espinoza, died of burns suffered in an explosion and fire that destroyed an auto agency where he was employed.

District 3 Plans 'Cottage' Schools for Student Influx

The District 3 School Board, Saturday approved a motion that a letter of intent be drafted and sent to Sproul Homes Inc., signifying the board's intention to use two of the corporation's new houses as "cottage schools."

The houses under consideration will be part of El Paso County residential addition No. 13, now under construction near the intersection of Cody Boulevard and Bradley Road in Security, and will be returned at the end of the school year to be converted into residential dwellings.

Richard Taylor, school superintendent, said the school would not need the houses until April 1, or perhaps later.

Special arrangements inside the houses would allow the rooms to be used as class rooms, and special toilet accommodations would be provided inside the houses.

Cost to the district would be interest on the money invested in the buildings' construction plus the expense of restoration at the time they were vacated.

Taylor said that it is expected the present schools in the district will reach a saturation point in April, but the board is not certain at the present time that this will be the case.

In other actions, the board heard a report from Carlisle B. Guy, architect, that the Talbot Elementary School is progressing in good shape and will meet its completion date, and that the junior high school additions were successful.

The board tabled for further consideration the decision of what type of floor materials to use in the new school gyms.

The board also approved a motion that transportation be provided to handicapped children in the district who live beyond walking distance to the special education class in effect in the district the past two years.

Dr. Thomas Slack, president of the board, said a total of 23 children are now attending the class, 14 living where distance is a factor. The vehicle to be used for the transportation would be the district's small suburban bus.

In another discussion the board approved a motion for a recommendation for reconsideration of a league classification forming a triple A six-team league in the Pikes Peak Area including Pueblo East High School.

Other items on the agenda approved by the board were:

The regular monthly list of bills for November and the December payroll.

The financial statement on the building fund account.

Payments to be signed from building fund accounts, including $12,229.53 to the Jolly Plumbing and Heating Co., $37,562.28 to the F. L. Davis Construction Co., advertising payments to the Gazette-Telegraph totaling $10.65 and Free Press, $11.47.

The resignation of three teachers, Mrs. Mary Pepe, Mrs. Lena Pfleeger and Beverly Reininger.

Two new teachers were hired by the board in November: Miss Elizabeth Fuller and Miss Margie Guthrie.

Soldier Jailed On Complaint Signed by Ex-Wife

A 22-year-old Ft. Carson soldier, Paul K. Gaudette of 685 S. 8th St., was booked in the El Paso County Jail Friday night after his ex-wife signed a complaint against him alleging assault and disturbance.

Sheriff's officers said they received a call at 6:02 p.m. Friday from Ulla E. Gaudette at 1209 S. Nevada Ave., where Gaudette was reported creating a disturbance. The officers warned him to stay away from Mrs. Gaudette unless he was invited to the home.

Gaudette returned again about 10 p.m. Friday and officers were again called to the scene. Mrs. Gaudette said her ex-husband had returned and tried to choke her. Officers picked up Gaudette at the 8th Street Trailer Court and booked him into jail.

Personnel selected for the assignment will be volunteers who have had some skiing experience. Their basic duties will be to foot and ski pack the 1963 Olympic Alpine-Skiing Camp. The will have afternoons free for their own recreation.

Parolee Charged With Stealing Truck

A 19-year-old man on probation from El Paso County Jail for contributing to the delinquency of a minor was arrested Friday afternoon and was charged with stealing a pickup truck from the Bel Air Motor Co., 1330 S. Tejon St.

El Paso County Sheriff's officers booked Victor Wilbert Nichols, 1133 Mana Dr., into the county jail for investigation of larceny and violation of probation.

Howard Clausen, owner of the motory company, told sheriff's officers Charles B. Dietsche and Robert O. Walters that Nichols had taken a pickup truck on a demonstration run about 4 p. m. Friday and had not returned it.

He was arrested in the truck with four teenage boys at 2700 W. Colorado Ave. Clausen said the truck had been driven 100 miles and the exhaust system damaged.

DIRECT COMMUNICATION — Jane Daum, secretary, operates the teletypewriter in the office of the Colorado Springs Realty Co. that provides direct communication to Trans-Terra Electronics Service in San Diego, Calif., and to 165 broker members in the western part of the United States. Springs Realty Co. Joins Electronics Listing Service

Colorado Springs Realty Co., 409 S. Nevada Ave., is now connected with 165 other realtors in the western part of the United States thru Trans-Terra Electronics Service of San Diego, Calif.

The listing service provides Colorado Springs Realty Co. with a direct line to the service's central library in San Diego, where listings by member brokers are handled electronically by IBM equipment.

Colorado Springs Realty also can get in direct touch with other brokers thru its teletype equipment, offering clients immediate information on properties available in other communities.

A. W. Horn of the Colorado Springs Realty Co. said that only large properties, such as subdivisions and land valued at $50,000 or more, are listed in the San Diego library.

Once a listing is submitted, it proceeds thru a coding process that translates listing information into machine language. It is then stored in the library, where it is immediately available to corresponding requests.

Trans-Terra Electronic Listing Service was started early this year and has an expansion program designed to establish the service nationwide. Colorado Springs Realty is the first Colorado company to have the new service.

The original idea for the system was conceived in April, 1961, and feasibility studies were made at that time. Months of consultations followed with IBM and the Pacific Telephone Co. Then a central clearing house was established for member listings and buyers and teletype equipment was installed in each member's office to distribute listing and prospect information quickly. The system was started Jan. 3 at a meeting in San Diego with 20 offices in San Diego County becoming charter members.

Horn said the new service has been used by Colorado Springs Realty Co. two or three times since it was inaugurated here.

Carson Engineers Use Axes on Trees Of Rampart Range

Future Christmas trees on the Rampart Range felt the blades of axmen from Company D, 7th Engineer Battalion, last week in Ft. Carson's annual forest thinning project.

The trees will decorate the U. S. Army Hospital, chapels, mess halls, dayrooms and will be used for other purposes at Carson and in 5th Infantry Division units.

A few will go to Army Air Defense Command headquarters in Colorado Springs.

Arrangements for the tree thinning projects are made thru the Post Engineer Management Agronomist Clifton Barr and Rocky Mountain National Forest. CWO Glenn Schaefer, 7th Engineer maintenance officer, was liaison officer for the battalion for the second year.

Second Lt. Allan Chilstrom and M. Sgt. Robert L. Wenk of Company D were in charge of the tree cutting project.

An additional tree, a 40-foot Douglas fir from Crystal Park Cemetery, Manitou Springs, will be placed as a Christmas decoration at Carson's main gate. The tree had grown too large for the cemetery and had to be removed, Schafer said, and was offered to Carson thru the Post Engineer section.

Study of American Agriculture Sought

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Consumers Cooperative Association, representing 627 units in 11 states, has asked for a comprehensive study of American agriculture.

Voting delegates closed the association's annual meeting Friday by calling for the study, recommending it should be made by representatives of agricultural organizations and land-grant colleges.

"We do not accept the position of the CED (Committee on Economic Development)," the delegates said in a resolution. "We believe, however, that the CED proposal highlights the need for a broad national study of agricultural problems."

The CED, a research and policy-proposing organization of businessmen, has said that two million persons should be shifted out of farming in the next five years.

Savings on Tax Discussed by Two Writers

By RICHARD A. MULLENS
and
CHARLES W. SCHOENEMAN
Written for Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

You will soon receive your 1962 income tax forms, but don't think that the tax die is cast for this year or that it is too early to plan for 1963. On both scores you may be wrong.

Since the tax rate may be cut next year, it might be well to reduce this year's taxable income where possible and postpone unrealized taxable gain until next year. You can do this by taking deductions this year to the greatest extent rather than postponing deductions until 1963. For example, if you are planning to give to a charity in the near future, then you can perhaps reduce 1962 total taxes by doing so this year.

There may also still be time to take tax advantage of the paper losses you have suffered in the stock market this year. To do so, you must sell your stock. An individual on the "cash basis" of accounting, as most are, must sell on or before Dec. 31 in order to have a loss in the year. However, if the sale will result in a gain, then the "cash basis" individual will have to sell on or before Christmas Eve in order to have the gain registered in this year.

Gains and losses on stock enter your tax computation in three ways. A net long-term gain (i.e., on stock held more than six months) is taxed at either one-half your tax rate or at 25 per cent, whichever is less. A net short-term gain is taxed like any other income. Any loss taking into consideration all your stock sold during the year is deductible from your regular income up to $1,000. Any loss over $1,000 can be used in the next five years.

One often mistaken idea is that all long-term gains on stock (i.e. on stock held more than six months) are taxed at 25 per cent. For the great majority of taxpayers, long-term stock gains are taxed at only one-half their regular tax rate, and, therefore perhaps much lower than 25 per cent.

How do you decide whether to sell your stock this year if a loss will result? The tax rules are mechanical.

Divide the stock you have sold during 1962 into two groups—that which you held more than six months and that which you held less. Compute the gain or loss on each of the two groups. Only the excess of one amount over the other for the year has any tax effect, so subtract one from the other.

If the result of the subtraction is a long term gain, then it may be wise to sell some of the stock you have not sold in the long-term category, if the stock would produce a gain. In such a situation, it may be unwise to sell some of the stock in the short-term category which produced a loss. This is because the long term gain is taxed at a much lower rate than the rest of your income. Therefore, if you take your short term loss this year it will be partly wasted against your long term gain.

If, on the other hand, there is a long term loss on stock you have not yet sold and it is greater than a net short term less on stock you have already sold this year, it may be unwise to sell the stock with the potential long term gain this year. Such a sale would use up part or all of a loss which would otherwise be deductible from your other income from salary or wages up to $1,000.

If you have held no stock less than six months the problems are still similar. A long term loss may be deducted from your salary income, but your long term gain from other stock will use up that deduction.

As a general rule, therefore, it is best to keep your stock losses in one year and your gains in another year, because you can offset up to $1,000 of ordinary taxable income with stock losses of either long or short term. If you use your losses to offset your stock gains in the same year then you are using them against income which is taxed at a much lower rate.

Taxes have been big news this year. Congress passed a catch-all bill intended to remove some of the inequities and abuses of the existing law. Although the great majority of the provisions in this 1962 Act will have no effect until taxes are paid for 1963, at least one of the measures will require immediate action by many taxpayers as of Jan. 1, 1963.

This is the new travel and entertainment expense deduction law with the greatly expanded record-keeping requirements.

Accounting Group To Meet Tuesday

The NAA, Colorado Springs Public accounting group, will meet Tuesday at Palmer House. A social meeting will be held at 6:30 p.m., followed by a dinner session at 7 p.m.

The program will be presented by practicing CPAs and will cover the revenue act of 1962. Topics to be discussed will include investment credit, entertainment expenses and other highlights of the new law. The addresses will be followed by a period of questions and answers.

Reservations may be made with Mahlon J. Bilodeau, P. O. Box 4377, by Monday.

CHRISTMAS SEASON—The Christmas season, despite the lack of cooperation by the weatherman, came officially to New York's Rockefeller Plaza last week, as the lights were turned on. Boycott Against South Africa Fails to Work

By HAROLD SHEEHAN

UNITED NATIONS (NEA)—The defiant, white supremacist nation of South Africa points up the deep weaknesses—but also the strength—of the United Nations.

Likewise, the British Commonwealth nations have turned the screws on their eccentric relative—with the result that South Africa left home. Last year it resigned from the Commonwealth to become an independent republic.

At this moment in the U.N., resolution is being piled atop resolution aimed at forcing South Africa to soften its white supremacist stand. Member nations are being urged to refuse trade with the country, to stop shipping arms there—in short, to quit having anything to do with this maverick in the world community.

But after the bluster has died down, the hard facts seem to show that very little will be done, and that reprisals against South Africa will not be effective because:

1. Economic sanctions work two ways—hurting the country which stops trade as well as the victim nation.

2. Nobody wants to back up some of the grand U.N. resolutions with human lives.

3. The more cautious U.N. hands believe that the problem will take care of itself in time—either because South Africa will see the handwriting on the wall or because—and this is a deep fear in the U.N.—revolution will topple the present government.

A high British Commonwealth diplomat confided that he saw little hope of success for economic sanctions.

"It is easy to talk of economic sanctions when there is no trade involved," he said.

And South Africa smugly understands the economic facts of life. Speaking at a news conference, Minister of External Affairs Eric H. Louw said that Britain and the United States, among others, were not anxious to lose "an essential source of raw materials."

Some nations are presently enforcing a boycott with South Africa, but Louw described trade with these nations as "chicken feed." In fact since the voluntary blockade, South Africa's international commerce has actually increased.

It is also clear to U.N. experts that improved native conditions in say South West Africa—under control of South Africa would probably have to be backed up ultimately with U.N. force. But with a pull-out of Indian troops from the Congo imminent there is precious little strong-arm power to back up U.N. wishes.

A resolution in the Trusteeship Council was just adopted 96-0 calling for a U.N. observer to be sent to South West Africa. South Africa did not vote.

The comparatively mild tone of the resolution accounts in part for the lopsided affirmative vote; and also illustrates the unanimity of opinion that something "should be done" about South Africa—but it also demonstrates the timid futility of action.

The Commonwealth diplomat discounted the effect of an arms blockade against South Africa.

"The country already has a powerful military force" he said. "An all-out arms ban would only help South Africa because it would also deprive militant native groups from obtaining guns and would just consolidate the government's monopoly on force." However Africa experts believe that anti-government groups would still have access to arms.

Is the U.N. then up a blind alley?

"I hope that something can be done" the diplomat said. "We keep talking to those thickheads—telling them that unless they clean house the dam will break some one of these days—and they will have a native revolt on their hands more bloody than the Algerian insurrection.

"If we in the Commonwealth can't talk to them nobody can—but I think they are listening and in two years I think there will be important changes within the country."

These words point up what may be perhaps the real quiet strength of the U.N.—a place to persuade; where things happen not always quickly but where they do happen.

Farms Signed Up for Conservative Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The agriculture department reports that 154,777 farms have been signed up so far to divert 1,684,852 wheat acres to conservation uses under a special voluntary 1963 program.

In a progress report on the program, the department said the winter sign-up period will continue through Dec. 14. Spring wheat acreage will be signed up early next year.

Acreage signed up for diversion during the two-week period between Nov. 15-29 amlunted to 745,704 acres on 54,245 farms with allotments or small farm bases totaling 2,300,780 acres.

The department said the diversion of 1,684,852 acres is nearly 40 per cent of the 4,266,256 acres of allotments or small farm bases on farms signed up to date. The small farm base applies to farms with less than 15 acres of wheat.

Farmers taking part in the voluntary program will be eligible for wheat price supports at $2 a bushel.

For the farms signed up, the department said, possible advance payments under provision permitting about half to be made this fall totaled $20,467,130. Of this amount, it said, $9,353,487 has been issued to participating farmers.

TO ESTABLISH MUSEUM

LEADVILLE (UPI)— The Lake County Planning and Zoning Commission said Friday it was seeking money to finance establishment of a national mining museum at Leadville. The commission has been working out plans for such a project with a research team from the University of Denver. Between $2.5 and $3 million would be needed for the museum, and the commission hopes to obtain it from foundations.

Peak-Climbing Professor Plans 'Hall of Fitness'

Prof. Edwin H. Paget, of North Carolina State College in Raleigh, who on July 15, 1962, climbed Pikes Peak four times in 19 hours (riding down) has written from Raleigh that he has established a "Middle Age Fitness Project," and that Colorado Springs has been selected as a possible site for a "Hall of Fitness."

The 65-year-old debating professor, who has climbed Pikes Peak 231 times during vacations in Manitou Springs, writes:

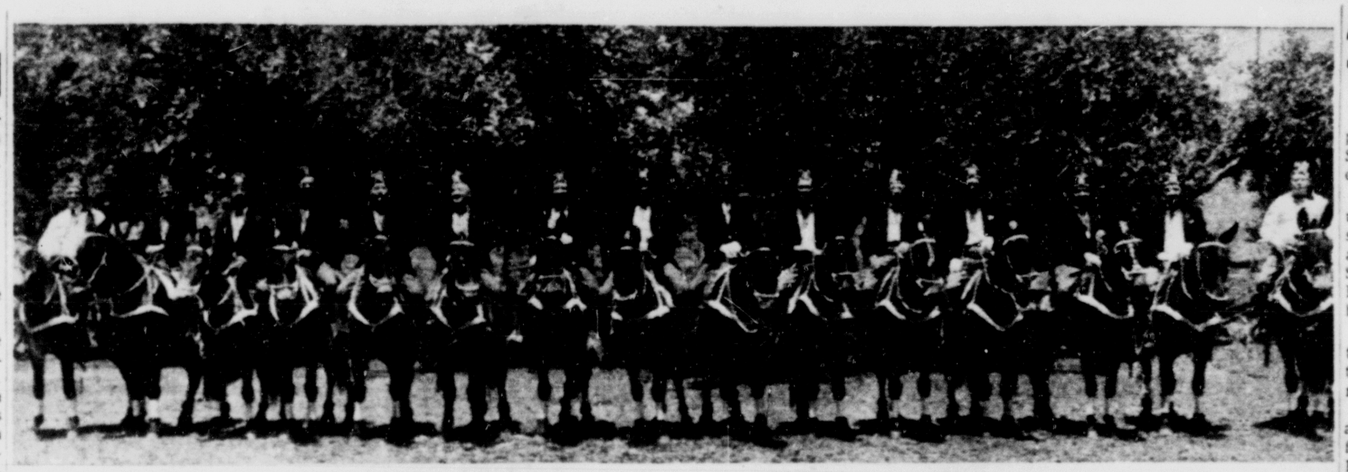
"All persons who can give proof that they have reached their physical peak at 65 will have their names inscribed in the Hall of Fitness. They need not be famous."

He says final choice of location of the "Hall of Fitness" will be made by mid-1963, partly by which city shows the most initiative is raising support and money for the erection of a suitable center, and by design for an impressive and distinctive building.

Cities other than Colorado Springs which he says are under consideration for the location of such an institution are Raleigh, N. C.; Chicago, Ill.; New York City, Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Dallas, Tex. He writes:

"Possible candidates for the Hall of Fitness include Paul (Hardrock) Simpson of Burlington, N. C., who recently ran 57 miles on his 57th birthday; Dr. Thomas Cureton; and Justice William Douglas of the United States Supreme Court, noted for his mountain climbing.

"Upon the establishment of the Hall of Fitness, honorary membership plaques will be presented to those who could have reached their physical peak at 65 if the objective had been set earlier: Alonzo Stagg, a runner in his seventies; Ex-President Harry Truman, a vigorous walker in his sixties; Dr. William Dudley White, the world famous heart specialist, who is an exponent of vigorous exercise for older men; and Joie Ray, former Olympic champion, now running the mile in six minutes at the age of 67."



TO PERFORM ON COAST—The Al Kaly Shrine Mule Train has been invited to represent the Pikes Peak area by performing at the Shrine East-West football game in San Francisco on Saturday, Dec. 29. The members and wives and those going with them will leave Colorado Springs by chartered airliner on Thursday, Dec. 27, and return Wed., January 2, after having attended the East-West football game in San Francisco, the Rose Parade in Pasadena and the Rose Bowl Game. The trip is open to anyone wishing to take advantage of the opportunity. Those interested should contact K. C. Wofford, 1221 La Veta Way, or Charles M. Jett, 669 Glen Erie Court, prior to Dec. 20. Al Kaly members have invited anyone interested to join the group for the week-long trip to San Francisco and Los Angeles beginning Dec. 27. The tour will include the Rose Bowl football game Jan 1.

Postmaster Says Early-Mail Plan Getting Results

Postmaster R. H. Wardwell announced the Shop and Mail Early Campaign is getting results. Patrons are already mailing large numbers of Christmas cards he said.

Wardwell has asked persons driving by or living near a street collection box to deposit their cards in these boxes rather than leave them at their home for the letter carrier to pick up. At the present time some carriers are picking up more mail than they are delivery, he said. Most mail picked up by carriers does not reach the office until 3 p.m., while collection boxes are picked up by truck and brought directly to the office for dispatch.

"Leaving Christmas cards in collection boxes will speed them on their way and lighten the load on the carrier's back, Wardwell said.

Thunderbirds Rope Cowboys, 58-52

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

West Denver and Wasson rivals in the football season for two quarters at the Palmer Gym Saturday night and the Thunderbirds were getting somwhat the worse of it. But when the script reverted to basketball following intermission, Dick Westbay's slick quintet quickly turned the tables and soared to a 58-52 victory, their third in four starts in the young campaign.

Once again the T-Birds, favored to win the upcoming South Central League race, found themselves in a bitter battle with a better - than - average opponent from the North. The Cowboys this same floor a year ago, had their match and for the majority of the first half the contest was on the brink of slipping out of control.

Three technicals and a considerably larger number of personal fouls merged from the bone-jarring clambake in the opening periods. Wasson was coming in second best in the strife around the backboards and the T-Birds were forced to play the majority of the second quarter with ace Karl Tait sidelined by three fouls.

It was a different story in the final two periods, however. Tait returned to help a Wasson surge on the boards and joined with sharpshooters Darrell Greene and Vic Shelton in pumping thru spectacular shots that propelled the local team into a steadily increasing lead that reached 10 points midway thru the final quarter.

Greene, on the comeback from slack early performances, led the way with 20 points and popped in some teriffic shots from around the goal during the second half spurt. Shelton added 14, several on beautiful drives, and Tait dropped 11. Bob Stanley, the veteran 6-4 forward, continued his improvement with steady floor play and three of five shots from the field.

Wasson took a quick lead on Ken Charles' jump shot seconds after the opening tip but the jumping - jack Cowboys, led by 6-2 Alvis Headen, quickly showed it was going to be a real scramble. Denny Snell hit a pair of free throws and followed with a field goal and Headen added a charity toss as the Denver team moved in front 5-2. Buckets by Greene and Shelton returned the lead to Wasson but West bounced back on top by 10-6 with 3:35 left. Two free throws and Greene's jumper with two seconds left forced a 10 - 10 tie at the end of the period.

The second quarter was a wild scramble from start to finish with the officials pressed to keep on top of the situation. Wasson led thru the early going but West took over at the midway point on a goal by Snell and had built a 24-20 advantage with a minute left. Greene's goal and a free throw by Ron Klopfenstein trummed it to 24-23 at intermission.

The T - Birds settled down to business in the third quarter, shelving the zone defense they had tried without too much success in the first half. Pressing the Cowboys into mistakes, they got the lead at 27 - 26 on Shelton's drive and then quickly padded the margin as Tait, Stanley, and Greene followed with goals.

From that point West scrambled continually to get back in the battle but could never trim the lead to less than four points. Wasson led 41 - 36 at the end of the third quarter and then swiftly ran the advantage to nine within a minute of the final period as Greene and Shelton dumped baskets.

With 3:20 left the T - Birds had command at 52-42 and were still nine points up when Westbay went to the bench for three reserves with two minutes left. Floor mistakes brought West within 55-50 with 0:37 to go but John Eastlack canned a free throw and Tait hit a follow shot from underneath to ice it.

Nebraska Nips AFA In Thriller

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—Nebraska forced the pace in the second half and broke away from a deliberate Air Force team to score a 43-39 victory in the home opener for the Cornhuskers Saturday night.

The Cornhuskers trailed 16-13 after a slow first half and took the lead for the first time at 29-27 on a short jump shot by Bill Vincent with nine minutes to go.

A small crowd of about 4,000 saw Vincent put Nebraska out of reach on a free throw with 21 seconds to play, giving the Huskers a 43-37 margin.

The Nebraskans took the lead to stay, 35-34, on a set shot by Daryl Petsch with 4:30 remaining.

Ivan Grupe hit on a layup to make it 37-34, then Roger Zoeller trimmed it to 37-35 with a free throw. Vincent hit on a three-point play to make it 40-35 for the home team.

In the last minute Zoeller connected on a jump shot, Petsch converted two free throws and Vincent got another. Rich Porter finished the scoring with two Falcon free throws.

The win was Nebraska's second in three starts. Air Force has a 1-2 record.

Charlie Jones scored 11 points and Vincent and Petsch each got 10 for the Huskers. Johnny Judd was high for the Falcons with 14.

Why Not Carle, C.U.?

Colorado University, which has been a stopping-off place for migratory football coaches in recent decades, has finally qualified for higher echelons. The office of college president has also been placed under the shuttle-system, which only goes to prove that at a large state university anything is acceptable—except a losing football team.

* * *

Quigg Newton's impending departure has been catagorized under the face - saving description of voluntary. This, of course, is so much hog - wash. Our state's last great Buffalo preserve has set a record for turmoil in the past 12 months. Whereas a spot like Cuba is satisfied with one major crisis for each dictator, Newton and C.U. have introduced turbulance into Colorado on a a mass production basis.

After unsuccessful years of operation under the theory that a change in football coaches cures all evils, C.U.'s restless alums have pooled their trading stamps for a plunge into a more select area of bartering. In short, regardless of Newton's "resignation", we'd bet the present purge is merely starting at the top where it should have previously. If it bypasses the athletic director's office it will only prove that a few twinges of sentiment have survived.

JERRY CARLE
'Just His Size'

* * *

When the news filtered southward early this week that Dr. Louis Benezet of Colorado College might be next in line for the sacrificial throne at Boulder, it provoked mixed emotions. Unquestionably an administrator of great skill in most fields of college life, Benezet would appear to be the personality and firm hand that C.U. needs.

But there remains the fact that much of the hubbub in Buffaloland, altho certainly not all, has come from the locker rooms. One then glances at CC's collapsing athletic plant and wonders how Benezet will persuade the glowering "big timers" that under his guidance C.U. can be returned to health.

After some thought, the answer is simple. CC is presently operating under a "no - policy" plan which condems athletic subsidization on one the hand while it is feeding certain groups with the other. Recent outbursts against athletics at CC have not come from the president's chambers.

Dr. Benezet, whose many manuevers suggest that he is a man not devoid of ambition, will be able to adjust himself to the athletic requirements of a "big time" university. Or more explicitly —the requirements of its alumni.

There are a lot of funny things that happen around CC and this column has gone to some ends in exploiting them. One suggestion, made in good fun the other day by a person connected with the college, suddenly seemed like one of the brighter ideas we've heard.

Since C.U. is apparently invading the local campus in quest of a president, it could do itself another service by filling the vacant football coaching job at the same time!

Realizing that Jerry Carle's 1-7-1 record in the season just past isn't likely to attract too many offers, we still make this suggestion in all seriousness. Without fit him.

There's an old - time story told about the coach who was pumping his team full of pre - game inspiration for what appeared as an impossible task.

The effect was lessened somewhat when one tiny tackle said, "We know that coach — but they are four sizes bigger."

Jerry Carle has long been a man in a job four sizes too small. The C.U. post would just about

Low Blow Kayo . . .

Griffith Retains Crown In Controversial Bout

By BOB MYERS
Associated Press Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—World welterweight champion Emile Griffith hung onto his title Saturday night after a tumultuous ninth round in which he scored a technical knockout over Jorge Fernandez of Argentina on a low blow that left the crowd in the Las Vegas Convention Center in an uproar.

The champion from New York was awarded the fight when the challenger decided he could not continue after a blow to the groin felled him.

In what had been a bruising and close fight, Griffith was ahead on points at the end of the eighth round.

Fernandez crumpled quickly to the mat and rolled over in obvious agony.

Griffith retreated to his corner and then a stormy scene developed in the ring.

At one stage the fallen fighter was completely alone as his manager, Frankie Jacobs, and chief handler, Chickie Ferrara, rushed to the side of the ring to argue with the chairman of the Nevada Boxing Commission, Jim Deskin.

Deskin had to pull out his rule book and thumb through the chapters as the crowd kept up an uproar and Fernandez remained prostrate.

On the advice of the commission physician, Dr. Donald Romeo, and under the rules, Fernandez was given five minutes to recover.

Additional time would have been given but Fernandez himself weakly said he was unable to continue.

Under the Nevada regulations, when a fight is ended by an accidental punch of this sort, the fighter ahead on points receives the victory.

After eight rounds, the referee had Griffith ahead by three points. Judge John Romero had it even and the other judge, Bill Stremmel, had the Champion in front by three points.

Griffith had floored Fernandez in the seventh round with an overhand right to the jaw. It was almost like a delayed reaction as the 27-year-old Argentine hit the canvas a split-second after the punch landed.

The mandatory eight-count rule was in effect but the crowd set up a roar of disapproval because Fernandez regained his feet almost as quickly as he hit the floor.

The national television audience was probably as confused as the crowd here when the long debate began on what to do and how to judge the finish.

It was Deskin who finally instructed the referee on the proper procedure and also told the ring announcer, Dick Porter, of the exact announcement to be made.

Most of the announcer's words were drowned out and minutes passed before the official time of the knockout was ascertained. It was 1 minute, 34 seconds of the ninth.

This was the third fight between the two and the third time the match wound up in a rhubarb.

In 1960, they fought twice and Griffith was awarded decisions in both 10-round fights. Fernandez complained the split decision was unfair in the first fight and, oddly enough, it was a low blow by Fernandez in the second fight that decided the verdict in favor of Griffith. The blow cost Fernandez a final round that could have meant victory had it not been ruled foul.

This was the second defense of the title by Griffith since he regained the championship in his tragic and fatal knockout over Benny (Kid) Paret in New York last March. Paret died from the effects of the punishment he received.

In his dressing room Saturday night, Griffith said of the controversial ending:

"I hit him a clean right hand to the stomach. I don't think Fernandez wanted to win the title very bad."

When the trainers removed Fernandez' trunks, they saw an ugly red welt in the area of the lower groin. Fernandez was writhing in pain on the table.

North Denver Nips Tribe In Final Seconds, 40-39

DENVER—Palmer's luckless Terrors saw a game-long lead evaporate in the final seconds here Saturday night as they dropped a 40-39 decision to host North Denver in the championship contest of the annual North Denver Tournament.

Pueblo Central, another South Central League team, had earlier taken third place by winning the consolation game from Golden, 37-32.

Before a sparse crowd, the Terrors of Gerry Schroeder turned in the best half of ball of the young season in running up a 30-25 lead at intermission. But then the frequent shooting drouth set in again as North slowly crept closer to finally pull it out on a 12 foot jump shoot by 6-4 Tim Cole with only nine seconds remaining.

Palmer ran up a 14-9 lead in the first period, forging ahead at the five minute point, and appeared on its way to a victory. The Terrors' floor game was the steadiest it had been and the team was finally getting successful outside shooting by Walt Hylton, Dave Steward, and Pat Berkheim.

The two teams matched baskets in a 16 point second quarter but in the third period the Terrors turned back to a more deliberate style and their floorwork suddenly came apart. Neither team had much going offensively but North did creep to within 35-33 at the break.

In the final period the Terrors started to freeze with five minutes left but still made continual mistakes against a desperate North press. With three minutes left the Tribe still led at 39-36 and managed to control the ball until the minute mark. Then, after Bobby Joe Williams had missed on a one-and-one, Cole was fouled and sank both of his free throws to bring his host team within a point.

Lennis Ashford led the winners with 17 points and Cole added 16. Hylton and Steward both sank 10 for the Terrors.

The loss was the third in four games for the Tribe. Palmer opens SCL play next Friday at Grand Junction.

Academy High Streak Ends; St. Mary's Tops Cheyenne

Air Academy High ended its unbeaten string after three straight early non-league victories in Pikes Peak League action Saturday night. The Kadets, top challengers to Salida's defending champions role, were dropped by Pueblo Catholic, 47-39, in Pueblo.

In other games, St. Mary's slipped past Cheyenne Mountain as the Pirates invaded the PPL for a second straight night, defeating the Indians on ther home floor, 56-50. Rocky Ford dropped Florence, 49-41; Leadville nipped Del Norte, 42-40; and Widefield beat Iver Ranum of Denver, 59-53.

Brink Spear, the son of Air Force Academy coach Bob Spear, came up with 12 points for Academy High, but it wasn't quite enough as the Kadets fell before multiple violations and Wes Bell's 18-point production for the Shamrocks. Catholic lead at halftime, 22-14.

Big John O'Connell pumped home 25 points in leading St. Mary's over a stubborn Cheyenne five. But it took a 21-point spree in the fourth period for the Pirates to manage the win. Mickey Elliott had 11 for the Bucs, and Raines topped Cheyenne with 21 with Sid Ridelhuber following with 13.

Leadville rode a two-point halftime lead thru the final periods for its win, but Florence wasn't quite as fortunate as the Huskies gave away a 26-21 intermission margin to Rocky Ford's final rally.

Cincy Tops Falcon Swimmers, 52-43

Cincinnati University, one of the top swimming teams in the country, gained a narrow 52-43 victory over the Air Force Academy in Saturday night's meet at the Academy pool. Three records were broken in the meet, two of them by the Cadets which were both pool and school marks.

Colorado Scrambles at End To Nip Northwestern, 69-64

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Colorado's unbeaten Buffaloes built an early 12-point lead and had to scramble in the second half Saturday night to preserve a 69-64 basketball victory over Northwestern's Wildcats.

The Big Ten team, previously unbeaten, closed to within three points at the final gun but Colorado's Ken Charlton added a pair of free throws after time ran out.

Colorado took command in the first three minutes and built a 27-15 lead late in the first half before Northwestern began closing the gap on the sharpshooting of 6-3 Rick Lapossa. It was 35-30 at the intermission.

Charlton and 6-8 Jim Davis led a Colorado surge that moved the defending Big Eight champions on top 49-38 midway of the second period.

But Lapossa and Johnny Miller fired back for the Wildcats and Lapossa's shot made it 62-59 with four minutes remaining.

The teams traded baskets until the end as Northwestern failed in a late drive to catch the Buffs.

Northwestern outshot Colorado from the floor, 27 to 23, but the Buffs canned 23 free throws to make up the difference. The invaders hit 27 of 63 buckets for 43 per cent to Colorado's 23 of 46 for 50 per cent.

The Wildcats had a 37-36 edge in rebounds, with Phil Keeley pulling down eight. Davis collected 10 for Colorado.

Charlton, a 6-6 senior, had 21 points and Davis 22 for Colorado. Lapossa drilled 19 for Northwestern.

Bill Collins Keeps Lead In Gables

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (UPI)—Big Bill Collins, who complained "I can't do anything right," kept the lead in the $20,000 Coral Gables Open Golf Tournament Saturday with a neat 69 and a 54-hole total of 202.

But breathing down the six-foot-four former Marine's brawny neck with peppery little Gardner Dickinson Jr., a precision putter from Dothan, Ala., who fires a four-under par 67 for a total of 203, one stroke off the pace.

Three strokes behind Dickinson were bespectacled Mason Rudolph and Rex Baxter Jr. Rudolph turned in a 67 and Baxter a 69, both for 206 totals going into Sunday's final round.

Al Kelley of Orlando, Fla., first round leader who was tied for second with Dickson Friday, fell back to a four-way tie at 208 after a one-over-par 72.

The 210-pound Collins lopped two strokes from par, but said he could have done better had his putting been more accurate. A powerful driver from Crystal River, Fla., Collins placed his approach shots well on the palm-dotted Biltmore Golf course. He racked up five birdies.

Palmer Icers Defeat Danes In City League

The victory evened the Terrors' record at 1-1 after an opening game loss to Cheyenne Mountain last Monday.

Palmer went ahead on first period goals by Fred Gloss and Chuck Reinkling and then poured it on in the second period. Reinkling completed a hat trick with a pair of tallies in this stanza and Gloss and Doug Swayne added two more.

Denver Washington Wins In AFA Prep Swim Meet

Washington High School of Denver won the second annual Air Force Academy High School Invitational Swimming and Diving Relays Saturday in a duel with cross-town rival, Denver South. Washington scored 77 points to South's 50 in the final standings.

Other schools entered and the standings were: Washington, 77; South, 50; East Denver, 34; Wasson, 30; Cherry Creek, 22; Palmer, 19; Thomas Jefferson of Denver, 18; Littleton, 15; Englewood, 8; Denver Lincoln, 7; and North Denver, 6.

New meet records were set in every one of the events, with relays champion Washington setting four of the new marks. Events and the records are as follows:

What's This?

CU's Grid Merry-Go-Round Top Story In Colorado During the Past Year

By LOUDON KELLY
Associated Press Sports Writer

DENVER (AP) — Considering its been the talk of the state from March to December, the football coaching merry-go-round at the University of Colorado must rate as this area's top sports story for 1962.

Losing two head coaches inside nine months must be something of a record for a major university.

This year also was noteworthy for the opening of the Air Force Academy's new football stadium, the World Hockey Tournament, pro football's big charge in Denver after two lackluster years, and the Denver Bears' move into the Pacific Coast League for next year's baseball season as the American Association perished.

Last March 17, Sonny Grandelius, who had piloted Colorado to the Big Eight championship and thence into the Orange Bowl against Louisiana State (LSU) 25-7), was dismissed by the regents for violating recruiting rules.

His successor was William (Bud) Davis, CU director of alumni relations, whose only coaching had been with high school teams. Davis resigned Nov. 24 at the close of the university's worst season in history (2-8), but he finished on a drumbeat of triumph at that. The Buffaloes crumpled favored Air Force 34-10 the day Davis resigned.

Led by a new coach in husky Jack Faulkner, the Denver Broncos fired the imagination of sports fans here by winning six of their first seven games in the American Football League.

Though the Broncos lost a lot of their fire later and must beat favored Dallas Sunday to achieve an 8-6 record, they drew bigger crowds than for the first two AFL seasons here put together. The record was 34,496 watching Denver beat Houston 20-10 on Oct. 21, the largest sports gathering in the city's history.

The Air Force Academy put in a determined bid for a share of the sports spectator's dollar with its glossy new football arena where the Falcons met — and lost to — such major foes as Oregon, Miami and Baylor. The cadets upset UCLA at Los Angeles as the high point of their 5-5 season.

Followers of the Denver Bears will get an entirely new shake next season. Besides switching to a different league, the ball club shifted affiliation from the Detroit Tigers to the Milwaukee Braves.

Jack Tighe, who was manager at Louisville last season, will be the skipper and will have a number of his Louisville players.

The World Hockey Tournament, held in the United States for the first time, attracted 14 teams to games in Colorado Springs and Denver. Sweden won the Group A title and Japan the Group B crown, both going undefeated.

A lot of luster was wiped from this tournament when a travel permit was denied the East Germany team and Russia and Czechoslovakia, both with powerful teams, boycotted the international event in reprisal.

The state's biggest golf attractions of the year were the Curtis Cup Match at Colorado Springs' Broadmoor course and the $30,000 Denver Open at the Denver Country Club.

The U.S. women's team handed the British girls an 8-1 licking, the worst in the history of the Curtis Cup competition. Bob Goalby won the Denver tourney with a 3-under-par 277 for 72 holes.

Les Fowler of Boulder captured the Colorado Golf Association's medal play tourney with 280, which was 8 under par. The association's match play title was won by Ray Pierson, who defeated Tom Reed 1 up in the finals.

Joan Birkland of Denver, who also has played basketball and softball in her career, won both the Colorado women's golf and tennis championships for the second time in three years.

Two heavyweight prize fights were staged in Denver in 1962 with Zora Folley of Chandler, Ariz. winning both. He knocked out Mike DeJohn in the third roud in February and came back in August for a decision over Doug Jones, a tough light-heavyweight, in 10 rounds.

Denver University, after winning the national collegiate hockey championship as well as the Western College Hockey Association crown in 1961, slipped to third in the league with an 11-7 record. Colorado College finished last in the seven-college circuit, losing all 18 league games.

Two long-time rivals, Phillips and Denver, collided in the finals of the National AAU Basketball Tournament with the talented Oklahoma Oilers rolling to a 70-59 triumph.

In college track and field competition, the University of Colorado won the 38th annual Colorado Relays as well as the Rocky Mountain AAU meet.

Brigham Young captured its eight consecutive championship in the final meet held in the Skyline Conference, which folded after losing four of its teams to the new Western Athletic Conference. Colorado State College won the Rocky Mountain Conference games, held for the 53rd time.

On the high school front, championships were well divided with no major school winning more than one.

East Denver brought home the Class AAA football diadem by outscoring Lakewood 28-20 in the season's finale. Greeley beat Manual of Denver 64-57 for the basketball title.

Manual won its second straight Class AAA track and field championship by a martin of 7½ points. Montrose swept the title in Division I of high school wrestling, and Steamboat Springs won the laurels in Division II. Grand Junction outslugged Colorado Springs Wasson 12-8 for the baseball championship.

In state parochial competition, St. Mary's of Colorado Springs won its first state crown by edging Pueblo Catholic 14-13. St. Mary's also bid for the parochial basketball trophy, but lost to Regis of Denver 41-33.

Colorado's racetracks collected the high dollar with pari-mutuel wagering reaching $55,152,722. This was a gain of almost $2 million from 1961, even though there were seven fewer racing days.

UCLA Lead Wiped Out . . .

Macky's Long Run Nets Victory for Syracuse

By ART SPANDER

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — John Mackey's 40 - yard touchdown sprint on a punt return with five minutes to play Saturday gave mistake-plagued Syracuse a come-from-behind, 12-7 victory over UCLA.

The victory was achieved with surprising suddenness after the Orangemen stopped themselves throughout the day on fumbles and interceptions. A national television audience watched, but there were only 14,485 fans in the 102,000-seat Coliseum.

UCLA, leading 7-6 since late in the opening quarter, punted on a third-down and 25 situation from its own nine-yard line in the fourth period. The line drive kick was taken by Mackey at full speed and he slipped from the arms of several would-be Bruin tacklers to score.

The touchdown saved Syracuse coach Floyd (Ben) Schwartzwalder from his first losing season since 1949 as the Orangemen closed the year with a 5-5 record. However, UCLA finished with a 4-6 mark and the Bruins were stuck with their first losing year since 1958.

Syracuse, though behind most of the game, dominated play completely. Syracuse held UCLA to minus 37 yards rushing and rolled up 19 first downs to the Bruins' 8.

However, three fumbles — including one on the goal line by Mackey in the opening minute of the fourth quarter — and two interceptions killed one Syracuse march after another.

After an exchange of punts in the first quarter the Orange marched 59 yards in nine plays, with Don King sweeping 3 yards to the touchdown.

But the Bruins came right back and put their lone drive together on three long passes and a penalty against Syracuse. The touchdown came on a 22-yard toss by quarterback Carl Jones that was kicked into the air by a Syracuse defense man and caught in the end zone by UCLA's Dan Ghormley.

When Larry Zeno kicked the extra point the Bruins took a 7-6 lead with 12:21 gone in the opening period.

UCLA	7	0	0	0	— 7
Syracuse	6	0	0	6	—12

Scoring:
Syr—D. King 3 run (kick failed)
UCLA — Ghormley 22 pass from Jones (L. Zeno kick)
Syr—Mackey 46 punt return (run failed)
Attendance: 14,485.

'PROJECTILE' SCORES FOR SYRACUSE—Halfback Don King sails over UCLA's Kermit Alexander like a human projectile for a Syracuse touchdown in the first quarter at Los Angeles Saturday. The play began on the three yard line. Other players are Syracuse's Jim Nancy (35, on ground) and UCLA's guard Chuck Davis (69) and guard Walt Dathe, lower right. AFA Matmen Whip Utags In Opener, 28-5

The Air Force Academy won its first varsity wrestling match of the season Saturday afternoon by trimming Utah State University, 28-5, at the Cadet Gymnasium. This season starter will be the last match until after the holidays, when the Falcons will tangle with Arizona University at Tucson, Jan. 12.

Lettermen DeVere Henderson of Loveland, Colo., and All-America Terry Isaacson, a junior from Oak Park, Ill., paced the Falcons against the Utags as both registered pins. Henderson gained a fall over Rail Allen in the 157-pound class, and Isaacson (runnerup to the national champion in last year's NCAA meet) pinned Marlis Williams.

Air Force won two matches by forfeit as Utah State was unable to fill its roster for the match. These came in the 123 and 177-pound classes.

123 pounds—John Haluska, (AFA) won by forfeit. 130—Jim Woods (AFA) and Perry Robinson (US) draw, 3-3. 137 — Steve Bankhead (US) def. Lanny Burrill (AFA), 5-4. 147 — Thad Wolfe (AFA) def. USC Coach Is Named Year's Best

NEW YORK (AP)—John McKay, who guided Southern California to an undefeated season and top spot in The Associated Press poll, has been named coach of the year by the Football Writers' Association of America.

The one-time star back from Oregon, who led the Webfoots into the 1949 Cotton Bowl as a player, now is sending the Trojans into the Rose Bowl game against Wisconsin Jan. 1.

McKay has been a head coach only three seasons and this is his first as a winner. The first two produced a 8-11-1 record. The last time Southern Cal won every game was 1932, although the 1939 and 1942 teams were 8-0-2.

A native of Everettsville, W.Va. the 39-year-old McKay served in the Air Force, was graduated from Oregon in 1950 and was an assistant coach there until 1959 when he became an assistant at Southern California.

The voting by the 1,100 members of the football writers produced a two-man race. The runner-up was Milt Bruhn, coach of the surprising Wisconsin team which won the Big Ten title and also will play in the Rose Bowl.

Big 8, Southwest Agree To 'Letter of Intent'

KANSAS CITY (AP)—An inter-conference letter of intent for high school athletes was agreed upon by the Big Eight and Southwest Conferences Saturday and hailed as a forerunner of similar agreements involving all the nation's major athletic conferences.

The agreement covers only football. The two conferences agreed on Feb. 12, 1963 as the signing date for all high school athletes in both leagues. The SWC has had a letter of intent for several years, the Big Eight since October.

Once an athlete signifies his intention of enrolling at a school, he cannot then change his mind and jump to another school in either conference, without a stiff penalty. If he does, he won't be elilibie for two years and then will have only two years of football eligibility.

The faculty men of both the Big Eight and SWC approved the agreement, first of its kind in the nation, at their quarterly meetings which ended Saturday in Kansas City and Dallas. They had met several times in recent months to work out the agreement.

Big Eight officials said similar agreements involving other major athletic conferences will be discussed at the annual convention of the National Colegiate Athletic Association, starting Jan. 6 in Los Angeles.

The smaller schools in the NCAA have blocked past proposals for a national letter of intent, feeling it would hurt their chances of obtaining athletes. The college leaders now are turning to inter-conference agreements as the answer, but differing signing dates have been an obstacle.

The SWC plan is called "pre-enrollment," with the financial aid coming later, because of Texas high school rules. Under the agreement, the same forms, headed pre-enrollment, will be used by both leagues.

Inter-conference agreements appear to be the only answer to expensive, high pressure recruiting. Letters of intent in each conference ought to prevent the athlete from changing his mind, under pressure of recruiters, and jumping to another conference.

Reaves Peters, Big Eight executive director, said:

"I think it's wrong for a boy when he changes his mind, he should make his decision, with the help of his parents, then be able to stick to it. I think it hurts his life to change."

'Cheapens System'

NFL Sticking to Rule For TD Conversions

By OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK (UPI)—The National Football League will stick with its one-point conversion rule, Commissioner Pete Rozelle said today, despite the fact that Colleges and the rival American Football League use the alternate one-or-two point rule.

Rozelle's chief point is that the two-point conversion cheapens the entire scoring system. He also points to the fact that, despite the one-point conversion, ties are a scarcity in the National League.

Which, figures prove, is merely because of the fact that while the pro placement conversion at first glance is an "automatic" one point it actually doesn't deserve such a rating.

"Actually," said Rozelle, "a total of 21 placement attempts have been missed this year, and that figures out to nearly two a week. Only Detroit, Green Bay, San Francisco and Minnesota have made all their points this season."

The misses in the NFL added up to 16 in 1961, which was an average of more than one per week.

"So you can see that the extra point is hardly automatic," Rozelle added.

As for 1962, only 19 missed points show in the statistics. The reason for this is that on two of the placement failures, by Lou Michaels of Pittsburgh and Roger Leclerc of Chicago, the ball subsequently was run across the goal line for the conversion.

Rozelle's basic argument is that if there were no extra points at all, touchdowns would be worth a maximum of six points.

"If such was the case," he analyzed, "the value of field goals, even though remaining at three points, would be increased. The result might be excessive emphasis on field goals and a possible forced realignment of the whole scoring system."

Rozelle feels that the two point conversion is too easy a means of earning that many points.

"Teams drive the length of the field in many cases for six points," he illustrated. "They also will drive 50 or 60 yards to earn a field goal shot. Giving a bonus of two points for a mere three yards cheapens the value of both the touchdown and the field goal."

As a case in point, in 1961 only three games were tied in the NFL. So far in 1962, there have been four ties.

"It isn't a high number of ties," asserted the young commissioner. "Yet it's enough to make late season strategy interesting and cause changes in strategy and tactics."

There is a counter argument possible that with a two-point conversion, those four ties might not have occurred.

"On the other hand," Rozelle explained, "we had six games decided by one point all of last season. With two-point conversions, these might conceivably have wound up as ties, thereby giving us twice as many ties as we had. The same goes for our four one-point games in 1962. Personally, I think the NFL is well off just the way we play it."

One thing seems for sure. You can't argue with that sell-out success most of the teams are enjoying.

Unitas Key To Victory Over 'Skins

BALTIMORE (UPI)—The Baltimore Colts, sparked by the touchdown passing of Johnny Unitas, exploded for three scores in the final period Saturday to beat the Washington Redskins 34-21 in a see-saw Memorial Stadium battle witnessed by 56,964.

The inter - division National Football League game was a duel between master passers Unitas and Washington's Norm Snead, with all the touchdowns but one scored via the air.

Unitas, recapturing the form that made him an all-pro and playing perhaps his best game of the season, threw for four touchdowns and set another with a 22-yard run. He also established a new completion record for himself, hitting on 25 of 36 passes for a total of 367 yards.

Snead, in only his second year with the NFL, passed for three touchdowns and kept pace with Unitas until the Colts' big last quarter. Snead's record for the day was 18 out of 33 for a total of 351 yards.

Washington scored first in the initial quarter on an 85-yard Snead pass to Leroy Jackson. Baltimore bounced back to take the lead early in the second on two Unitas touchdown passes to Jimmy Orr of 11 and 59 yards.

But with less than two minutes remaining in the first half, Snead connected on a 17-yard pass to Fred Dugan to send the teams to their dressing rooms with the score deadlocked, 14-14.

Washington took the lead again in the third quarter when Snead once more hit Dugan, this time on a 20-yard scoring pass. Baltimore then broke loose for the three touchdowns in the final quarter on Unitas' passes to Dick Bielski for 11 yards and to Orr on 25 yards and a 2-yard run by halfback Alex Hawkins after Unitas set the score up on a 22-yard quarterback sneak.

Van deGraaff Tells of CC's Football in '26

(Editor's note: This is the second of a three-part series written by former Colorado College football coach, Williams T. (Bully) Van deGraaf. He coached the Tigers from 1926 (the season described in this series) until 1939. In the first installment, Van deGraaff told of the small squad which greeted him at his first practice, the hard work of the players, and CC's first two games that season.)

By BULLY VAN deGRAAFF
Former Colorado College Coach

The next Saturday was an open date. After that, we would meet the big ones — four, one right after the other. They were Colorado Aggies, Colorado University, the University of Wyoming, and Denver University. We had already scouted some of the games of those opponents - to - be.

Twitchell, my only paid assistant, was good at scouting. He saw little things that were sometimes a big help. Verne Collier, who spent his afternoons coaching our freshmen, often donated his weekends scouting for us. Harry Holman, ex - CC end, was also giving us unrenumerated and much appreciated help.

The next Saturday would be a real scouting opportunity. The Aggies were playing DU in Denver, and CU was playing Wyoming in Boulder. On that open date, I sat high in the DU stadium, with players all around me. Each of those players had something special to watch. Twitch, who had scouted Aggies the previous Saturday, had me well posted, but he wasn't with us. He and others were in Boulder, watching CU and Wyoming.

The games we wanted most—they were all coming up. That open date was a God - send!

But we were already getting ready for CSU. Twitch had reported the Aggies were strong, even stronger than their 7 - 6 victory over Wyoming might indicate. The Aggies were big and they were powerful. Their backs were fast. They had heavy, driving interference in front of the ball carrier, especially on end runs and off tackle plays. We would have to stop them some way, both inside and outside.

Twitch also reported that Aggies were using an unbalanced line and that the guard in the center of their long side was "pulling out". He was doing lots of damage on end runs and on off tackle plays. That was something to work on. Maybe, just maybe, we could get a guard thru to the ball carrier. Maybe we could stop those flank plays before the ball carrier had reached his interference. We started experimenting.

I put a lineman on defense in front of a lineman on offense. I stood behind the one on defense and gave signals to the one on offense. The offensive lineman would swing out and back, right or left, as if to make interference on a flank play. Or, if I signaled for a charge into the man in front of him, he would do that.

The man on defense was to watch the offensive lineman in front of him. When either foot of the offensive lineman moved, the man on defense was to charge. If the offensive man's foot, either foot, moved to the right, or to the left, the defensive man was to direct his charge in that direction. He was to go through — fast, low and deep, angling out. But, if the offensive lineman was charging head on, the defensive lineman was to meet him head on.

The more we tried it, the better it looked. I picked the man to use it. I picked "Fat" Cecil. "Fat" was our big lineman. His weight was now down, but "Fat" was still round. He was now a real lineman, a real fighter.

The next Saturday, the first half was fun. How "Fat" went thru that hole! Aggies had lost more ground than they had gained. We had gotten over a touchdown, and we had the ball on their four yard line, first down, when the gun had barked!

Between halves, we were in the field house; and that field house had thin walls. When excited, I don't whisper — even now. Harry Hughes, the Aggie coach and a good one, had heard every word I said. "Fat" had played it just right. But what had I done" I had told "Fat" again. I had told much too loud, just what to do and just how to do it!

That second half. Will I ever forget it? Aggies received, and down that field they came. It wasn't around end or over tackle. It was right thru the middle, right where "Fat" would have been if I hadn't had him penetrating, "shooting the gap," or whatever it is that they now call the type of play that I had invented for that occasion.

The guard in front of "Fat" was swinging back and out, just as he had done during the first half. But, now, as "Fat" piled thru, the other Aggie guard — the one who had been on the other side of center before the snap — was also swinging back. This second guard was taking "Fat" on his blind side. He was taking "Fat" further in the direction he wanted to go than intended.

The ball carrier was merely taking one step out, pausing, and then coming straight thru the hole. "Fat" had vacated. It was six, eight, ten or twelve yards per crack. Aggies had two TD's before I got word to "Fat" to play it orthodox. And, just after the second TD, their star ball carrier, Caldwell, caught the kickoff and took it all the way! After that we stopped them fairly well, but never again did we get our own offense going.

That use of trapping in the second half was a smart move. It had completely turned the tables. Never before had I seen such a sharp reversal.

The special train back to Colorado Springs waited until after our squad was bathed and dressed. We were glad enough to leave Fort Collins, but that ride home was one doleful four hours. As for me, I just wasn't talking, and no one else seemed to be talking much.

Our next game, with Colorado University, was to be on Washburn Field. That Saturday would be CC's homecoming, and, at the same time, it would be CU! The average weight of our starters would be only 168 pounds. And, for the dozen who wouldn't start that game on our bench, it would be even less than that. But there was no doubt about it, we were going to win!

Until the last minute of the first half, it was nip and tuck. Then came the hidden ball play! We had been saving that one for CU. We had, also, been saving it for little Al Bevans, because Al and that play just seemed to go together. Al was a solid ball of rubber — just as resilient. He was a 124 pounder, but a rugged little ball carrier.

We had just gotten the ball near mid - field. In less than a minute, the half would be over. Al's entering the game at that time was enough. There wasn't any need to call signals, and did that play work! Al was crossing the goal line almost before anyone on the CU team, or anyone on their bench, even knew that he had the ball. The half ended, 7-0.

That TD in the last 40 seconds of the first half was just what we needed. During the second half we got over two more touchdowns and the game ended, 21-0. Homecoming, then, became a great day! That night I even went to the dance in Cossitt Hall.

Our next game was also at home, against Wyoming. I was afraid of losing that one. We had been keyed high as a kite for three games straight. We were due for a slump, and Wyoming was certainly no push - over. It had played three game the conference, two of them ties: 6-6 with the Utags and 13-13 with CU. In its third conference game, Wyoming had lost to Aggies, but only 7-6.

Lone Star Dietz, a stand - out on the Carlisle Indian team I had played against in 1915, was then coaching at Wyoming. Lone Star had gathered players from here, there and anywhere, other than Wyoming. There were plenty on his squad who appeared to be fast and experienced, and it was evident enough that they were plenty big.

When we met them, however, they didn't block and they didn't tackle, and by that time that little squad of ours was really playing hard. We had plenty of will to win. It was 26-0, and toward the end of it our tiny tail - ender even got to play a bit.

A big one was still coming up! The DU game was another one we really wanted. The newspapers were still picking us to lose. Maybe that helped us get set. We left for Denver and spent Friday night at the Brown Palace Hotel. The next morning we ate lunch — one poached egg, one piece of toast without butter, and tea with lemon in it. While we ate, there wasn't one word spoken. And every face there, even that of the student manager, had the right look.

And that afternoon, for 60 minutes, we played football as it should be played. We deserved that game and we got it, 16-0. Field Phelps did all of the scoring. He caught a pass for the touchdown and kicked the point. He also kicked three beautiful field goals.

But that victory was a team win if there ever was one. Until then the Denver papers had been skeptical. CC was just too small. We just couldn't have a real football team. But now, if the Denver papers were right, we were good — we were really good!

But we didn't wait for the newspapers to tell us how good we were. In the stadium dressing room after that game, there was pandemonium!

'Save the Minors' Campaign Hailed by Pacific Officials

By HAL WOOD
UPI Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —The "Save the Minors" campaign apparently hit the jack-pot with its re-organization of baseball in the lower echelons.

"It has been a wonderful experience to see the revised interest in minor league baseball," says Dewey Soriano, president of the Pacific Coast League (to be renamed). "Cities like Denver and many others in our league are in high spirits over the future of the game."

Down in San Diego, General Manager Eddie Leishman is bubbling over with enthusiasm for the new organization that made a 10-team league out of the old PCL, with the clubs being in San Diego, Seattle, Hawaii, portland, tacoma, Spokane, Salt Lake City, Denver, Dallas-Fort Worth and Oklahoma City.

"I understand there is great joy in Dallas-Fort Worth and Oklahoma City," says Leishman. "Actually, it is a fine alignment. Dallas professional football teams have been playing on the West Coast for a couple of years and there is a natural interest in the coming competition.

"Denver and Oklahoma City are western towns. So they should be competing against us."

Leishman says there has been a tremendous revised interest every place he goes. He anticipates a build-up in ticket sales.

In most cities, all talk of waiting for the major leagues to come in has stopped. There is the general belief that everybody will be happy with the new alignment that placed 10 cities in the International League, also, and killed the old American Association.

All leagues below the Pacific and International will be listed as Class A—and that's a boost in morale to the minor loops that where trying to sell baseball as "Class D" or "Class C." The "A" appelation adds a touch of class to the whole lay-out.

When the PCL League directors meet in Salt Lake City next weekend they will attempt to set up a 156 game schedule. And the loop will be divided into two divisions, with Denver, Salt Lake City, Oklahoma City, Dallas-Fort Worth and San Diego in one division and the other cities in the Western Division.

Runnels Officially Is Named American Loop Bat Champ

BOSTON (AP) — Pete Runnels, who was traded by Boston to Houston of the National League last month, was officially crowned the American League batting champion for 1962 Saturday.

The veteran infielder hit .326 to pace the junior circuit for the second time. He captured the title in 1960 with a .320 mark.

Runnels moved to Houston in an inter-league swap for outfielder Roman Mejias.

Mickey Mantle of the New York Yankees was the runner-up last season with .321. Only seven others hit .300 or better among those who qualified for batting honors with a minimum of 502 total appearances. They were Floyd Robinson of the Chicago White Sox .312, Chuck Hinton, Washington .310, Norm Siebern, Kansas City .308, Brooks Robinson, Baltimore .303, Bobby Richardson, New York .302 and Jerry Lumpe and Manny Jimenez, Kansas City, .301 each.

Richardson, the Yanks' spray hitter, had the most safeties, 209. He also collected the most sacrifices hits, 20 and the most official times at bat, 692.

Floyd Robinson set the pace in doubles with 45 while Gino Cimoli of Kansas City was the leader in triples with 15. Luis Aparicio of the White Sox was tops in stolen bases for the seventh consecutive season. He had 31 in '62. The fleet shortstop also was caught stealing the most times, 12.

Grimm Is Mum On Signing Figure

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Dan Grimm, 244-pound tackle for the University of Colorado, said Saturday he had signed a professional contract with the Green Bay Packers of the National Football League.

Grimm was the No. 5 choice of the Packers. The Denver Broncos had drafted him on the 20th round of the AFL draft.

Bills' Gilchrist Runs For All Scores in Win

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fullback Cookie Gilchrist, one-time "bad boy" of the Canadian League, became the first American Football League rusher to gain more than 1,000 yards in a season Saturday and scored all of the Buffalo Bills' points in a 20-3 victory over the New York Titans.

The 243-pound Gilchrist kicked field goals of 42 and 27 yards in the first half and then broke loose on touchdown runs of 42 and 30 yards in each of the final two periods to help the Bills wind up their first winning season in the A.F.L. Buffalo's final record is 7-6-1.

Gilchrist gained only 26 yards during the first half, but he broke loose for 117 yards during the second half to increase his league leading rushing haul to 1,096. Gilchrist joined the Bills this season after being waived out of Canadian football largely because of his off-the-field capers.

* * *

The defeat, before an announced crowd of 16,453 at the Polo Grounds, was the eighth in 13 games for the Titans and doomed them to a last-place finish in the Eastern Division.

Buffalo led only 6-3 late in the third period when Gilchrist started rambling. He gained 21 yards on a rush that shot him over the 1,000 mark and three plays later he carried over right tackle for a 42-yard touchdown run.

A penalty against New York for interfering with a punt receiver gave Buffalo a first down on the Titans' 30-yard line in the opening minutes of the fourth period. Gilchrist then broke loose for the second of his touchdown runs.

Gilchrist's second field goal of the game came just one second before the first half ended and gave Buffalo a 6-3 lead.

The versatile Gilchrist had opened the scoring with a 42-yard field goal in the first period following Ray Abruzzese's 26-yard run with an intercepted pass.

Oilers, Patriots Continue Chase for AFL East Title

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Houston Oilers and the Boston Patriots continue their game of chase Sunday in the race for the Eastern Division title of the American Football League, and all indications are that the championship still won't be decided until next week's final games.

The Oilers are heavy favorites to ease past the winless Oakland raiders, who haven't won in 12 games this year and in 18 since mid-season of 1961. Boston, once half game behind Houston, is favored over San Diego.

Buffalo defeated New York Saturday 20-3, as the Bill's Cookie Gilchrist rolled up a season's total of 1,096 yards and scored all his team's points.

Houston, with a 9-3 record, is on a five-game winning streak —the same kind of late rush the Oilers have used to nail the divisional title in the two previous AFL seasons.

Boston, with Tom Yewcic proving a capable quarterback replacement for the injured Babe Parilli, would be out of it with a loss should Houston win. The Patriots have won two in a row since Yewcic took one from Parilli, and have an 8-3-1 record.

San Diego, now 4-8, snapped a six-game losing streak this week.

Heated Towel Racks Latest Twist in Hotel

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There has been a major controversy recently over whether the administration has engaged in the control, management and suppression of news.

This sort of thing is not limited to the executive branch of the government.

During the recent congressional session, reporters frequently complained about the unproductiveness of Speaker John W. McCormack's news conferences.

At one session, McCormack reached perhaps a new high in non-communication. Asked about one of the legislative issues then before the House, he ducked the question in two directions.

"Off the record," he said, "No comment."

Receive Brochure

Even a reporter who works the backwaters of journalism, as I do, can experience these frustrations. Take, for example, a document that I received in the mail recently.

It is a brochure, handsomely printed on expensive vellum, which extolls the merits of a new hotel that is opening here next month.

Ordinarily, the merits of a hotel are not something that the management tries to keep quiet. This brochure, however, takes the form of a "personal and confidential" message to the hotel staff.

It might be argued that the hotel compromised its right to privacy by mailing copies of the brochure to a thousand or so newspapermen. It might even be suspected that the hotel was hoping we would make the contents public.

I, however, have never been one to violate a confidence. If a hotel circulates literature that is marked "confidential," my impulse is to keep it that way.

Conscience Won

But after wrestling with my conscience, which finally pinned me with a double hammerlock, I decided I could ethically paraphrase the brochure if I refrained from mentioning the name of the hotel.

I think that even the hotel's publicity office will have to concede that this is a fair approach.

Therefore, having settled that question to my own satisfaction, I feel at liberty to report that all of the bathrooms in the new hotel will be equipped with heated towel racks.

This means, in case you haven't already grasped the significance, that its guests will be spared the ordeal of drying themselves with tepid towels.

If it had been a lesser story, I might have kept the lid on. But when civilization is taking a giant step forward, I think the public has a right to know.

Families Begin To Return to Guantanamo

GUANTANAMO BAY, Cuba (AP)—A few of the forlorn and deserted houses of this U.S. naval base have come to life again, signaling the return of the first of the 2,800 dependents evacuated at the height of the Cuban crisis.

A military transport plane brought in 12 families Friday, the vanguard of about 1,400 dependents due to return before Christmas.

It was a happy mob scene when the big plane rolled finally to a stop, with the men hopping on one foot and then the other waiting for the doors to swing open.

All told, there were 15 children among the families reunited.

In the crowd of hundreds of cheerful, jostling men waiting to greet the women and children were the base commander, Rear Adm. Edward J. O'Donnell, and entertainer Perry Como and his entire troupe.

Some of those waiting were not married, but everybody agreed it was nice to have the girls around again and hear the children yelling. The arrival of the plane sparked one of the biggest single house-cleaning operations in the history of the base as the men swept, mopped, dusted, made beds and cut grass.

For the 12 lucky fathers lipstick smudges were a mark of distinction and none moved to wipe them off.

CIVIL DEFENSE RATIONS — Charles W. Willoughby, director of the City-County Civil Defense Agency, is shown with some of the rations that will be stored in the basement of the new police building and emergency control center. There are enough rations now in the control center to take care of 105 persons for weeks. The control center is due to be completed in January.

New 'Cryostat' Equipment Speeds Cancer Diagnosis

By THE COLORADO MEDICAL SOCIETY

You probably never meet your pathologist; if you see him, he's just another whitecoat hurrying through the hospital corridor en route to or from his laboratory.

Yet he can save your life, pinpoint your diagnosis scientifically, determine how far and where your surgeon is to cut, spare your multiple anesthesias and otherwise support and direct the efforts of the doctors you do meet and come to know, your physician and surgeon.

In the arts and sciences of modern medicine, the pathologist is the man deep on the science end of the scale. And there's a lot going on behind the doors of the pathology lab these days. Pathology is one of the major fields of instrumentation and scientific mechanization in contemporary medicine.

In recent years there have been large and significant advances in the form of new scientific equipment and devices to hone the fine edge of accuracy and further reduce the chance of human error in the critical analyses the pathologist must make — often while the surgeon is waiting, his patient asleep on the operating table.

Your pathologist today has equipment available which permits him in a matter of a few minutes to slice a sample of tissue to a thickness of a single cell — seven microns, seven - millionths of a meter —study it and report back to the surgeon with a yes-or-no answer. Yes, this is cancerous tissue; remove it. No, this is not cancer; less drastic treatment is indicated.

The equipment which makes this sort of minute and rapid work possible is called a "cryostat," and it costs about $1400. Essentially, it's a box with a clear plastic lid, looking a little like a dishwasher, in which tissue samples can be quick - frozen with carbon dioxide and then cut into 7 - micron slices by a blade keener than any razor. The blade is kept cold at a 14 - degree temperature so that it doesn't melt the frozen tissue in the cutting.

In the recent past, pathologists used paraffin to prepare biopsy specimens for cutting. Fluid naturally present in the tissue was replaced by paraffin to make it firm so that a thin slice could be taken for study under a microscope. It worked very well; 7-micron slices could be made. But the process took a minimum of 24 hours.

More recently, freezing the tissue was tried. Slices down to 25 microns could be obtained, but the warm blade tended to melt the tissue and damage cells instead of cutting them cleanly. Looking through his microscope at a specimen 25 microns thick, the pathologist had to study three layers of cells, one on top of another. His diagnosis was much more difficult, and consequently less accurate in borderline cases.

The cryostat answers many of these problems. It can slice most tissue to single - cell thickness and can go thinner on firm tissues. Under the microscope, the specimen presents the pathologist with a single layer of cells which can be examined with great clarity and accuracy for the changes which indicate malignancy. Moreover, the entire process can be accomplished in about 10 minutes, depending on difficulty of the diagnosis.

Such rapid biopsies can be important during surgery, especially in breast surgery. They can spare women the removal of a breast and the extensive surgery a mastectomy involves. They improve diagnosis, reduce stays in the hospital and cut the number of anesthesias required for a cancer operation from two to one.

It has been customary to think of the pathologist as the man who performs autopsies to determine cause of death, thus providing retrospective information for the benefit of future patients, or who spends his time studying the cells of biopsy specimens. Actually tissue studies occupy only about half his time.

In the modern general hospital, the pathologist is in charge of all laboratory services. These include blood counts and other hematological studies of blood and bone marrow, urinalyses, the blood bank, bacteriological studies and a wide variety of chemical tests. The number of lab tests made has mushroomed in recent years in the drive for better and better diagnosis to guide more direct and rapid treatment.

The pathologist is aided these days by such instruments as the "Coulter counter," an electronic device which counts red and white blood cells more accurately than the human eye can; the "auto-analyzer," a device for measuring blood sugar which minimizes human error by "reading" a sample of blood and charting the findings on a graph; and various instruments which utilize electrophoresis (the study of solutions by means of the positive - negative forces of electricity) to examine abnormal proteins in the blood.

Not all of the advances in pathology are in instrumentation, however. Some have come in the form of new ideas, concepts and observations that over the long haul may prove more important than any mechanical innovation. Many of these are occuring in pathological chemistry.

One of the most promising of them involves the study of certain enzymes —particularly one known as LDH, in body fluids as a possible chemical test for cancer. These are indications that when the level of LDH in chest fluids goes up, a malignancy is present. If the LDH is at the same level that is in the blood, the condition tends to be merely inflammatory. The test is now being tried with urine samples with encouraging though unproved results.

LDH studies are only one of many new laboratory tests now on the horizon which in the near future will make the pathologist more than ever a key man on the medical team protecting your life and health.

Yule Displays Collected From Many Nations

By HUGH J. WYLIE

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Alexander Girard decided imagery could best convey the story of Christmas to all peoples.

So the 55-year-old Santa Fe, N.M., architect and designer put together a fabulous display of religious folk art from 20 nations. His collection of more than 2,000 pieces is now on exhibit in the Nelson Gallery of Art in Kansas City.

"The image is the most direct means of communication," Girard said. "And these simple decorations of joy and faith by craftsmen of many lands, while varying greatly, tell a similar story of Christmas—a story of the spiritual closeness of all mankind."

Girard collected much of the folk art during the past two years, although some of it came into his possession as long as three decades ago.

The exhibit, entitled "The Nativity," consists mainly of simple pieces carved or molded by unpretentious workmen. There are 170 separate Nativity scenes. They were made of many things—pottery, wood, cloth, wax, paper, nuts, stone, straw and even bread.

Girard constructed distinctive settings for his display. The 170 scenes are in an adobe-like structure on the main floor of the gallery. In the center is a tiered sand garden containing hundreds of the figures. Around the walls are recessed show windows of varying size containing numerous other Nativity scenes.

To call it colorful would be tritely to belittle Girard's ability. To enhance the simple beauty of the delicate folk figures, he used lighting, color and superb stagings. Acoustics also had to be considered since special musical effects are used to help set the mood for the Bethlehem-like area.

Odd problems also cropped up. A group of wax figures, for example, needed adequate lighting but "heat would have turned them into a gooey mess," said Girard. So a 300-watt bulb was placed several feet below the scene in such a way that it properly reflected light but put no heat on the exhibit. A unit made of bread and covered with icing had to be chemically treated to provide lasting qualities.

Joyce C. Hall, Kansas City businessman who is president of Hallmark Cards, sponsored the display. It is a benefit for the People-to-People program which emphasizes world peace is obtainable through understanding among nations. Hall is chairman of the executive committee of the People-to-People program.

Girard long has been a collector, not only of folk art but of countless other items he considers unique or artistic. He began in childhood and now has an 80-foot storehouse near his Santa Fe home to stash the many items he has picked up through the years.

"I guess I inherited the tendency," he mused. "My father did some collecting, too. And my grandfather was virtually a pack rat."

Fallout Shelter Space Good in Estes Park

LOVELAND (AP)—More fallout shelter space is available in Estes Park than in Loveland, a city of 11,000 people.

Army Engineers completed a survey of fallout facilities in the northern Colorado region Thursday and approved five Loveland buildings for use.

Two buildings in the Estes Park area were approved with a capacity rating of 1,545.

Also approved were three Bureau of Reclamation buildings, eight miles west of Loveland, with a capacity of 710.

Earl Denton, Civil Defense coordinator for Loveland, said supplies for the shelters are expected to be on hand within three months.

Asian Powers Seek Embargo In Angola Case

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI)—Afro-Asian powers worked today on a General Assembly resolution demanding an immediate embargo on an aid to Portugal that could be used against African Nationalists in Angola.

The Afro-Asian draft measure was aimed at the supply of arms to Portugal by its NATO allies.

The United States, which for years has walked with delicate balance between the Afro-Asians and Portugal on the Angola question, was considering introduction of a resolution which would call for dispatch of a single U.N. commission to ascertain conditions in Angola.

Informed sources said Portuguese Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar's government had given its tacit assent to such a move. But the Afro-Asians opposed the U.S. plan and their votes were likely to doom it in the assembly.

Informed sources said the Afro-Asian measure, in addition to recommending an embargo on aid to Portugal, would also recommend that the Security Council levy sanctions against the Lisbon government.

The United States resisted the NATO provisions of the Afro-Asian resolution. U.S. sources said strictures against NATO arms shipments to Portugal would negotiate provisions of the North Atlantic treaty.

The assembly closed out the Angola debate in a Friday night session in a speed-up effort to adjourn by Christmas. The adjournment target date is Dec. 21. A decision on Angola is expected next week.

The assembly also held a Saturday session to vote on the convening of an international conference on trade problems.

American Plans To Aid Peasants In Colombia

By LEON DENNEN

NEW YORK (NEA) — In the interior of Colombia where man still lives as he did 500 years ago, a young American will spend the holiday season helping the peasants to learn how to help themselves.

The task undertaken by 23-year-old Bob Friedman of Union, N.J., may not be as dramatic as the feat of an astronaut. He did not think of himself as a "hero" when I interviewed him in Bogota during a recent tour of Latin America.

But surely there was something noble about the lean, dark-eyed and smiling Peace Corps man who gave up a well-paying job teaching high school history in order to make history by helping his fellow men. His assignment does not call for spectacular feats but it requires friendliness, creativity and patience.

It took Bob three days to reach Bogota. He traveled on rickety buses through bandit - infested areas.

"I came to test samples of plant life and the water in the lake of La Plata to find out what fish we can bring in at altitudes 11,000 feet above sea level," Bob said.

"My friend Jack Kuntz of Mattawan, N.J., and I have been assigned to one of the poorest areas of Colombia. The people have almost no protein to supplement their monotonous diet of rice and bananas. They cannot hunt because they have no money to buy guns. Those who work earn about 30 pesos ($5) a week."

Bob hoped to establish a fish cooperative in his area. But he was also investigating the possibility of constructing an aqueduct that would bring fresh water to the peasants.

"We are also going to help them build schools," Bob told me. "It took nine years to build one of the schools that is now being completed. These are hard working people. They are willing to contribute all the necessary labor. But they need to learn how to engage in community action."

Many of the Peace Corps volunteers are assigned to villages where few U.S. citizens ever set foot before. Their aim is not only to help the people with "physical projects" but to introduce the idea of local self-reliance through democratic group action.

"The trouble is that the people have gotten used to their poverty. They accept it."

One part of Bob's job is to help the people change and see life differently. "They need education and food more than anything else," he said.

Bob was planning to see a doctor in Bogota; he was bothered by a "bug" he had picked up. But he was cheerful and refused to talk about himself.

"What's there to say," he said. "We try to live as best we can. It may be shocking by American standards—but we shall survive. The people are kind to us and treat us as honored guests.

"I love what I am doing. I have a sense of purpose. I feel that we are accomplishing something."

Unless Bob and his fellow volunteers get into trouble they are not likely to make headlines. But their work will live.

Colombia's President Valencia said about the Peace Corps volunteers:

"The mission which they are furthering is truly extraordinary and worthy of Colombia's deepest gratitude. They make direct contact with our most humble people in our towns and villages. They hear their complaints, understand their anguish, and stimulate their hopes."

Coal Production Story Told in Unusual Coins

'COALFIELD MONEY'

Charleston, W. Va. (AP) — For the benefit of future historians, a Charleston, W. Va., man is collecting coins which tell the story of the early days of coal production in West Virginia.

Insurance agent Edward Opia James, 48, has been collecting the coins for many years now. They're not the type of money most people collect — he calls the coins "coalfield money"—and in the West Virginia coal communities, they are known as scrip.

Square coins, hexagonal coins, coins with rippled edges like flower petals, coins with different shaped holes punched through them — James' collection has tremendous variety.

"Scrip is an important part of our history in this section of the country," James said. "It tells a lot about coal camp life, and it leaves a record of many coal towns that have gone or are going out of existence."

He said that's the reason he's been collecting the scrip: "To make a historical record of the things that are changing."

The scrip coins have been used in coal camp daily life almost as much as official U.S. money over the years. They are issued by various mining firms to miners seeking advances on their wages between paydays. They can be spent in company stores like real money.

Usually, the name and address of the mining company and the words "In Trade, Not Transf." are stamped on the coins, indicating they're not to be spent outside the coal camp.

The United Mine Workers launched a drive to eliminate the coins during World War II because many miners were losing money by "cutting" scrip. Miners hard pressed for cash would draw scrip from the company and sell it to "discounters" at about 75 per cent of face value.

This drive to eliminate scrip was not completely successful, though, and the coins still are used in some West Virginia coal towns.

Collector James learned the value of the coins at a young age when his father was a coal miner. He was born in 1914 at the coal camp of Carbondale in Fayette County, W. Va., and spent most of his younger days around coal mines.

Eventually he moved to Charleston and became an insurance salesman, traveling through the coal territory selling policies.

He said it was at that time that he realized how many coal towns were disappearing.

He illustrated: "Look in the U. S. Postal Guide. I compared the 1951 Postal Guide with the 1961 edition and found that West Virginia has lost 231 post offices during those 10 years."

He said he inquired about the towns that were fading out and discovered many people were destroying or throwing away local scrip which had been in use.

"So, I began collecting scrip as a means of keeping a record of those towns," he said. "Take the town of Quarrier, for instance. I've got scrip stamped 'Quarrier, W. Va.,' but there's nothing left of the town except a few standing chimneys."

Stuffed Alligator Is Provided by Library

Mariner May Give Clue to Life on Venus

By DOUGLAS DILTZ

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Within a few days, man may begin solving a big question which has haunted his imagination since he first gazed with wonder into the heavens:

Does life exist out in the universe?

A clue to this may be learned Friday (Dec. 14) when the United States expects to score a major space age triumph by giving man his first close look at a planet — Venus.

Although the Mariner 2 spacecraft will not determine whether life actually exists on the mysterious and cloud-masked planet, it can determine whether life as we know it is possible there.

This can be revealed in data on Venusian temperatures the spacecraft sends back to Caltechs' Jet Propulsion Laboratory (JPL) here from across more than 36 million miles of space.

"We can tell whether or not temperatures on Venus are mild enough to support life as we know it, or too hot," a JPL spokesman said.

Mariner 2, laden with scientific experiments and the most sophisticated space probe yet launched, is scheduled to make a fly-by exploration of the planet known as earth's twin, peering with an "electronic eye" beneath its perpetual shroud of strange clouds.

If all goes as planned, and space agency officials expect no trouble, the probe should gather historic data during a key half-hour period while sweeping within about 21,000 miles of the interplanetary target after a 109-day, 180.2 million mile flight.

The fly-by exploration also could herald a tremendous feat of interplanetary guidance and accuracy for this counry.

"A rifleman firing a bullet at a wrist watch a mile away would have to hit its second hand to achieve the accuracy of the Venus space probe now racing towards it planetary rendezvous," a JPL scientist said.

The accurate guidance was performed when trajectory scientists, during the earlier part of Mariner's mission, corrected its course by flashing direction changes to its "robot brain" to make its pass close to Venus.

Mariner 2 has set two other space firsts, both in radio communication. It broke a distance record for transmitting scientific data when it got 17.7 million miles from earth. The previous record was set by the Pioneer 5 moon probe. Mariner then broke Pioneer 5's distance record for transmitting a position signal from 22.5 million miles.

By the time it passes by Venus, Mariner 2 will have plunged one-third of the distance from the earth to the sun.

The Russians now have a spacecraft headed for Mars, the closest planet to earth, but it is not due to make a fly-by photographic pass of that heavenly body until June.

The 447-pound Mariner, resembling a miniature oil derrick with flaps, is the most intricate and gifted spacecraft yet launched.

What about Venus itself?

It is the earth's brightest neighbor because its dense clouds reflect twice as much sunlight as does the earth. Of the heavenly bodies, only the sun and moon exceed the sparkling planet in brillance.

Yet telescopes on earth, giant instruments which have detected exploding stars trillions of miles away, have never seen her surface because of the pervading mantle of clouds.

The clouds have prevented scientists from even making a good guess at the length of the Venusian "day" —the time the planet takes to make one revolution on its axis.

Is Venus a huge ocean, or is she a barren desert forever torn by raging winds and fierce heat? Is the surface marshy, or does it perhaps hold continents and bodies of water much like earth?

Most speculation is that Venus is extremely hot, having a surface temperature of up to 615 degrees Fahrenheit — nearly three times hotter than boiling water. This is based on the theory that the cloud layer traps in heat.

The surface of the planet is thought to be barren and its atmosphere is believed to be filled with carbon dioxide with little or no free oxygen or water vapor.

Experiments of Mariner 2 include:

—Microwave radiometer: Will "see" through the clouds to the previous unseen surface. It will determine whether there is water in the atmosphere and what the surface temperature is — two of the most important factors in determining the possibility of life there.

—High-energy radiation: To measure radiation particles in deep space and around Venus—considered perhaps the greatest hazard facing future spacemen.

—Solar plasma detector: To determine the flow and density of "hot" particles from the sun — the so-called "solar winds" which fill our planetary system.

— Cosmis dust detector: To measure dust particles in space — another major hazard to manned flights to the moon and particularly the planets.

After its mission is accomplished, the Mariner 2 will join America's Pioneer 5 in an endless orbit around the sun.

Extension Credits To Be Discussed By CU Regents

The University of Colorado Board of Regents will meet Saturday in Boulder to discuss steps being taken to minimize the amount of course work a student must take on the Boulder campus to receive a CU degree.

Faculties of the College of Arts and Sciences, Schools of Engineering and Education have voted recently to accept extension centers' work as work in residence, provided the student involved has been admitted to the university.

The rules restricting the amount of residence credit applicable to toward a degree has been an issue for some years, particularly students at the Colorado Springs and Denver Extension Centers, and students from the Army and Air Force.

Traditionally, control of such matters rests with the faculty of each separate CU college, and the colleges have different rules concerning the amount of residence credit a student has to have to qualify for a degree.

For example, the College of Arts and Sciences until recently required two years of residence credit, the College of Engineering and the School of Business one year and the College of Music a year and a half. Formerly students had to come to the Boulder campus to fulfill these requirements.

Of the 1,200 students at the Colorado Springs Extension Center, some 900 are enrolled in Arts and Sciences. Now that the residence requirement has been changed, students will be able to complete all their work here, providing the sufficient number of courses can be offered.

Crystalization Is Cited at Vatican Meeting

By BENNET M. BOLTON

VATICAN CITY (AP)—"This has been a period of crystalization," said an American bishop as the Roman Catholic Ecumenical Council's first phase neared its end Saturday.

"Call them what you will, the two elements now know where they stand."

Progressive and conservative are the labels most generally applied to the two forces this U.S. prelate spoke of, forces that have been at work the past eight weeks among the 2,200 council fathers of the historic gathering here.

Pope John XXIII set the council's tone when he called the worldwide assembly of Roman Catholic bishops and gave as their prime task an "aggiornamento"—a bringing up to date of Catholicism in the 20th century.

Many bishops have put themselves into the two mainstreams by their personal approaches to the job.

Persons close to the council here describe as conservatives those prelates who want little change, who prefer the old ways and what they consider the safe paths, who tend to resist departures from the norms of centuries.

The progressives are seen as those who favor new and broad answers to old problems, the widest degree of reform consistent with both unchanging doctrine and the modern mood of doing everything possible to bring all Christianity closer to reunion.

A Jesuit Biblical scholar familiar with the issues before the council has commented: "These differences of approach exist not only in every church but also in every field of human affairs. This is the old story of administrators vs. intellectuals. There are always those who want to churn ahead and those who don't want the boat rocked."

The leaders of the progressive group have shown themselves in the hierarchy of northern Europe. The "trans-Alpini," or those "across the Alps," forced a new image of Catholicism in Germany, Austria, Holland, France and Belgium while those nations were resurrecting themselves materially from the ashes of world war. They have carried that spirit with them into the council.

Observers here identify the Vatican Curia, the several hundred prelates based in Rome to handle the day by day administration of the Church, with the conservative element. Their staunchest allies are said to be many of the older bishops and cardinals from a number of nations.

Hundreds of bishops presumably belong to neither side, but support one group or the other, depending on their views on a particular matter.

From attitudes reflected in the official daily communiques and from the lists of daily speakers, the progressive and the conservative arguments have shown through in much of the debating of the first session.

During examination of a thesis on liturgy, or public worship, progressives favored the greatest use of modern languages in the Latin Mass and the widest application of regional customs to the fixed forms of the lifurgy in mission lands.

"There is no 'bloc thinking' among the American hierarchy," said a U.S. bishop when asked where American Catholic prelates fit into the council tendencies.

"There are too many of us—240—and we each have our own views on a variety of subjects before the council."

Several American bishops said Albert Gregory Cardinal Meyer, archbishop of Chicago, and Joseph Elmer Cardinal Ritter, archbishop of St. Louis, had emerged as dynamic examples of a forward-looking attitude within the Roman Catholic Church in the United States.

Doctor Says Deadbeats Forcing Him to Leave

STINSON BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — The only doctor in this seashore town says that deadbeats are forcing him to leave.

Dr. Harvey R. Forester said patients who don't pay their bills "are forcing me into debt, almost into bankruptcy."

Forester, a 34-year-old physician from New York City, came to this tiny coastal community north of San Francisco a year ago.

"They need a doctor," he said of the area's residents at the time. "I'll be good for them and they'll be good for me."

"There are 25 people in Stinson Beach who owe me $890 and they have owed it for four to six months," the doctor complained.

He said the last straw occurred when somebody paid a bill by check. Forester used the check to pay a bill of his own — and it bounced.

Pacific Nuclear Tests Success, McNamara Says

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara said Friday that the recent U.S. nuclear tests in the Pacific were "highly successful."

McNamara said the tests "assisted immeasurably in the attainment of weapons system information of significant importance to the security of this nation and that of the free world."

In a message of congratulations to Joint Task Force 8, which conducted the series designated "Operation Dominic," McNamara said the present "roll-up phase" marks the completion of the series.

"An extremely complicated test program was prepared in a relatively short period of time and conducted safely and effectively," he said.

The secretary added: "We had our share of disappointments, but you faced these problems with candor and determination. On the basis of the results achieved, Dominic was a highly successful series."

The series of nuclear blasts was set off in the vicinities of Christmas and Johnston islands.

TIGHT TRAP IMPRESSION

JEKYLL ISLAND, Ga. (UPI)— Four resort motels here have offered a free night's lodgings to any tourist caught in a Georgia speed trap.

"While we do not condone any traffic violations," the motel operators said, "we feel that many times the complainant will have a better attitude toward Georgia's attractions and want to return if he is shown the more hospitable side of our state."

Mona Lisa's Leaving Stirs French Storm

PARIS (UPI) — The aging beauty is able to travel, her departure date is reported set, but whether the French people will let their beloved "Mona Lisa" leave the Louvre museum for a visit to the United States like some common tourist remains to be seen.

Leonardo Da Vinci's famed masterpiece, symbol of fathomless feminine mystery for 456 years, was the center today of a national storm aroused by the government's unannounced but fairly definite decision to lend the painting to the Metropolitan Museum in New York and Washington's National Gallery.

An American television network (CBS) said flatly in New York Thursday night that "Mona Lisa" will be shipped from Le Havre Dec. 14 on the Liner France, arriving in New York Dec. 19.

Only the French could get so upset over a lady, even one that has been variously described as a courtesan, an unfaithful wife and a female impersonator. One Paris newspaper said let the Americans come to Paris to see "the smiling one" if they must ... her.

"You don't ask a beautiful woman to come to you," the paper said with Gallic gallantry. "You go to her."

To make the situation worse, the whole idea of shipping "Mona Lisa" abroad has been laid at the doorstep of Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, a beauty of French descent who has previously been very popular here. It was "Jackie" who told French Cultural Minister Andre Malraux during his visit to Washington last spring that she would love to see the Gioconda smile beaming from the walls of the national gallery.

The French Academy of Fine Arts, the Leonardo Da Vinci Club, assorted art lovers and two newspapers who are leading the "Mona Lisa stay home" campaign claim that the masterpiece, painted on panels as fragile as a crisp cookie, is too delicate to move. Authorities at the Louvre who have given the painting a thorough physical examination this week pronounce "Mona Lisa" fit for voyaging.

Two Children Die as Fire Guts Farm Home

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Four children died in a fire that destroyed a farm home north of here today, but seven other members of the James Dover family escaped.

The dead children, three girls and a boy, were sleeping upstairs in their frame home near Granger, a half-mile south of the Indiana-Michigan border, when the fire began.

Deputy sheriffs said a coal stove apparently started the blaze which destroyed the house. The fire was described as "an inferno."

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Dover and five of their children were able to get out without serious injury but the other four of their nine children were killed in the tragedy.

The family was asleep at the time the fire began.

Central Airlines Loses Plea for Service Change

WASHINGTON (AP)— The Civil Aeronautics Board refused Friday to permit Central Airlines to serve Liberal, Kan., instead of Guymon, Okla., as a junction point for its routes to Denver, Oklahoma City and Amarillo, Tex.

Central said that because of its present route description, it is unable to provide nonstop service between Oklahoma City and Denver or other points north of Guymon.

The CAB said it had found in the Kansas-Oklahoma local service proceeding that Guymon's principal traffic was to Oklahoma City and Denver, and that joining of the routes at Guymon would give that city direct service to its main markets.

The board said also that routing a Convair 240 service between Oklahoma City and Denver by way of Liberal and Pueblo, Colo., as proposed, instead of a DC3 service as now provided by way of Liberal, Guymon and Pueblo, would increase the annual subsidy need by about $162,000.

Ft. Logan Treatment Center Given Praise

DENVER (AP) — A Scottish psychiatrist, Dr. Maxwell Jones, says the program of treatment for patients at Ft. Logan Mental Health Center near Denver is "the most important and successful experiment in the treatment of mental patients in the United States."

Dr. Jones, medical director of Melrose Hospital in Edinburg, visited the center several days this week.

"This program, if it eventually proves to be as successful as it now appears, could eliminate five years of slow development in the treatment of mental health problems," he said in an interview.

"The program of eliminating hospitalization and keeping patients in a proper environment is a heroic one. We believe and this program is attempting to prove, that we hospitalize many more people than we need."

Dr. Jones added:

"Motivation is all important in treatment of mental health. When patients are given an opportunity to discuss their problems with the psychiatric team, they feel they are playing a positive role in their own reestablishment and rehabilitation."

At Ft. Logan patients are domiciled in cottages. There are no bars or severe restraints. Many are day patients who undergo treatment during the day and spend the rest of their time with their families.

Your Outdoors

By MARY L. SHIRER

For the Pikes Peak Group of the Colorado Mountain Club

IN THE SNOW-CLAD MOUNTAINS

Far on the mountains now, few human foot-steps will be found. Instead, there will be animal tracks, perhaps made by the large wild animals of the mountains. Some we do not see so often — the mountain lion, bears and bobcats. And among these there might be found some bird tracks or the tiny tracks of field mice. The valley that was covered with a profusion of wild flowers last summer now lies deep in snow and the flowers are tucked away in their beds for the winter. Nestled among the tall spruces, the mountain cabin stands almost buried in snow. All trails around are in snowy whiteness and the mountain stream is encased in ice and all shrubbery along the banks hang heavy with snow and the spruces are covered with white pillows. Those large boulders close to the cabin are piled high with white fluffy snow.

Nature's house is closed for the winter, just as the cabin is closed and windows and doors boarded up. All is quiet now. Not a human voice is heard when last summer the forest rang with laughter and merriment. Now the great mountain is held fast in the grasp of cold and frost. The only sound heard, is the rustle of the wind in the tops of the spruces and is carried down below until every little blade of grass is swaying to and fro. In the night, time other voices are heard, as the larger wild animals of the mountains come forth to seek their prey and supremacy over their rivals. It is the time of year for rivalry among the wild animals and it is a question of strength which will win, so wild cries are heard and many struggles and tragedies take place. The mountain jays are scolding for their food and are peering around the cabin for that handout. Now they must forage for themselves for people are gone from the cabin.

Here time means nothing—just the same during the day and night. No clock to mark time. No work to be done. The sun comes up and shines radiantly on the snow-clad mountains. Now the sun sets and night settles over a silent country. There are deep gorges and crevices where deep snow will lay until summer returns. All plant life is at a standstill. They must sleep away the long hours, until spring awakens them. We think of the many far away places in the world. The frozen Arctic regions or the torrid regions where life does not exist and again the places where man has penetrated and by struggling can live. He must remain at his post of duty where observations must be made for the government. During World War 2, men were sent to many isolated places to guard and protect our country. Places where man hardly dared to enter yet by doing so, new parts have opened up and great resources have been found.

Far in those snow-clad mountains there is the constant battle of the elements. Think of the deep gorges and chasms in the Alps and Himalayas that are bottomless! Men have conquered these great mountains in a small way when we think of their intensity. Others have lost their lives and lie in these great gorges. Man cannot conquer all. The atomic bomb shows the powers of his mind and what can be accomplished. The sun, moon and stars shine on those snow-clad mountains and there is the constant battle of the elements, with a brilliance that is dazzling. Winter scenes are just as appealing as summer scenes. The wild rugged places where we visited last summer are now in the clutches of a different kind of a beauty.

The cabin must be lonesome now standing all alone with no one to enter but perhaps the animals and birds will keep it company. The chickadees will be flitting from twig to twig on the large spruce beside the cabin chirping merrily. The deer comes close each day as though the cabin is their friend. In the soft light, when skies are serene, there is a rosy flush over all the country around and the peak above stands in cold sublimity. That steadfast gaze is one of day-long glory.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

FLARE-UPS OF DIPTHERIA

Most adults are immune to diptheria, thanks to the protective inoculations received during childhood. These injections have erased the disease from the list of the 10 leading causes of death. The number of cases has been reduced 80 times since 1933, when 4,937 deaths were reported, compared with 74 in 1958.

Despite this progress, scattered outbreaks have been reported throughout the country. Some authorities believe there are two kinds of diphtheria micro-organisms. Both cause infection in the throat but one produces a deadly toxin and the other does not.

Our present vaccine protects us against the toxin producer. It is the nontoxin producer that is said to be causing the present diphtheria outbreaks. These micro-organisms are not newcomers; they have existed for some time but were considered harmless and ignored.

Dr. Lane Barksdale of New York City thinks they might have changed throughout the years and are capable of producing a toxin like that of the other type. If this is true, we must alter our vaccine to include protection against this organism as well as its toxin.

The malady mimics ordinary sore throat or tonsilitis and the real condition escapes detection unless a throat culture is made. It usually is a super sore throat associated with headache, fatigue, and fever ranging from 101 to 103 degress F. A grayish-white membrane spreads over the back of the throat and tonsil tissues. Involvement of the larynx can be serious if swelling blocks the windpipe. Other than this complication, the disease might not be serious were it not for the toxin produced by the organisms.

It is here that diphtheria antitoxin is a life saver. The posibility of a new toxin producer may explain why there is reason for concern.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

Displaced Kidney

Mrs. D. writes: Can floating kidney be detected by X-ray? Can it cause severe pain in the lower back during the night? It is impossible for me to lie down more than two hours at a time because of discomfort.

Reply

X-ray will disclose the presence of a floating kidney but, contrary to your experience, discomfort from this disorder is more common on standing because of the effect of gravity. The kidney drops and the tube leading to the bladder (ureter) tends to kink.

Testing Before Dyeing

C. F. writes: What is the reason for the patch test before having the hair dyed?

Reply

To determine whether the patron is allergic to the dye. It is cheaper and easier to do this test than to pay for a law suit or the medical bills encountered should the customer develop a severe reaction to the chemicals in the dye.

Aspirin With Milk

M. K. writes: When I take aspirin with water I get cramping in the abdomen. This doesn't happen when I take it with milk. What is the reason for this?

Reply

Skin Cancer

Reply

Yes. In general, skin cancers can be cured by removal via surgery, X-ray, or radium. When located close to the eyes, surgery usually is preferred.

SECTION E COLORADO SPRINGS—SUNDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1962 SECTION E

No, it's not a Thanksgiving turkey, but a turkey that Mrs. Bills roasted for the party—and was the cast thankful for the delicious bird and all the trimmings that went with it!

Civic Players Relax After Last Performance of Show

One of the pleasant compensations for a week of the hard work, performing every night in Civic Players' shows, is the sumptuous buffet supper served to members of the cast and their husbands, wives and dates, and to members of the board of directors, after the last show on Saturday night.

The party which followed "Blood, Sweat and Stanley Poole" last Saturday night was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Bills on Strickler Ave., Broadmoor.

The director, Orvis Grout, and the cast look forward to relaxing, and "letting down their hair," reviewing and re-hashing the show—discussing its high points and its moments of suspense and uncertainty at these parties.

Mr. Grout and the men of each cast always help the backstage crew dismantle the stage, which sometimes takes until long after midnight, so the buffet supper is an early-morning event, prepared for a tired, hungry crowd.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnson say goodnight—or goodmorning—rather, as they leave the party. At right is Mrs. Bills looking a bit sleepy. Mrs. Johnson was WAC Sgt. Denzil in the play.

Pictured around the buffet table, from left are Capt. Wesley Sweetser of the U.S. Air Force Academy, whose wife was in charge of lighting for the play; Capt. Thomas Smith of Ent Air Force Base, who assisted back stage, and played a part in the October play, "Best Man"; Mrs. Charles A. Ward, wife of Lt. Col. Ward who appeared in the play as M/Sgt. Snow; and Mrs. Jack Roeser, whose husband is a member of the board and the play selection committee. Mrs. Ward assisted back stage.

Tom McLaughlin, left, who played the title role is pictured here gnawing on a turkey drumstick as he talks to Charles Johnson, center, a Civic Players' favorite, and Wayne Roper, right, who played Sgt. LaRue in the show. Mr. Johnson's wife had the role of WAC Sgt. Denzil in the play.

Lt. Col. Charles Ward carved the turkey with great finesse, even as the hungry players asked "when do we eat?"

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

'Vital' Only to Her!

DEAR ABBY: Why must one's age be printed on one's passport for all the world to see? This is a free country, isn't it? The year of my birth is my private business, so why should I be forced to have it revealed to every hotel clerk, customs officer and nosey person who wants to know how old I am? I don't like to lie about my age, and I never do. I just never tell anybody. Could you please give me one good reason why "age" is important on a document of this kind? Who cares if you are a 22-year-old citizen or a 68-year-old citizen as long as you are a citizen? —OVER TWENTY-ONE

DEAR OVER: One's "age" is necessary on a passport because it is a "vital" statistic which helps to identify the carrier. You would be terribly deflated if you knew how few people really cared (or noticed) "age" on a passport.

DEAR ABBY: Is it proper for a lady to ask a man to dance? My wife broke her leg two months ago, so she isn't able to dance. But she enjoys going to our club on Saturday night to watch the other people dance. A few women at the club have come over and asked me to dance with them. They have husbands, but they are wandering all over asking other women to dance. My wife says it is rude of me to refuse a lady when she asks me to dance, but I would feel like a fool dancing while my wife sat with her leg in a cast. I'd like your thinking. —CAN'T DECIDE

DEAR CAN'T: Only when it's "ladies' choice" is it proper for a woman to ask a man to dance. Even if your wife insists she doesn't mind, unless "you" really want to, decline their invitations and sit with your wife.

DEAR ABBY: In the islands of the South Pacific, it is the custom for the women to wear a flower over one ear. When a girl has a boy friend or is married, she wears the flower over a certain ear. If she is not going with anyone special, she wears it over the other ear. I keep forgetting which ear is which. Can you help me? —U.S. MARINE

DEAR MARINE: The flower over the left ear means she is "taken"—the flower over the right ear means she's "available." (But it's those gals with flowers over "both" ears you have to be careful of.)

DEAR ABBY: I am 24, have never been married and plan to marry a man who has been married twice before. My friends tell me that because my future husband has been married before it would not be proper to have a big church wedding with the wedding gown and long veil. Is this true? My fiance says it doesn't matter how many times "he" has been married. Please straighten this out so I can plan my wedding. —CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Your fiance is right. If you want a large church wedding with the gown and veil, go ahead and have one.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "Hurt": Never chase a lie: if you let it alone it will run itself to death.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠

If a touchy contract can be placed on the right side of the ledger without resort to a finesse it is frequently wise to avoid it.

South, holding 22 points, opened with two notrump, and North raised to three. The opening lead was the six of spades, and East played the ten. South won the trick and, being in the right hand for it, lazily drifted into the club finesse. East won and continued the jack of spades. Declarer ducked, but the suit was continued and cleared. Since South could not bring in enough tricks without trying the diamonds, the finesse had to be essayed, and West got in to cash the setting tricks.

A simple precautionary measure would have rendered the hand safe against any holding. It should have been apparent to declarer that the diamond finesse was not essential to the success of the contract. Three diamonds, three clubs, two spades, and a heart add up to three notrump. The danger in the hand, of course, lies in the possibility that West will establish a certain number of spade tricks and run them. But the only card that West can use effectively for quick entry is the king of diamonds, if he has it. Extraction of that card will render him completely impotent.

The proper play is the immediate lead of the ace of diamonds followed by the queen, with complete indifference as to who wins it. When the spade is returned it is ducked and the suit will be cleared but now the club finesse can be taken with complete safety, because East will have no more spades to lead to his partner. If he should have one left it will mean that West originally had only four, and the opposition can cash no more than two tricks in spades plus the two kings.

The bride's attendants were her two sisters, Mrs. Keith Kinkade of Evansville, and Miss Sadie Burger of Jasper, and Miss Barbara Bassler, Washington, who wore street length gowns of emerald, deep rose and gold, respectively.

Fashioned in taffeta, the dresses featured bateau necklines and front princess panels stitched in sunburst designs. HINTS FROM Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Here is a little trick I use to keep most of the dirt from collecting under my refrigerator and other appliances in my kitchen which are about two inches from the floor:

I bought an extra piece of linoleum and cut it to fit underneath each appliance. I slide this underneath the heavy items which a housewife cannot ordinarily move. When it's time to clean, I reach underneath the appliance with my thumb and fingers and pull the linoleum out, wash it off, and slide it under again.

This is better than anything I have ever tried.

Mrs. Brown

Dear Heloise:

I buy a large sponge and cut it up into small sponges so they will fit in the exact space in the soap tray which is recessed in the wall by my bath tub. I then lay the soap on this.

When finished with our bath, we use this sponge to clean the tub. It is full of soap and does an excellent cleaning job.

I cut the same type of sponge into smaller pieces and put them on the sink. This leaves no soap residue to clean up afterwards. There is also no need for a special cloth for cleaning the bathroom fixtures.

Nellie Anderle

Dear Heloise:

Please will someone write to us housewives and tell us just what she has found which will not go down the disposal in her kitchen sink?

I have already found by trial and error .. and by paying for service calls .., that corn on the cob, corn husks, and celery stalks will not go down the disposal. I would appreciate knowing of any other items also. Please write and let me know so that I can take care of my new disposal.

Disgusted

Have you got any answers, or have you phoned a plumber yet? Gee, they charge lots for hamburger!

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

When driving in slow or blocked traffic, many cars will heat up and stall, causing one more obstruction.

This may be due to the fact that the driver has the radio turned on, the air conditioner working, and the lights on if it is night.

The generator is not putting out current, nor is the water pump circulating when the car is "at idle." Therefore current is being used and none is being generated to replace it, so you are soon stalled!

Relief from this condition may be avoided by putting the car in neutral position and accelerating the motor to a speed equal to 25 to 30 miles per hour. This will keep things going and you will not end up being pushed to the side of the road!

Joseph W. Rooney

Dear Heloise:

I make handy hot pads to protect my formica drain board top. I use pieces of corrugated pasteboard cut the size and shape I desire. I make two thicknesses of these and then cover them with heavy-duty foil and replace the covers as they get worn or torn.

A Reader

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

I find that worn-out nylon hose make a fine cloth to clean off bath tub ring! There is something about nylon that surely must be abrasive.

R. Huber

There is. And thanks for the new idea. It works beautifully.

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

For a long time I have tried to buy smooth - surfaced table mats because food particles adhere to the raised pattern on the linen finished ones.

Finally .. I covered the ones I own with contact paper. This gives me the color and surface I want and they are much easier to clean.

Zesty Dressing For Pork Is Shaped in Balls

Any month of the year pork chops are highly praised by everyone, but during this season of plentiful pork they deserve special attention. Look for good buys at your market.

An accompaniment for pork that always pleases a hungry family is a zesty bread dressing. Next time, just for fun, try a different technique. Shape the dressing into balls to be baked in the oven with the chops.

PORK CHOPS WITH DRESSING BALLS

6 rib pork chops, cut 1 inch thick
2 tablespoons lard or drippings
1½ teasoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
Dressing Balls

Brown chops in lard or drippings. Season and place in baking dish. Arrange dressing balls around chops. Cover tightly and bake in a moderate over (350° F.) 30 minutes. Remove cover and continue baking 15 minutes. 6 servings.

DRESSING BALLS

1 cup chopped celery
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
2½ cups bread crumbs
⅛ teaspoon marjoram
⅛ teaspoon celery seed
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
Water and stock

Cook celery, onion and parsley in butter or margarine until lightly browned. Add bread crumbs, marjoram, celery seed, salt, pepper and enough water or stock to moisten. Shape into 1½-inch balls.

Mrs. Anderson Hostess To Stratmoor Hills Group

The Stratmoor Hills Volunteer Fire Department Auxiliary will have its Christmas party at the home of Mrs. Vera Anderson, 422 Westmark, at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Members are asked to bring a wrapped white elephant.

A New Idea For Ground Beef in Bun

A certain winner at any casual supper is ground beef in a bun, whether it's hamburger patties with toppings, Sloppy Joes, stuffed patties or cheeseburgers.

This new idea to add to the list is called Creole Beef Sandwich. Included are ingredients common to deep south Creole cookery: tomato sauce, mushrooms, green pepper, onion, basil and garlic. They simmer with the browned ground beef for 15 minutes. Reba Staggs, meat recipe expert, says this produces a delightfully piquant blend of flavors.

Serve the sandwiches at a family supper or to the guests you frequently invite this time of year.

CREOLE BEEF SANDWICH

1 pound ground beef
¼ cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
1 can (2 ounces) mushroom stems and pieces, drained
2 tablespoons lard or drippings
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
¼ teaspoon basil
½ cup catchup
6 hamburger buns, toasted

Brown onion, green pepper and mushrooms in lard or drippings. Add ground beef and brown lightly. Pour off drippings. Add salt, pepper, garlic salt, basil, tomato sauce and catchup. Cook slowly 15 minutes. Serve on toasted hamburger buns. 6 servings.

Mrs. F's Almond Crescents

1-3 cup butter
¼ cup granulated sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
¾ cup grated blanched almonds
2-3 cup unsifted flour
¼ cup confectioners sugar

Cream the butter, granulated sugar and vanilla. Add the almonds and flour; blend thoroughly with your fingers. Hand-shape into small crescents about ½-inch thick. Bake on an ungreased cookie sheet in a slow (325 degrees) oven about 20 minutes, until bottom surface of cookies are tinged a golden color. Remove to wire rack to cool slightly; while still warm, roll in confectioners sugar. Makes 2 dozen. Store cold cookies in tightly closed container. This recipe does not call for salt, and we use unsalted butter in it. If the almonds are blanched at home, they should be dried at room temperature, not toasted in the oven; grate them in a small hand-operated rotary-type nut grater so they are fine.

Woman Is Convicted In FHA Fraud Case

DENVER (UPI)—A woman who obtained $30,000 in 49 Federal Housing Administration property improvement loans has been sentenced to a year and a day in federal prison.

The sentence was pronounced by U.S. District Judge William Doyle Friday on Mrs. Juanita Lorraine Ross, 38, of Denver.

The government charged that Mrs. Ross obtained the loans between 1955 and 1960 by making false statements. Asst. U.S. Atty. Michael Villano said the woman concealed from lending institutions the amount of debts she owed.

Villano said the woman obtained 13 Title I loans insured by the FHA from the First National Bank of Denver, 12 from the First National Bank of Englewood and nine from the North Denver Bank.

Judge Doyle ordered that Mrs. Ross be placed on probation for five years after she is released from prison.

FILM COMEDY SPECIALISTS SIGN TWO PICTURE DEAL

HOLLYWOOD. — Those two fellows who specialize in comedy, Bud Yorkin and Norman Lear, signed a two - picture deal with United Artists and tee off with "Everybody Loves a Lover," about an unlikely guy who becomes a symbol to women around the world. For their whacky hero they'd like Jack Lemmon or Jackie Gleason. Bud and Norma finished "Come Blow Your Horn," with Frank Sinatra, are prepping Tony Curtis' "Playboy," and on their off hours turn out Andy Williams' weekly TV show.

Greg Bautzer negotiated the deal for Walter Wanger to produce "Cleopatra" and Walter ended up as the only partner with 10 per cent ownership. Walter's deal is in perpetuity. Eight million bucks has been allotted for prints and advertising. Wanger tells me the scenes they'll shoot with Rex Harrison and Richard Burton for the picture were the ones that Peter Levathes, Otto Koegel, and Joe Moskowitz refused to O. K. in Rome last June. All those fellows are no longer with Twenteth Century - Fox.

Metro guessed right when they put Joel McCrea and Randolph Scott into a $750,000 western "Ride the High Country," and the loot rolled in. Now they've got McCrea for "Mail - Order Bride," a story of the leader of a womanless town in the old west. Joel rides off into the sunset to find girls.

When I heard that Mary Carr, star of the silent hit, "Over the Hill" (Andy Devine played her son), was living in Los Angeles, I gave her a call. She's 88 now and tells me it isn't decent of her to feel as well as she does. "I haven't any old lady friends, so I can't rock and talk of the past," Mary says. "I have my own apartment and live alone. My son, Stephen, and his wife live in the same apartment court. They tell me what to do and give me advice. I listen, then do as I darned please."

Eva Gabor arrived here with jewels, furs and a choice of three gowns for New Year's eve, but she's taking no chances. She hired the Home Protection service to guard her. The first night she thought she's had it when she heard doors opening and closing on the other side of the house, and covered her head with a pillow hoping the burglar wouldn't see her. Then the bell rang. "What an elegant burglar," thought Eva. "He rings first." It turned out to be the detective from the service.

I asked how she liked Zsa Zsa's new husband: "He's a dahling. Gave her a ring that makes Liz Taylor's look like a chip. Thirty-nine carats, blue white, covers her whole hand. He's really a gentleman and very courageous. I don't known how he's going to take being married to a Gabor."

You have to laugh when you look at Bob Mitchum Jr.'s face. Even with mustache and full beard, he looks exactly like his father. Young Hank Fonda is much better looking than his dad ever was. Rex Harrison's 18-year-old son Carey is in London playing a walk - on in "Ivanov" with the Cambride Amateur Dramatic club, but says, "I don't intend to take up acting professionally."

Bob Wagner was temporarily blinded while taking a bubble bath for "Pink Panther." It was a comedy scene where Bob hid from Peter Sellers under the bubbles — the glycerine burned his eyes, so he had to spend three days in a darkened room.

Chinese Opera Program To Be Presented Thursday

American audiences have marveled at the acrobatic skill demonstrated by the famous young actors of the Foo Hsing Theatre from Taiwan (the Republic of Free China) appearing in its first tour of the United States. The company will present a program of Chinese Opera here at 8:30 p.m. at Palmer High School Auditorium, Thursday.

The skill, essential to the dramatic interpretation of Chinese acting, dancing, and song, in which these child actors excel, is the result of 20 centuries of tradition plus years of rigid training and practice.

Acrobatic proficiency holds the key to what takes place on the stage of the Chinese Theatre. Since each movement and gesture has a particular meaning which reveals the story to the spectators, and which follows and unchangeable pattern set down by the first masters of the theatre, the young actors must be thoroughly schooled in muscle control as well as spectacular leaps, somersaults, handsprings and high jumping.

For four solid hours each day students from the ages of seven to 16 assemble at the drill ground for this training which begins with exercises to limber the muscles. They start with "leg-stretching" in which one leg is lifted to head height. They must hold this position for 15 minutes on each leg. They refer to this as warmup.

Then they are taught to perform somersaults in rapid succession, and "tiger leaps" - a series of astounding jumps which are employed in battles scenes in the actual performances. A favorite, thou very diffcult exercise, is the hand-stand, usually practiced on top of five or six rickety desks. The student learns to hold this position for minutes before he leaps, in a beautiful mid-air loop, down to the floor.

The little girl students are also expected to undertake this strict program, and some of them are as accomplished as the boys by the end of two years.

Altho many of the movements on the stage in the final performance do not involve difficult contortions of the body, this acrobatic training is considered vital to even such a simple activity as walking.

There must never be a superfluous gesture in a Chinese play. Every movement must be free of awkwardness and must mean something in the action. When they perform in the long gorgeous robes and costumes which make Foo Hsing Theatre one of the most beautiful spectacles to be seen, they are able to run, jump, and even somersault without a single slip.

ADC Musical Forces Give Promising Springs Concert

By JOHN FETLER

A concert at the city auditorium Friday night introduced the Air Defense Command chorus, and the 573rd Air Force Band from Hamilton AFB, Calif., with a nicely printed blue program, and with selections of light and popular music.

This event has occasioned a number of comments in the region. It also drew a fairly good audience, considering the size of the auditorium. Because of the nature of this concert, one of the questions was the quality of the ADC musicians and singers.

CWO Eldridge Bunton, director of the band, knows his business, that seemed fairly clear. His conducting is incisive and of a professional calibre. Of special interest might be the first performance of arrangement for band and piano of a movements from MacDowell's second piano concerto.

The quality of the concert, however was uneven, even for a military musical event. Undoubtedly, the ADC chorus has not had time to develop its potential. The 18 voices (as we counted) of the men have good possibilities if they are going to be treated as men singers.

Such a group could possible "raise the roof" if the right approach is taken. A glee club such as this, however, really should have no business with a crutch such as piano accompaniment; for a glee club should stand firmly on its two feet, unless orchestral accompaniment is desired. There is really nothing as rousing as a good men's chorus, singing full voice a capella.

The ADC chorus sang spirituals, sad Western songs drawn out, numbers from the Sound of Music, and a patriotic medley. But strength, not weak esthetic effects, bring out the best in men singers. As it was, the band rescued them effectively from interminable plaints of cool water.

In addition to the good work of the band, Bernice Owens, who has a pretty, natural voice, appeared as guest soloist, providing a contrast, dressed all in white, singing a Butterfly number and the old standard Zing Zing. She would do better, however, to keep within her range, and develop breath control. But the idea of contrast is sound.

Needless to say, the baton twirler, Airman 2C John R. Harris proved to be a popular hit of the evening.

If ADC is going into the music business on such a scale, the possibilities of development are considerable, but if it is to serve as a PR showcase in bigger cities, a more intense standard, with more of a punch, particularly in the chorus, may need to be aimed at.

TV Is Defended Ardently by Lucille Ball

By DICK KLEINER

NEW YORK (NEA) — Lucille Ball is the closest thing to an insinuation that television has yet created, so it's not surprising to find her an ardent defender of the medium.

"Basically," she says, "I think that telvision is fine. When you think of what a messy thing it could have sunk to—say, down to the movie magazine level—you realize how good it is. We've never gone down to that level."

Nonetheless, Lucy feels there are certain areas which need to be beefed up. Chief among these are educational programs. In her new capacity as the head of the powerful Desilu Studios, she hopes to do something about that.

"I'd like to see Desilu move into educational programs," she says, "but only if they are commercial. We're in the business to make money, after all, but I think educational programs can be commercial. Look at Disney; I admire him tremendously. My kids were raised on Disney."

"Ninety-five per cent of all the scripts I read for my own show," she says, "I like right away. I'm more like an ordinary viewer than a performer when it comes to that—I am not too particular."

"I don't believe I would have come back to television this season," she says, "unless I could have gotten the same writers who were with me on the old I Love Lucy series."

She did get the same four, and the new Lucy Show purposely has much the same flavor as the old one. The theory is that what was so successful then should be equally successful now.

"Someday," she says, "I might like to get back and do some dramatic parts. It's always a challenge. But it is actually harder to play comedy, so a dramatic part would almost be a vacation for me. I really don't have a burning urge to do anything dramatic. If it comes, fine, but I'm not lying awake nights dreaming about it."

She thinks that one possible reason for her continuing success —The Lucy Show is now the second highest-rated program—is that she always encourages anybody connected with the show to make suggestions.

"The writers, the crew, and all the actors," she says, "are free to make suggestions at any time. I think that helps. I remember, years ago, when I made the movie 'Sorrowful Jones' with Bob Hope. We'd reached an impasse and everybody was making suggestions, so I chimed in, too. I said that one idea somebody had wouldn't work because it would mean they'd need another door.

"The director gave me a dirty look and made some crack about 'Madame Director.' I've never forgotten that. I'd never let anything like that happen on our show."

Beet Growers Approve Sugar Marketing Quota

DENVER (UPI) — Colorado and Wyoming sugar beet growers feel the new 1963 sugar marketing quota of 9.8 million tons set by the government "is about the way they would have done it," the president of the Great Western Sugar Co. said Saturday.

Frank A. Kemp said he didn't see any new effect locally.

The quota was set in Washington, D. C., Thursday by Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman. It compares with a quota set a year ago at 9.5 million tons and subsequently raised to 10 million tons.

"The 9.8 million estimate is not much more than was actually consumed during 1961," Kemp said. "The Agriculture Department must make enough sugar available to satisfy the needs of the consumer. This is probably a close estimate of what will be required."

Kemp said the 1962 sugar growing season in Colorado and Wyoming was a poor one because of a bone-dry Spring and fequent hails during the summer. "But we have had a marvelous fall," he said, "which has helped recoup some of the loss."

Rye cultivation seems to be a fairly recent development among the grains and there is no record of its use among ancients.

Recruiting Problems Cited During Osteopathic Meet

Recruiting problems in the osteopathic field were subjects of a four-day convention of the Colorado Osteopathic Asso. which ended Saturday at the Broadmoor Hotel.

Dr Charles W. Sauter II of Gardner, Mass., president of the American Osteopathic Association, told the convention delegates that presidents and deans of the American Asso. of Osteopathic Colleges were vitally concerned with the problem.

He said the colleges will admit between 150 and 175 students annually within the next five years.

Sauter said corporate philanthropy is recongnizing the importance of an added source of qualified physicians and is boosting contributions to approved schools of osteopathy. He cited the examples of recent grants by the Johns-Manville Corp., the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, and 14 leaders of the pharmaceutical industry.

One of the recruiting problems to be overcome, the president said, is to get young people to agree to giving a longer period of time for study for a medical career. He said too many young people have an urge to get into the earning field quickly.

529th Returns After Completing Cuban Crisis Duty

Top Carson officers, wives of the signal men and the 179th Army Band were awaiting the first conginent when it arrived by plane at Peterson Field.

The 529th was assigned to Carson, for the second time, in August after spending a year in Europe, where it was sent because of the Berlin crisis. The post unit supported the 5th Infantry Division in Exercise We Will just before leaving for the East.

The 529th and individuals from Carson are included in "Well Done" congratulations from General Herbert Powell, Continental Army Command commander, which he expressed after the Cuban crisis.

"On relaxation of alert, I congratulate the officers and men, women and civilian employees of all units posts, camps and stations for an outstanding accomplishment in attaining maximum operational readiness on short notice.

"This demonstration of readiness has been a major factor in the decision to withdraw hostile offensive weapons from Cuba and the success of our national effort."

BIRD FLOCK SHRINKING

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government reported Friday that the world's last flock of whooping cranes apparently has shrunk to 32 birds.

The Fish and Wildlife Service said a survey of the Arkansas wildlife range in Texas showed there were six cranes less than had taken off from Arkansas last spring for their summer nesting grounds near Great Slave Lake, Canada.

Aluminum Prices Slip While Silver Rises

By DARDEN CHAMBLISS

After reductions in prices on some finished and semi-finished aluminum products, and reported discounts on primary ingot metal itself, major firms trimmed their basic price.

The price of unalloyed ingot was shave by 1½ cents a pound to 22½ cents, a move taken first by Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical but soon followed by Alcoa and Reynolds.

But while aluminum is experiencing demand that isn't quite keeping up with whopping large production, another metal has been caught in an opposite squeeze. Silver demand is rising while supply is not and the result has ben the familiar one in such cases: rising prices.

The weekly change lifted silver's quotation in New York to $1.20½ a troy ounce, up from the $1.18 that prevailed late last month. The price seems to be edging closer to the 42-year high of $1.22 set in October.

The shutdown in Chile of Anaconda Copper Co.'s El Salvador mine and smelter, which had lasted more than a month, was settled by a 21 per cent wage boost.

Also ended recently were strikes at two African facilities, the Mufulira mine of the Rhodesian Selection Trust and the Rhokana Mine of the Anglo American Corp.

Copper producers and smelters, meanwhile, report that December orders are running slower than previous months. The price remains 31 cents a pound. Weakness in scrap copper prices continues, with smelters shaving their rates by ¼ cent to 24¾ cents a pound bid on No. 2 wire scrap.

Lead demand has gained, adding strength to the relatively new price of 10 cents a pound, New York. Producers say they don't expect the rate to stay as high as it has been but that they expect it to be satisfactory.

County Planners To Hear El Pomar Zoning Request

The El Paso County Planning Commission will consider four petitions for zone change and two plats at a public hearing at 4 p.m. Wednesday in the auditorium of the County Office Building.

A petition from El Pomar Foundation requests that an area west of El Pomar Road and north of Penrose Boulevard be changed from an R-residence to a C-3 business district.

Angeline Korkus and Joseph Bordenelli are petitioning for an area east of Alsace Way and southeast of Cheyenne Road be changed from an R-1 residence to an R-2 residence district.

Bill Smartt has filed a petition for an A-2 farming district to be changed to an A-1 garden home district. The area is between the railroad tracks and Galley Road in township 14 south.

A request to change an A-2 farming district to an M-industrial zone has been received from the Smartt Development Corp. The area is southeast of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad tracks in townships 13 and 14.

The preliminary plat of Holiday Hills will be presented to the commission. The 40-acre area is located between Vollmer Road and Highway 189.

Pine Creek Estates will present a first addition plat for approval. The plat is south of Breed Underpass and west of U.S. 85-87 in an A-1 Garden Home district.

Two Million Mourners Watch Dutch Funeral

DELFT, The Netherlands (UPI) —More than two million mourners —Two out of every 11 Dutch citizens—today watched their beloved Queen Wilhelmina's white funeral cortege travel the 10-mile route from The Hague to rites in this ancient city.

Eight horses cloaked in white hearse carrying the queen's oak coffin. It was adorned by a single wreath of white lilies of the valley—presented by veterans of the Dutch resistance movemnt, whose fight Wilhelmina had backed in broadcasts from abroad during the German occupation.

The queen, who died Nov. 28 at the age of 82, asked in her will that she be buried in white. Her conviction was that death is "but a threshold to the life hereafter" and no one should mourn for her. Her husband, German Prince Hendrick, was buried in white in 1934.

Freeman-Jarman Ceremony Held in Springfield Church

A wedding of interest in the Pikes Peak Region took place in Springfield, Mo. recently when Miss Jeannette Jarman of that city became the bride of Lawrence Earle Freeman, formerly of Falcon. The following account of the wedding is taken from the News and Leader of Springfield:

Miss Jeannette Jarman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Jarman, 1015 East Harrison, became the bride of Lawrence Earle Freeman, son of Mrs. E. S. Freeman of Joplin and the late Mr. Freeman, in a 7:30 o'clock ceremony Saturday night, November 24.

Altar decorations included two brass baskets of fall - colored gladioli tied with bronze bows, and white tapers burned in two brass cathedral candelabra.

Mrs. J. J. Hogan, pianist, and Mrs. Richard Dunn, organist, played wedding music and Jerry Howerton sang "Always," "The Lord's Prayer" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Linda Stevens and Elaine Stevens, who lighted the candles, were attired in dresses of forest green faille.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a dress of Chantilly lace over taffeta. The elongated fitted bodice was highlighted by a square neckline edged in deep scallops of lace and the long sleeves ended in points over the hands. The skirt was fashioned with matching lace scallops forming a double edge for the front panel of the skirt. Deep unpressed inverted pleats controlled the fullness over the hips, falling into back fullness at the waistline. The skirt extended gracefully into a narrow aisle train. Her fingertip circular veil of imported silk illusion was secured to a clip of pearl orange blossoms, silk flowers and seed pearls. The bridal bouquet was a cascade of Frenched carnations and a large white glamellia with white satin streamers tied in lovers' knots.

Mrs. R. Harlin Mackey attended her sister as matron of honor. Her dress of forest green faille was designed with rounded neckline and short sleeves. Two pressed pleats at the front and back gave fullness to the bell contoured skirt. Her headpiece was of matching illusion and she carried a colonial bouquet of bronze pompons with green satin leaves and satin ribbon streamers knotted with small pompons.

Miss Mary Jo Lakey was maid of honor and Miss Genevieve Snelson was bridesmaid. Their ensembles were similar in style and color to that of the honor attendant.

James C. Freeman of Joplin served his brother as best man and ushers were Eddie Thomas and Jarrell Saladine of Mountain Grove.

Miss Bonnie Snelson attended the guest book and reception assistants were Mrs. Don Smith, Miss Faye Brewer and Mrs. Wanda Crane.

The couple will reside at 729 South Jefferson St.

CHARGING TOWARD RETIREMENT— Colorado and Southern's last steam locomotive, No. 638, will pass thru Colorado Springs Sunday morning, Dec. 16, en route to Trinidad for permanent enshrinement. Immortalized here by veteran railroad photographer R. H. Kindig of Denver, No. 638 is seen in earlier and happier times heading a seven-car Rocky Mountain Railroad Club excursion.

Local Buffs to Ride Train Pulled by 683 on Last Run

After many years absence, the nostalgic wail of a steam locomotive whistle will once again reverberate thruout Colorado Springs next Sunday morning when old No. 638 of the Colorado and Southern Railroad pulls into the Denver and Rio Grand Western station.

Sponsored by the Rocky Mountain Railroad Club, No. 638, last operating steam locomotive of the C and S, will depart from Denver's Union Station at 7:30 a.m. Dec. 16, for a 213 - mile run to Trinidad, where it will be placed on permanent display.

Built in July, 1906, by the American Locomotive Company, the engine is being retired by the railroad and presented to the people of Trinidad, who have planned an acceptance ceremony.

In all probability, this will mark the final appearance of an operating steam locomotive in Colorado Springs as, with the retirement of No. 638, only four standard gauge operating steam locomotives remain in the state, all in service, on a standby basis, with the sugar beet - hauling Great Western Railroad of Northern Colorado.

Previously, the last local appearance of a steam locomotive was in 1959 when, in conjuction with the Rush to the Rockies Centennial Celebration, the Burlington Railroad operated a special train from Denver to Colorado Springs and return.

Exact time of arrival is not known as several photo stops and "runbys" are scheduled en route from Denver, but the special train should arrive at the local station at approximately 10 a.m. Special arrangements have been necessary for fuel (coal, hand - fired) and water stops to enable the "Farewell Steam Excursion" to highball southward.

The 56 - year old engine has served the Rocky Mountain Railroad Club often during the past lean years of steam operation, and members of the club will be on board to escort the veteran to its reluctant retirement.

Local club members will board a special coach here, and another carload of steam - lovers will be added at Pueblo.

A baggage car is being outfitted to serve as an informal diner, offering soft drinks, sandwiches, coffee, etc.

For railroad buffs, 638 has a wheel diameter of 60 inches; its wheel arrangement is "2-8-0" or Consolidation type; tractive effort is 42,439 pounds, and weight, engine and tender, is 331,400 pounds.

Principally a freight - type engine, No. 638 has been used in recent years almost exclusively for excursions of the Rocky Mountain Railroad Club and similar organizations.

A sister locomotive, No. 641, long in service on the remote and isolated Climax to Leadville branch of the Colorado and Southern, made its final run in November and was placed on permanent exhibition in Leadville.

For the return trip from Trinidad, the "mourning faithful" will have to be content with a diesel locomotive. But then a true railroad buff will buy a one - way ticket anywhere, as long as he can travel with steam on the front end of a beauty riding the rails.

The Fairway has 160 rooms, 130 of which have private patios. All are air-conditioned and offer free TV, radio and piped-in music. Main Library To Be Closed For Inventory

The Colorado Springs Public Library will be closed Wednesday thru Dec. 19 for physical inventory, according to John Marshall, administrative aide to the city library.

Books can be deposited in the book drop outside the library during this period, Marshall said.

The West Side Branch and the V. Z. Reed Library will remain open during that period, however, and the bookmobile will make regular stops.

The bookmobile stops Monday at Furr's Super Market at North Circle Drive and Constitution Avenue, Wednesdays at the Safeway Store at 8th Street and Cheyenne Boulevard, Thursday at the Bon Shopping Center and Fridays at Golf Acres Shopping Center.

Marshall said a physical inventory of all books, records and other material hasn't been made since 1950. It will be made this month because there is less demand for books just before Christmas than at any other time of the year, he said.

The main library, the two branches and the bookmobile will not operate Dec. 24-25 and Dec. 31-Jan. 1 because of the holidays.

COMMISSIONER DIES

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — J. Haden Alldredge, 75, former member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, (ICC), died Wednesday.

School Warning Signs Due To Be Standardized in City

All of the school warning signs in the city will be standardized in the near future, according to Don L. Smith, city traffic engineer.

At present there are 281 school warning devices consisting of 23 overhead "stop - when - flashing" beacons, 12 "speed limit 20 mph when flashing" beacons and 246 school warning signs.

The changeover will be started later this month and is expected to be completed by the end of January. No school crossing will be left unmarked during the changeover, Smith said.

The change should "greatly improve the safety factor for children by effecting a higher impact on motorists," Smith said, and should also facilitate enforcement.

Smith said the 246 warning signs are assorted in six different sizes, four different shapes, two different colors and carry 12 different messages.

When the changeover has been completed, all the new school signs will be one color, a high-visibility flourescent orange.

There are 34 such signs in operation now and their "noticeability is excellent," he said.

In addition, all school signs will be one shape (diamond) and in two sizes. The new signs will carry three messages: "School Zone," "School Crossing" and "School Crossing Ahead."

Smith said the "School Zone" signs will be located only on streets immediately bordering the school and at a maximum distance of 600 feet from the school.

"School Crossing" signs will be located at the designated crosswalks.

"School Crossing Ahead" signs will be located about 160 feet in advance of the "School Crossing" signs, on streets not immediately bordering the schools — on streets that do not have the "School Zone" signs but do have school crossings.

On heavily traveled arterials, Smith said, or where unusual conditions exist, the "School Crossing Ahead" signs will be 30 inches in size. All other signs will be 24 inches in size.

"These flourescent type signs are highly visible long before the message on the sign is visible. By limiting their use to school areas only, they will greatly emphasize the existence and importance of school areas to motorists. In addition, their visibility is effective on dark, rainy days," he said.

Similar programs have been instituted with success in numerous cities thruout the country. Vehicle speeds decrease by 5 to 7 miles per hour in zones controlled by these signs, he said.

CC Symposium to Cover Broad Literary Spectrum

Literary topics to be discussed during Colorado College's week-long symposium beginning Jan. 13 will include problems facing the writer, the writer and his audience, a critique of the short story, existentialism in literature, and the public and private image of the poet.

More than 75 persons, including several CC professors, will take part in the symposium entitled "The Contemporary Arts and the Citizen."

Men and women from across the nation will participate in discussions of problems and new developments in such areas as literature, music, painting, theater, cinema and dance.

Among those taking part in the literary events are Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Karl Shapiro, Philip Roth, author of two best sellers "Goodby, Columbus," and "Letting Go"; Marshall Sprague, author of "Newport in the Rockies," and numerous other books on Colorado; mystery writer Lillian de la Torre; novelist Amanda M. Ellis; Lenora Mattingly Weber, author of more than 200 short stories, and Hazel E. Barnes, author and critic.

His other awards include the National Institute of Arts and Letters Award for 1960, the Aga Khan Prize for Fiction for 1958 and the Guggenheim Fellowship for 1959-60.

Roth, whose fiction appears in such magazines as Harpers and the New Yorker, has had his short stories included in the O'-Henry Prize Stories of 1960 and in Best American Short Stories for 1956, 1959 and 1960.

The prize-winning writer, who holds a bachelor's degree from Bucknell University and a master's degree from the University of Chicago, where he also taught English, has been on the faculty of the Iowa Writers Workshop for the past two years.

Shapiro, the author of more than a dozen books, is the recipient of a half dozen national literary prizes. He was awarded the Pulitzer Prize at the age of 32 for his "V-letter and Other Poems," based on army experience in the South Pacific.

He now is a member of the faculty at the University of Nebraska where he teaches creative writing and serves as editor of "Prairie Schooner," one of the nation's leading literary quarterlies.

The 1944 Pulitzer Prize-winner has been a consultant in poetry at the Library of Congress; editor of Poetry, the leading poetry magazine in the United States, editor of the Newberry Library Bulletin, and has taught at Johns Hopkins University and Loyola University in Chicago.

Marshall Sprague brings to the symposium the experience of a lifetime of writing dating back to his student days at Princeton University in the late 1920's.

A long-time resident of Colorado Springs, Sprague has been a reporter for the North China Star in Tientsin, China, the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune, and since 1936 a feature writer for the New York Times.

Former public relations director of the Colorado Springs Fine Arts Center, he has been active in the State Historical Society of Colorado, the Historical Society of the Pikes Peak Region and the Pikes Peak Chess Club.

Some of Sprague's best known books are "The Tragedy at White River," "Newport in the Rockies" and "Money Mountain." He now is at work on a book about mountain passes.

Lillian de la Torre is the wife of Prof. George S. McCue of the Colorado College English department and is a best-selling mystery writer. She has taught English in the New York City public schools and at the University of Colorado Extension Center.

Among her popular books are "The White Rose of Stuart," "The Truth About Belle Gunness," "Elizabeth Is Missing," "Dr. Sam Johnson, Detector," and "The Actress."

She holds degrees from Columbia University and Radcliffe College and is a member of the Mystery Writers of America, and the Colorado Authors League. She has been active in Colorado Springs Civic Players productions.

Miss Ellis is a professor of English and writer-in-residence at Colorado College. She previously taught at the University of Illinois and Des Moines and is the author of 15 books and numerous articles. She received her bachelor of arts degree from Colorado College, was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and earned her master of arts degree at the University of Illinois. Among her works are a text books, "Literature of England"; a novel, "Elizabeth The Woman"; a nationally-televised play, "The Death Waltz," and numerous books on the West. She is well known for her continental literature as well as 20th century drama.

Long active in professional activities, Miss Ellis has served as vice president of the National Council of Teachers of English. She has been chairman of a committee on Teaching English as a Second Language and headed a special committee appointed by New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller when he was coordinator of Inter-American Affairs.

Lenora Mattingly Weber is now working on her 206th short story. She says more than half of her short stories have been published in what is known in the trade as "slicks."

She also has written 23 books for teenage girls. The best known of these are 13 books in the Beany Malone series.

Rocky Regarded Front Runner in GOP Campaign

By RAYMOND LAHR

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republican leaders clearly regarded Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller today as the frontrunner for their 1964 presidential nomination, despite efforts by the New Yorker's lieutenants to play down such talk.

The GOP organization leaders—national committee members and state chairmen—have been meeting here for three days to begin planning for the 1964 campaign.

There was no discussion of possible contenders to be put up against President Kennedy, either in the formal sessions or very little outside.

George L. Hinman, New York national committeeman, was telling questioners that Rockefeller had made no decision about 1964 and that he felt it was too early for Republicans to be making commitments to potential candidates.

Other party professionals made it plain that they felt Rockefeller to be far in front of potential rivals for the nomination.

The party leadership also includes partisans, who are conspicuous in the South, of Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, hero of the GOP conservative wing. Gov-elect George Romney of Michigan and Gov.-elect William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania, who must face their first legislative sessions, are regarded as still untested possibilities.

Goldwater appears to be handicapped by the same "He can't win" argument that hurt the late Sen. Robert A. Taft in his quests for the Presidential nomination.

At Friday's sessions, GOP Chairman William E. Miller said the GOP "is in a much stronger position" to move into the 1964 campaign despite its disappointments in the state and congressional elections last month.

Miller named Ohio GOP Chairman Ray C. Bliss to head a new state chairmen's advisory committee to work with the national party organization. Bliss also will set up workshop sessions state chairmen.

Adenauer Says He Will Quit Post Next Fall

BONN, Germany (UPI)—West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer let it be known today that he will resign from office next fall and that Economics Minister Ludwig Erhard, who is vice chancellor, probably will succeed him.

The decision, which the 86-year-old Adenauer had long resisted, cleared the way for a speedy solution to West Germany's prolonged government crisis.

The Free Democratic party (FDP) had demanded a retirement decision from Adenauer as a price for their rejoining his Christian Democratic Union party (CDU) in a new coalition.

A CDU spokesman said Adenauer told party leaders Thursday night he would retire from office after parliament returns from next summer's vacation.

The spokesman said this "makes it clear" that Adenauer will retire sometime next September.

The spokesman said Adenauer, who will be 87 on Jan. 5, also consented to the participation of Erhard in "all phases of the formation of the new cabinet."

Budget Committee Returns to Denver

DENVER (UPI) — The State Legislature's Joint Budget Committee was back in Denver today after completing two weeks of on-the-spot hearings at the state's various institutions.

The group received budget requests for the 1963-64 fiscal year Friday from officials of the Fort Logan Mental Health Center and the State Children's Home in Denver.

Dr. Alan Kraft, director of the mental health center, asked the committee for $4.5 million for the next year as compared to this year's budget of $1,797,180. He said most of the increase would go toward opening a new medical-surgical - administration building and doubling the patient load.

Kenneth Joos, head of the children's home, put in a bid for a $53,776 increase in operating funds for the next fiscal year. The total budget request was for $807,756. Joos said the added money would go for extra classrooms and supervisors.

The budget committee will spend next week in Denver before holding budget meetings at the state's larger colleges and universities.

Potholes Predicted By New Invention

VANCOUVER (AP)—A local engineer has devised a method of forecasting potholes in roads using a device costing about $250 which, he says, will save thousands of dollars in road repairs.

D. A. Welsh, design engineer for the district of North Vancouver, uses a 12 - foot aluminum beam, tripod and sensitive deflection scale—the whole known as a Benkelman Beam — to measure how much a road sinks and rises as a heavy truck is driven over it.

He says extensive measurements against traffic conditions show a deflection of between 30-1,000ths and 80-1,000ths of an inch is tolerable for moderate traffic. But a deflection of 95-1,000ths of an inch will lead to a breakup of road under heavy traffic.

The beam will indicate accurately the amount of gravel and asphalt needed to surface a new road for expected traffic volume and the amount of resurfacing needed to secure adequate strength for a poor road, says Welsh.

MORE AUTOMATION

NEW YORK (UPI) — Spokesmen for International Business Machines say scientific inventory management—a computer method of determining when to buy an item and how much to buy—will be employed by a number of grocery chains by 1965 to handle all their warehouse buying automatically.

By 1970, IBM said, computer controlled warehouse buying by grocery chains will be "common place."

SPEEDUP

RACINE, Wis. (UPI)—Automobiles will move over the highways at 80 to 85 miles an hour within 10 years, believes Walter H. Powers of Walker Manufacturing Co., maker of mufflers. He said many new safety devices must be built into cars to meet the new situation.

Integration Suit Given New Life In Richmond, Va.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—A federal appeals court gave new life here to a suit by 42 Negroes to gain entry to all-white public schools in Clarendon County, South Carolina.

The ruling by the three-man appeals court could turn out to be historic. It specified that the 42 cases constitute a "class action." Other Negroes similarly situated may gain strength from the decision.

South Carolina is the only state which hasn't let down public school racial bars in any degree. This despite the fact that Clarendon County produced one of the five cases on which the U.S. Supreme Court based its 1954 school integration ruling.

Specifically, the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that U.S. Dist. Court Judge C. C. Wyche of South Carolina's Western District was wrong in saying the 42 Clarendon County cases did not constitute a class action.

Judge Wyche, in his ruling now reversed, had ordered all names stricken from the case except that of Bobby Brunson. Had this ruling held, the entire case would have been meaningless because young Brunson already has graduated from his Negro school. Thus he has no basis for legal action.

In fact, about half the original 42 complainants no longer stand to benefit from the appeals court's direction that Judge Wyche take "further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion." They have graduated, moved out of the county, or otherwise taken themselves out of the picture.

The appellate judges who took part in the case were Morris A. Soper, Clement F. Haynsworth Jr., and J. Spencer Bell.

Clarendon County, in the picturesque "Low Country" near the Atlantic seaboard, is largely Negro. In 1959 the county had 2,572 white students and 6,569 Negro students.

Hoffa Claims He Is Apprehensive Over Attacks

By DUREN CHEEK

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Five-foot-five-inch Jimmy Hoffa is a giant in a union of muscular six-foot truck drivers.

Now the rugged, rough-and-ready Hoffa says he is "apprehensive."

A Washington, D.C. laborer shot Hoffa with a pellet pistol in federal court Wednesday but the two pellets that struck him did not harm him physically.

In a sworn affidavit attached to a motion for a mistrial filed Friday by Hoffa's attorneys, the Teamsters' chief said that he is "apprehensive of his own safety if this case should proceed further at this time."

The jury was not present when the assailant walked up to Hoffa during the proceedings and began firing with the air pistol.

Hoffa knocked the man down and appeared to regain his composure right away. He said shortly after the incident, "let's get on with the trial."

The attack, the motion said, has caused such "shock, stress and strain" on him to communicate fairly and fully with his counsel during the balance of this trial, and upon his capability of testifying fully and freely in his own defense."

Says Witnesses Are Nervous

Hoffa said in his affidavit the witnesses he had planned to call in his behalf are "nervous and apprehensive, and therefore the defendant believes they would not testify freely and fully in this case."

Hoffa is charged with violating the Taft-Hartley law by allegedly accepting protection payoffs from Commercial Carriers, Inc., a nationwide automobile transport firm. He has pleaded innocent to the charges.

When the motion was filed court was not in session. After a mysterious three-hour session behind closed doors in which the government presented a motion in the absence of newsmen and spectators, federal Judge William E. Miller adjourned court Thursday.

SECURITY NEEDS STRENGTH

Howard Willis Addison, 31, a one-legged inmate serving a six-month to 10-year sentence for bad checks, escaped Friday when he was taken to an artificial limb specialist where he was to be fitted.

Mother of 12 Is Charged With Money Theft

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (UPI) — A mother of 12 was held today on charges of taking as much as $15,000 from the clothes closet of two feeble sisters in her care.

Mrs. Bertha Iona Ford, 44, a practical nurse, was charged with grand larceny. Police said the sisters, both retired school teachers, were visibly shocked when told Mrs. Ford admitted the theft.

Miss Nettie Moorhead, 88, and her sister, Laura, 86, told police they were quite fond of Mrs. Ford.

Mrs. Ford took between $12,000 and $15,000, police said.

Detectives found an additional $28,000 in the hiding place and took it to a bank for safekeeping.

Mrs. Ford's husband also was charged with grand larceny, although Mrs. Ford insisted he knew nothing about the theft.

Detectives said they had recovered $5,305 of the cash in addition to merchandise they said was purchased with the loot.

Detectives said the Fords had purchased six cars, trading some of them in and giving others to their children. They said they have been able to find only one of the cars so far.

They also said the Fords had been working recently on a number of business deals, including negotiation over possible purchase of a tavern.

Pro-Mexico Stand Urged on Water Salinity Problem

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—California State Sen.-Elect Thomas Rees said here he will recommend that the California Legislature take a strong pro-Mexico stand in the Colorado River salinity dispute.

Mexico contends that Arizona farmers in the Welton-Mohawk irrigation district near Yuma are "leaching" the soil, pushing up the salt content in river waters allocated by treaty to Mexico. The salinity threatens Mexicali Valley cotton and wheat crops, Mexico claims.

Mexico has formally protested to the United States, and a joint commission, named by presidents of each nation, is drafting a report after months of scientific investigation in the area.

Veteran Arizona Senator Carl Hayden has cautioned the White House not to rush into an agreement in the interest of Mexican-American relations which could jeopardize traditional lower basin states' water rights.

Rees, a member of Gov. Edmund Brown's seven-man California-Mexico good neighbor commission, said "Mexicans have a very legitimate gripe .... there should be some guarantee of water purity. I'm going to suggest that California take a far stronger position favoring Mexico."

Son Helps Mother in Delivery of Baby

HAMBURG, N. Y. (UPI)—Kurt Knapp, 14, listened intently to the doctor's voice on the phone late Friday night, nodded his head and then calmly carried out his instructions.

Before an ambulance could arrive, Kurt had set about lightly spanking breath into his 7-pound baby brother.

Mrs. Marie L. Knapp, 38, knew the baby was coming and had telephoned her sister to come over as quickly as possible from the nearby town of Eden.

Kurt, a Boy Scout, called the family physician and received his instructions and then followed them to the letter.

Our Lady of Victory Hospital, where Mrs. Knapp and her newborn child were taken, said both mother and infant were "doing fine."

Dulles Airport Is Reported to Be Big Hit

By VERN HAUGHLAND

WASHINGTON (AP)—Washington's New Dulles International Airport is making a big hit with just about everyone who sees it or uses it.

The Federal Aviation Agency operator of the $110-million airport, says public enthusiasm over the terminal building and the mobile lounges that shuttle to and from the jet airplanes is even greater than had been anticipated.

Striking enough by day, its Eero Saarinen-designed terminal is even more beautiful at night. Lights inside its vast glass-walled concourse, the luminous cascading effect of the outer lower walls and the dramatic spotlighting of a pagoda-like control tower that appears to rest on a pillar of flame—give the whole a dream-like appearance.

William E. Cullinan, airport manager, said the practical-minded regular traveler appears most pleased with the new mobile lounge technique that does away with carrying suitcases down long corridors.

The passenger arriving at Dulles by limousine walks from the entrance to the ticket counter, and then to the waiting lounge, all on the same level. The total walking distance is no more than 150 fet.

The lounge in effect is a comfortable waiting room on wheels, exclusively for the use of passengers on that particular flight. The time that the lounge draws away from the terminal building, to go to the airplane, is the official departure time for the flight.

The 90-passenger lounges load at either end, so that like ferry boats they go forward and back without turning around. The trip from terminal to waiting jet plane takes about five minutes.

Invalids and other handicapped persons have found the system a blessing because there are no stairs involved. The airport's specially built wheel chairs can maneuver into and through the lounges and the airplanes they meet.

Dulles Airport was named for globe-trotting John Foster Dulles, secretary of state during the Eisenhower administration. Dulles died in 1959.

At the dedication ceremony Eisenhower said it was fitting to honor a man "who had spent most of his life serving his country in the cause of national security and world peace."

Dulles has parallel north-south runways 11,500 fet long and 150 feet wide, 6,700 feet apart. A third runway 10,000 feet long extends on a west northwest-east southeast line, and there is provision for a fourth runway parallel to it when traffic requires it.

Eastern, Braniff, Delta, Northwest, American and Trans World Airlines use the airport in most caeses for jet flights that formerly served Washington through Baltimore's Friendship Airport.

Pan American is expected Jan. 1, United Jan. 13, and National and British Overseas Airways Corp. later.

Planners expect the airport to handle 4 million domestic passengers and 156,000 international passengers by 1965, and 8.7 million domestic and 464,000 international passengers by 1975.

SIGN TRAINING CONTRACT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The University of New Mexico has signed a $1.5 million contract to train Peace Corps volunteers.

R. Sargent Shriver, Peace Corps director, said Friday the university was chosen for the year-long program "partly because it offers an exceptional faculty with a Latin American studies department and language training program."

About 900 volunteers will be trained primarily to work in community development programs in Central and South America. The first group of 65 starts a 12-week course Feb. 9.

Television Rating System Blasted By UPI Critic

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — There is a fellow in Columbia, Tenn., who is angry. His name is Harry Pearson, and he is, in his own words, "the TV critic, among other things," of the Daily Herald in Columbia, and what he is angry about is television's ratings system.

Well, of course a lot of people are angry about the ratings. And I don't intend to bore you with a rehash of my personal feelings about the cancellation of the "It's a Man's World" series. But Mr. Pearson, in a letter to this viewer, puts the human side of the ratings madness about as well as you will hear it. So herewith Mr. Pearson:

"Well, the city editor and I were discussing this cancellation business and he said he just didn't think he'd bother about going out and buying another TV in light of this his blew up and then asked me that old, but true, question, 'Have you ever been asked what you watch?'

"Lo and behold: I've lived in Charlotte, N.C., attended Duke University, lived in Winston-Salem, N.C., Columbia, S. C., and Nashville, Tenn., and worked in newspapering and moved in broad and widely variegated social circles. In addition, I have friends spread high and wide through the United States, but never have I known a solitary soul who was asked what television program he or she watches . . .

"But despite curves, skews, and medians and all the statistical concepts the raters promulgate, it doesn't seem to me as if the raters take a truly random sampling. How do 'they' know what we watch here in Columbia? Or for that matter in Nashville, Charlotte, Winston-Salem, or other such unimportant locations . . .

"As for the rating argument, I ask you: How come there are so many letters as well as critical acclaim if nobody watches the program if the ratings were accurate, which I doubt, what they indicate about the state of the American public is no compliment."

"I am angry," added Mr. Pearson.

Along these lines, it is interesting to consider some words by Yale Roe, a veteran network sales executive, in his new book, "The Television Dilemma," which I urge you to buy if you want first-hand perspective of the inner workings of the video medium by a solid, thoughtful source:

"The public must forsake the double standard of watching one thing and demanding something else . . . It is only through the public's active use of its power of acceptance or rejection that its manifold wills will can be expressed. Failing this expression of its free will, the only alternative is the will of those seeking to interpret the public will."

This is a vital, unquestionable point. The problem is: How much of "the public" must watch to be considered "the public?" Five or 10 million people may not be enough; and what happens to their shows even if they watch and are outnumbered? And of course, what if the method of measuring who is watching si flimsy in the first place?

Political Science Prof Becomes State Senator

He is Robert W. McCulloch of Western State College, Gunnison, a Democrat.

McCulloch was named Friday by a Democratic vacancy committee to succeed Sen. James W. Mowbray of Delta, who resigned citing press of private business.

The State Constitution requires that an appointment made to the legislature to fill a vacancy be made from the party of the man elected to the post. As a result, the lineup of 20 Republicans and 15 Democrats in the new Senate will remain unchanged.

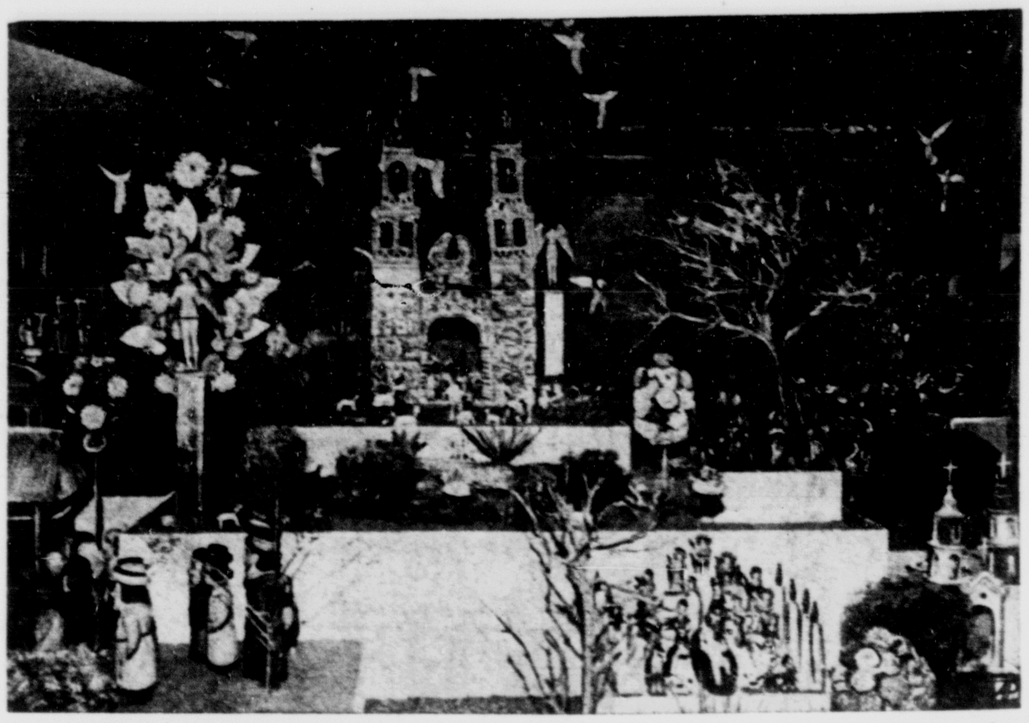
Serving on the vacancy committee were Marsh Seraphine of Gunnison, Robert Wheeler of Lake City and Charles Bruce of Hotchkiss. Seraphine, the chairman, said McCulloch's selection was unanimous. The committee met in Denver.

Immediately after his selection, McCulloch was sworn in by Gov. Steve McNichols. McCulloch's term will expire Jan. 6, 1965.

BOY FOUND

PUEBLO (UPI)— A 14-year-old boy who have been reported missing from the Colorado State Hospital's Children's Center since Tuesday was found here Friday hiding in a basement of the center. Hospital officials said they had not determined whether Kenton Clark, 14, who had been committed after allegedly shooting his brother to death, had left the center and returned voluntarily, or had been hiding all the time.

Highest mountain in the Appalachian system is Mt. Mitchell, in North Carolina.



FROM MEXICO—A church scene highlights one section of the central area in "The Nativity" display at the Nelson Gallery of Art in Kansas City. The scene is made up of painted pottery from Mexico. The gallery currently is showing more than 2,000 pieces of religious folk art from 20 nations, the collection of New Mexico architect Alexander Girard.

FROM ITALY—Painted pottery from Italy make up this manger scene. Alexander Girard, collector of religious folk art, believes Nativity images made by craftsmen of many lands show the spiritual closeness of all mankind.

Craftsmen of 20 Nations Tell Story of Christmas

By HUGH J. WYLIE

KANSAS CITY AP — Alexander Girard decided imagery could best convey the story of Christmas to all peoples.

So the 55-year-old Santa Fe, N.M., architect and designer put together a fabulous display of religious folk art from 20 nations. His collection of more than 2,000 pieces is now on exhibit in the Nelson Gallery of Art in Kansas City.

"The image is the most direct means of communication," Girard said. "And these simple decorations of joy and faith by craftsmen of many lands, while varying greatly, tell a similar story of Christmas — a story of the spiritual closeness of all mankind."

Girard collected much of the folk art during the past two years, although some of it came into his possession as long as three decades ago.

The exhibit, entitled "The Nativity," consists mainly of simple pieces carved or molded by unpretentious workmen. There are 170 separate nativity scenes. They were made of many things — pottery, wood, cloth, wax, paper, nuts, stone, straw and even bread.

Girard constructed distinctive settings for his display. The 170 scenes are in an adobe - like structure on the main floor of the gallery. In the center is a tiered sand garden containing hundreds of the figures. Around the walls are recessed show windows of varying size containing numerous other Nativity scenes.

To call it colorful would be tritely to belittle Girard's ability. To enhance the simple beauty of the delicate folk figures, he used lighting, color and superb stagings. Acoustics also had to be considered since special musical effects are used to help set the mood for the Bethlehem - like area.

Odd problems, also cropped up. A group of wax figures, for example, needed adequate lighting but "heat would have turned them into a gooey mess," said Girard. So a 300 - watt bulb was placed several feet below the scene in such a way that it properly reflected light but put no heat on the exhibit. A unit made of bread and covered with icing had to be chemically teated to provide lasting qualities.

Joyce C. Hall, Kansas City businessman who is president of Hallmark Cards, sponsored the display. It is a benefit for the People-to-People program which emphasizes world peace is obtainable through understanding among nations. Hall is charman of the executive committe of the People-to-People program.

Girard long has been a collector, not only of folk art but of countless other items he considers unique or artistic. He began in childhood and now has an 80 - foot storehouse near his Santa Fe home to stash the many items he has picked up through the years.

"I guess I inherited the tendency," he mused. "My father did some collecting, too. And my grandfather was virtually a pack rat."

Eighth Unsolved Slaying Reported By Boston Police

BOSTON (AP)—Police in suburban Winthrop are confronted today with what appears to be the eighth unsolved slaying of Greater Boston women in six months.

The latest victim is Margaret Cadigan, 17, runnerup in a 1962 Boston archdiocesan competition for queen of the Catholic Youth Organization.

The body of the pretty drum majorette and drill team captain was fully clothed, but her dress was up to her waist.

Her head was immersed in a pressure cooker half-filled with water. A pajama bottom was around her neck and there was a cut on the left side of her neck. A blood-stained 12-inch knife was near the body.

Lt. Perrone said the girl could have died from any one of three means: strangulation, drowning or from the throat slash. A medical examiner was expected to give an official verdict of the death at a later time.

Like the other seven women victims, Miss Cadigan was alone at home at the time of her death.

Most of the earlier victims were linked in some way with hospitals. Two were nurses, one a physiotherapist and others had been patients shortly before their deaths.

Police fear a madman is on the loose, picking women as his victims and strangulation as his means of killing.

Police said Miss Cadigan was home alone for about 20 minutes Friday night. Death came in that period.

The most recent victim, until Miss Cadigan's death, was Sophie Clark, 19, of Englewood, N.J., who was studying medical and hospital technology in Boston.

There were six strangle slayings from June through August.

GOURMETS IN SUBURBIA

NEW YORK (UPI)—The average New York City dweller eats more but not as well as the suburban family, according to Kenneth J. Pezrow, leading food broker serving the New York metropolitan area.

New York's 16.5 million metropolitan residents spend an average $341 each year, compared with $332 for each suburbanite.

NATO Will Be Urged by U.S. to Expand Strength

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will prod its North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies anew next week to expand substantially their non-nuclear military strength in Europe.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara are prepared to argue that greater conventional military strength deployed against Soviet power could in some future crisis save the world from nuclear war.

That is the lesson of the U.S.-Soviet crisis over Cuba, as interpreted here, which the Kennedy administration intends to present to the 15-nation NATO council in Paris next Thursday through Saturday.

Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon, the other Cabinet-level American delegate, will deal with economic and financial issues before the alliance, including problems of defense costs.

Rusk and McNamara are expected also to make these other points to Allied leaders:

1. In the wake of the Red Chinese assault, India's need for military supplies is very great and the United States does not intend to do the job alone, even if it could. All Allied nations need to do what they can for a free nation under Red military threat. India's weapon suppliers so far are the United States, Britain, Australia and Canada.

2. U.S. hopes for improvements in Soviet-American relations have not been justified so far by any positive steps by the Soviet government outside the Cuba controversy.

There is no sign of Soviet intention to offer any real concessions in West Berlin — although since Cuba, Premier Khrushchev has avoided warnings about a swift showdown. Similarly, the Russians give no indication of willingness to compromise on disarmament.

3. The United States is prepared to play along with the Soviet Union's present conciliatory line in the aftermath of the Cuban crisis, partly in the belief that Khrushchev still is trying to figure out what to do next.

Also, Washington does not want to initiate demands on Russia which might tend to force the Soviet Union and Red China to overcome their deep and bitter differences.

4. The U.S.-Soviet dispute over Cuba, instead of being wrapped up in a tidy final agreement filed with the United Nations, is likely to drag on for weeks or months. In the absence of inspection in Cuba the United States will have to continue overflights by photographic planes. Furthermore, the Cuban situation will continue to be abnormal so long as there is any Soviet military presence left there.

The NATO council has two major strategic-political problems coming up at this session, neither new and both sources of irritation in U.S.-Western European relations for several years.

One of the two great basic issues is whether there should be a NATO nuclear force in Europe under some kind of European control.

Informants said Rusk and McNamara plan to take the position that the United States is satisfied with the present system of U.S. control of its own nuclear striking force as the ultimate shield for defense of the West. But the United States is ready now, as it has been since the late years of the Eisenhower administration to consider any proposal the European governments wish to make for creating a NATO-European nuclear force.

In the Kennedy administration's judgment, a far more serious problem is that of the expansion of allied conventional forces in Western Europe. The goal for years has been 30 divisions but the European allies are still half a dozen divisions short of the target and some of the forces are inadequately equipped or are under strength.

Red Influence Probed In Peace Groups

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Committee on Un-American Activities will hold hearings next week aimed at determining whether the Communist party is influencing groups organized to seek world peace.

The hearings will begin Tuesday and last three days.

Chairman Francis E. Walter, D-Pa., announcing the hearings, said they will deal specifically with a group known as Women Strike for Peace.

"It is with reluctance that the committee deemed it necessary to conduct hearings which touch upon alleged peace activities in this country," Walter said. "Unfortunately, the Communist conspiracy, through treachery and deceit, has established a long record of converting man's greatest dreams into tools for bringing about man's most tragic losses of dignity and freedom."

Pueblo Boy's Rifle Slaying Termed Accident

PUEBLO (UPI) — Police here ruled as an accident the rifle slaying of a 10-year-old boy by the young son of Pueblo City Councilman Cy J. Burress Jr.

Authorities said Burress' 12-year-old son accidentally shot and killed his friend, Robert Don Stewart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald D. Stewart, Friday night as the two boys were examining an old 22-caliber rifle.

Detectives said Robert, young C. J. Burress III, and Robert's 13-year-old brother Randal, were playing in the basement of the Stewart home when they came across the weapon which they thought was empty.

Young Burress picked up the rifle to examine it and it discharged. A bullet struck Robert in the left forearm, pierced his left chest and emerged at the right side. The boy died less than an hour after the shooting at Parkview Episcopal Hospital.

The elder Burress, a state civil service commissioner, was a former president of the Pueblo City Council. The victim's father, Donald Stewart, is an engineer for the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co.

Rusk to Leave For Strategy Talks in Paris

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk leaves Monday for Paris and a week of post-Cuban strategy talks with Allied leaders which will take into account the growing dissension in the Communist camp.

The trip also will give Rusk an opportunity to try to soothe British feelings, ruffled by recent remarks by former Secretary of State Dean Acheson downgrading that country's future role in world affairs.

Rusk will spend the early part of the week meeting with French, British and West German foreign ministers and then head the American delegation to the NATO Council session which begins Thursday and continues through Friday.

He is expected to meet with French President Charles de Gaulle at some point, although no official announcement has been made as yet.

At the NATO meeting, Rusk, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and other U.S. officials will push for further strengthening of the conventional forces of the alliance as a prelude to possible creation of a European nuclear force.

At present, the NATO nuclear deterrent is under the sole control of the United States, but Washington has said it is willing to consider any proposals for multilateral striking power if the Europeans can come up with workable ideas they can afford to pay for.

President Kennedy is known to feel the British misunderstood Acheson's remarks and Rusk will have instructions to make clear that the present administration has no intention of altering the special relationship between London and Washington.

The uproar over the Acheson speech began in the British press reaction to his statement that "Great Britain has lost an empire and has not yet found a role." Acheson said Britain's attempts to play a separate power role based on "a 'special relationship' with the United States, a role based on being the head of a 'commonwealth' which has no political structure, or unity, or strength . . . This role is about played out."

Solon Declares Ellender Hurt Image of U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Barratt O'Hara, D-Ill., chairman of the House subcommittee on Africa—after being urged by the State Department—said here Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., "has hurt us very much" by remarks attributed to him in Africa.

O'Hara told reporters at a hastily called news conference, that Ellender was in no way speaking on behalf of Congress.

Furthermore, O'Hara said, Ellender was very likely playing politics and speaking for the benefit of Louisiana constituents.

O'Hara said State Department representatives urged him to issue a statement countering those attributed to Ellender, who is visiting African nations as a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Ellender was reported to have said in Southern Rhodesia that he had yet to see any part of Africa that was ready for self-government; that the average African is incapable of leadership without white assistance, and that the policy of apartheid in South Africa was too late, but on the right road.

The South African Press Association said a tape recording confirmed that Ellender made remarks attributed to him.

Turkey Will Not Be on Christmas Menu, Either

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—Mrs. Mitch, the Jackson, Mich., turkey too lovable for anyone's Thanksgiving table, now has a guarantee it won't be on anyone's Christmas menu, either.

It now has a new home on the 15-acre farm near Ann Arbor of Thomas Payne, a sportscar race driver and auto dealer who promises Mrs. Mitch will be "strictly a pet" for his children.

The change of address means Mrs. Mitch will give up a career as an aide to Mrs. Robert Henry in teaching biology to elementary school children of Jackson.

Hatched in an incubator in Mrs. Henry's classroom, Mrs. Mitch quickly outgrew the school's facilities and Mr. and Mrs. Allyn Kehrer "adopted" the bird, keeping it in the back yard of their home.

Payne wrote asking the Kehrers for Mrs. Mitch, after reading an Associated Press story, and the Kehrers agreed.

"Mrs. Mitch will have plenty of company," says Payne. Other occupants on the farm are a donkey, two horses, two dogs, a cat, two bantam hens and a cageful of pigeons.

First illustration of a wooden Indian was published in an English book in 1617.
